Scope of Article. — The following article deals with the subject of motions in a general way, the treatment being confined to a discussion of the scope and nature of the remedy and the principles of procedure controlling its application in general. Throughout the work, under appropriate heads, motions for particular kinds of relief are treated in detail.¹

I. DEFINITION AND NATURE. — A motion may be defined as an application to the court by one of the parties in a cause or his counsel in order to obtain some rule or order of court which he thinks becomes necessary in the progress of the cause, or to get relieved in a summary manner from some matter which would work injustice.² It is not an original and independent proceeding but is collateral to some pending or proposed action or special proceeding,³ and must be relevant to the main litigation.⁴ The relief which it seeks is some order of court⁵ falling short of the dignity of a judgment.⁶ In the notes are collected a number of cases to illustrate proceedings which have been considered motions,⁷ as well as those which have not been so considered.⁸

II. SCOPE OF REMEDY. — A. IN GENERAL. — The scope of the remedy by motion depends largely upon the statutes and the practice acts of the jurisdiction, and the particular motion resorted to must be recognized by them.⁹ In general a motion is a proper method of raising a question of regularity in the proceedings in a cause,¹⁰ but not of deciding questions relating to the merits¹¹ and depending upon disputed facts.¹² A pleading may be challenged by motion for errors

[a] Ex parte motions are those heard on the application of one party only without notice to the other party or parties. Murphy v. Herring-Hall-Marvin Safe Co., 184 Fed. 495; Edwards v. Shreve, 83 App. Div. 165, 82 N. Y. Supp. 514; Hull v. Hart, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 21.

[b] Stay Pending Appeal.—A motion for a stay of proceedings pending appeal is an ex parte one. Hull v. Hart, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 21.

22. See infra, this note.

A motion on notice is one that requires notice to the other party. 2 Bouvier's Dict. 2265.

[a] Litigated motions are such as can be heard only on notice. Sturz v. Fischer, 15 Misc. 410, 36 N. Y. Supp. 893, 25 Civ. Proc. 202, 72 N. Y. St. 252, 2 N. Y. Ann. Cas. 365.

23. Doddridge v. Gaines, 1 MacArthur (D. C.) 335.

[a] Enumerated motions are motions arising on special verdict, issues of law, cases, exceptions, appeals from judgments sustaining or overruling demurrers, appeals from judgment or order granting or refusing a new trial in an inferior court, appeals by virtue of §§1346 and 1349 of the Code, agreed cases submitted under §1279 of the Code and appeals from final orders and decrees of surrogates' courts, and matters provided for by §§2085-2099 and §2138 of the code. Rule 38.

[b] Motions involving the merits of the suit or proceedings are enumerated motions. Doddridge v. Gaines, 1 MacArthur (D. C.) 335.

[c] Enumerated Motions Illustrated. (1) A motion to overrule exceptions and for final judgment. Rogers v. Pearsall, 21 App. Div. 389, 47 N. Y. Supp. 551. (2) Report of referees,—motion to set aside (Everitt v. Wood, 7 Cow. [N. Y.] 414), (3) or confirm such report and give judgment thereon. Rogers v. Pearsall, 21 App. Div. 389, 47 N. Y. Supp. 551; Anonymous, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 470.

24. People ex rel. Mayor of New York v. Nichols, 79 N. Y. 582.

[a] Non-enumerated motions include all other questions (than those submitted on enumerated motions) submitted to the court, and shall be heard at special term except when otherwise directed by law. Rule 38 New York Practice; People ex rel. Mayor of New York v. Nichols, 79 N. Y. 582; McLean v. Tompkins, 18 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 24.

[b] Non-enumerated Motions Illustrated.—(1) Motion for judgment upon the return to a writ of certiorari. People ex rel. Mayor of New York v. Nichols, 79 N. Y. 582. (2) Application to set aside a verdict for irregularity in

IV. PLACE OF MOVING.—A. GENERALLY.—The statutes and rules of practice generally require a motion to be made in the court where the cause is pending,²⁵ even though the court has ordered the papers in the cause transmitted to another county.²⁶ Ordinarily motions are made in open court but certain motions may be made in chambers,²⁷ or even outside of court.²⁸

B. NEW YORK PRACTICE.—1. Motions in the Supreme Court. A motion, upon notice, in an action in the supreme court, must be made within the judicial district in which the action is triable,²⁹ or a jury. Smith v. Cheetham, 2 Caines (N. Y.) 381, Colem. & C. Cas. 425. (3) Trial by record is a non-enumerated motion. McKenzie v. Wilson, 2 Caines (N. Y.) 385, Colem. & C. Cas. 428.

25. Edwards v. Shreve, 83 App. Div. 165, 82 N. Y. Supp. 514; Parmenter v. Roth, 9 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 385; Ross v. Ross, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 314; Thomas v. Raymond, 4 S. C. 347.

Motion to dissolve injunction, see 13 STANDARD PROC. 246.

Intervention.—Motion for permission to intervene, see 14 STANDARD PROC. 317.

26. Parker v. Superior Court (R. I.), 100 Atl. 305.

[a] Where the cause is not transferred, but the court orders the papers to be sent to another court, motions in the case should be filed in the county where the action is brought, even though the court has power to hear such motions in the county to which the papers are sent. Parker v. Superior Court (R. I.), 100 Atl. 305.

28. Murphy v. Herring-Hall-Marvin Safe Co., 184 Fed. 495.

[a] In Corridor of Court House. Application for an ex parte order, which the judge could make in chambers, may be made to him any place in his district; consequently such application is properly made to him while he is leaving the court house. Murphy v. Herring-Hall-Marvin Safe Co., 184 Fed. 495.

29. Wheeler v. Millar, 61 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 396; Hotchkiss v. Crocker, 15 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 336; Gould v. Chapin, 4 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 185, 2 Code Rep. 107; Hull v. Hart, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 21.

[a] Motions made on notice only are within the section of the statute prescribing the rule stated in the text. Hull v. Hart, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 21.

[b] Pending Action.—(1) The rule refers to motions in an action while it is pending, or such as relate in some way to its pendency or procedure (Phillips v. Wheeler, 67 N. Y. 104; Curtis v. Greene, 28 Hun [N. Y.] 294), (2) and not to such as may be made in proceedings instituted after the recovery and entry of final judgment therein. Curtis v. Greene, 28 Hun (N. Y.) 294.

[c] Application for an order of supersedeas is not within the section. It may be made to a judge of a district in which the action is not triable. Wells v. Jones, 2 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 20.

[d] Motions to appoint receivers are not within the rule. Such motions must be made in the district in which the principal business office of the corporation was located at the commencement of the action, or in an adjoining county. United States Trust Co. v. New York, W. S. & B. Ry. Co., 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 390, 6 Civ. Proc. 90.

[e] A motion to consolidate two suits may be made anywhere in the district containing the county in which the venue of either of the suits to be consolidated is laid. Percy v. Seward, 6 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 326.

[f] A motion made (1) outside the territorial limits prescribed is coram non iudice (Newcomb v. Reed, 14 How. Pr. [N. Y.] 100), (2) although it has been considered a mere irregularity. Blackmar v. Van Inwagen, 5 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 367, 1 Code Rep. (N. S.) 80.

[g] The district in which the venue is laid is the one in which the action is triable within the meaning of the statute. Gould v. Chapin, 4 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 185, 2 Code Rep. 107.

[h] Several Actions.—The rule does not apply to a case where one motion is necessarily made and entitled in several actions pending in different in a county adjoining the county in which it is triable,³⁰ except that when it is triable in the first judicial district the motion must be made in that district,³¹ and no motion can be made in the first district in an action triable in another district.³²

By agreement of counsel, moreover, the motion may be heard and decided at any special term in any county in the state.³³

Ex Parte Motions. — Where the order may be made out of court and without notice, the application therefor may be made to any judge of the court in any part of the state.³⁴

2. Motions in County Court. — In an action or special proceeding in the county court, a justice of the supreme court may entertain an ex parte motion in a case where the county judge in whose court the counties and judicial districts. Phillips v. Wheeler, 2 Hun (N. Y.) 603, 6 Thomp. & C. 306.

[i] Where a divorce is awarded in B county, an application to modify it cannot be maintained in D county which is not in the same judicial district nor adjoining B county. In re Haworth, 59 App. Div. 393, 69 N. Y. Supp. 843.

30. Rice v. Ehle, 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 185; Inglehart v. Johnsons, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 80, 1 Code Rep. (N. S.) 216.

St. 471; Phoenix Foundry & Mach. Co. v. North River Construction Co., 33 Hun (N. Y.) 156, 6 Civ. Proc. 106; National Bank v. Goodwin, 6 Hun (N. Y.) 481; Smith v. Danzig, 64 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 320, 3 Civ. Proc. 137.

[a] Motions to amend the record are within the rule. Thompson v. Thompson, 52 Hun 117, 4 N. Y. Supp. 842, 16 Civ. Proc. 317, 22 N. Y. St. 471.

[b] Motion To Vacate Injunction. Phoenix Foundry & Mach. Co. v. North River Construction Co., 33 Hun (N. Y.) 156, 6 Civ. Proc. 106.

[c] Renewal of Motion.—A motion upon notice denied in the first district cannot be renewed at a special term held by the same judge in another district. Moser & Heidenheimer Malt-ing Co. v. Lawrence, 60 Hun 137, 14 N. Y. Supp. 540, 38 N. Y. St. 858.

[d] Stay of Action.—Where two actions are brought by the same plaintiff against the same defendant in New York county, application for an order staying proceedings in one action until the other is determined cannot be made in another county. Delahunty v. Canfield, 106 App. Div. 386, 94 N. Y. Supp. 815.

32. The Canal Bank v. Harris, 1 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 192, 19 Barb. 587; Wheeler v. Maitland, 12 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 35; Harris v. Clark, 10 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 415.

[a] That reference to a referee in the first district has been made of an action triable in another district does not permit a motion in that action to be made in the first district. Wheeler v. Maitland, 12 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 35.

[b] Injunction.—An application for an injunction order can be entertained by a judge in an action pending in one judicial district to restrain the proceedings involving the same subject-matter between the same parties pending in another judicial district. Platt v. Woodruff, 61 N. Y. 378.

33. Rice v. Ehle, 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 185.

34. Bank of Silver Creek v. Brown-ing, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 272; Hull v. Hart, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 21. See Chubbuck v. Morrison, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 367.

[a] Examination of Witness Before Trial.—An application for an order requiring the adverse party to appear before the officer and attend the examination of a witness is within the rule. Bank of Silver Creek v. Brown-ing, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 272.

[b] Motion for an order staying proceedings pending appeal, in an action brought in the first judicial district covered by the rule. Hull v. Hart, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 21.

action is pending could entertain such a motion out of court.³⁵

3. Court or Judge. — Whether a motion shall be made to the court or to a judge depends on the wording of the statutes,³⁶ and when these require a motion to be made to the court, it cannot be made to a judge out of court.³⁷

In Court. — Special motions made on notice to the opposite party, or on order to show cause can, unless the statute expressly provides otherwise, only be made to the court.³⁸

Out of Court. — Ex parte motions are ordinarily made out of court.³⁹ When the defendants have made default in appearing in the proceeding, a motion made therein may be made to a judge out of court.⁴⁰ But in the first judicial district, all motions, except those for a new trial on the merits⁴¹ may be made to a judge out of court.⁴²

4. Order To Show Cause. — The statute provides what judge shall make an order to show cause as a short notice of motion,⁴³ and such order is irregular if made by any other judge than those named.⁴⁴ The objection, however, must be raised or it is waived.⁴⁵

V. TIME TO MAKE MOTION. — The time for moving is provided by statute⁴⁶ or rule of the court,⁴⁷ and depends largely upon the nature and character of the motion.⁴⁸ The court may usually for good cause,⁴⁹ or even in the absence of good cause,⁵⁰ extend the time for moving.

Motions Based on Irregularities.—Motions constituting dilatory objections and those seeking relief from judgments or orders because of irregularities should be made promptly,⁵¹ or at the earliest opportunity,⁵² or within a reasonable time from the rendition or making of such judgment or order,⁵³ and it is sometimes further provided that such reasonable time cannot extend beyond a certain period.⁵⁴

[a] Six Months.—Motions to be relieved from a judgment or order must be made within a reasonable time not exceeding six months. Brownell v.

Motions affecting the substantial rights of the parties do not come within the foregoing rules requiring promptness and expedition on the part of the mover.⁵⁵

An excuse for delay in making a motion may save the right to move,⁵⁶ but unexcused laches will preclude the granting of the motion.⁵⁷

Motions in Vacation. — Application for certain orders may be made to a judge in vacation.⁵⁸

VI. PARTIES.⁵⁹ — THE MOVANT. — Motions should ordinarily be made by parties to the suit or action,⁶⁰ and not by strangers,⁶¹

Superior Court, 157 Cal. 703, 109 Pac. 91.

[b] Merely serving notice on the adverse party and filing it with the clerk within the time limit is not sufficient. It is in no sense an application to the court but merely a notice that at a future time, beyond the six months allowed such application would be made. Thomas v. Superior Court, 6 Cal. App. 629, 92 Pac. 739.

[c] Notice within that period to the adversary is not necessary. If the application to the court is made within the time limit it is immaterial that notice is not given till after such time limit has expired. Brownell v. Superior Court, 157 Cal. 703, 109 Pac. 91.

Against Whom. — A motion can be made against any party to the cause. As against a stranger who appears and opposes a motion, it seems, the order would be binding.⁶³

VII. JOINDER OF MOTIONS. — A party may, in a proper case, combine several motions in one and ask to have various defects remedied on a single application.⁶⁴

VIII. FORM AND SUFFICIENCY.⁶⁵ — A. FORM OF MOTION.

1. Written or Oral. — Particular motions may be required by statute or rule of court to be in writing,⁶⁶ and sometimes a written statement of the reasons for the motion is required.⁶⁷ Under this latter provision

[a] Special motions are by rule of court required to be in writing. United States Express Co. v. Bedbury, 40 Ill. 122.

[b] “Any written words which convey the idea that the supposed right is insisted upon are enough.” Arnold v. Reagan, 29 R. I. 71, 69 Atl. 292.

[c] Matters Outside Record.—Where the powers of the court are invoked touching matters that lie outside the record a written motion is required. Livingston v. King, 2 Ga. App. 178, 58 S. E. 395.

[d] Embodied in Other Papers. Even though required to be in writing the motion need not be a separate and formal statement but may be embodied in other papers filed in the case. Thus a motion to dismiss a writ of error for insufficient notice may be contained in a brief which sets forth all the essential elements of such a motion. Smith v. Moseley, 234 Mo. 486, 137 S. W. 971.

[e] In practice the form of the application is often reduced to writing, though not required to be done. People v. Ah Sam, 41 Cal. 645.

[f] In distinct courts, under the law requiring the docketing of motions, they must be in writing. Houston v. Jones, 4 Tex. 170.

[g] The entry of the motion upon the records of the court is sufficient, though the general rule requires motions to be in writing. Hartman v. Viera, 113 Ill. App. 216.

67. Smith v. Moseley, 234 Mo. 486, 137 S. W. 971; Meeks v. Clear Jack Mining Co., 141 Mo. App. 648, 124 S. W. 1084; Jenkins v. Warren, 25 App. Div. 569, 50 N. Y. Supp. 957.

[a] Reason for Rule.—“We do not understand that motions can be granted merely for reasons orally stated by a party must put his motion in writing when the court requests him to do so.⁶⁸ In the absence of any statute or rule of court making a writing necessary the motion may be made orally.⁶⁹

2. Entitling and Address.—Motion papers should be properly entitled as to the cause⁷⁰ and the court,⁷¹ including the names of the par-counsel. The opposing party is entitled to be served with the papers upon which the motion was founded; and the decision of the court cannot be based simply upon oral statements of counsel, and that was all that was before the court at the time of the granting of this motion. Either a party is entitled to know the grounds of a motion, or there is no necessity of serving any papers at all and the moving party may come into court and state orally to the court the grounds upon which he desires relief and his motion will be granted." Jenkins v. Warren, 25 App. Div. 569, 50 N. Y. Supp. 957.

[b] Embodied in Brief.—The written statement of the reasons upon which a motion to dismiss an appeal is founded may be embodied in the brief in the supreme court. Smith v. Moseley, 234 Mo. 486, 137 S. W. 971.

68. Meeks v. Clear Jack Mining Co., 141 Mo. App. 648, 124 S. W. 1084.

Motion for appeal, see 2 STANDARD PROC. 293.

[a] Defects apparent on the face of the record can properly be taken advantage of by oral motion. Livingston v. King, 2 Ga. App. 178, 58 S. E. 395.

[b] Motion Always Oral.—Where the motion is regarded as the viva voce application to the court for an order it is necessarily oral. Consequently reducing the application to writing and filing it, is not to make the motion. The attention of the court must be called to such application; it must be moved to grant the order. People v. Ah Sam, 41 Cal. 645; Wallace v. Lewis, 9 Mont. 399, 24 Pac. 22. See also Morse Co. v. Eaton, 91 Ill. App. 411.

[c] Motions of Course.—A standing rule of court, requiring all motions to be in writing, does not apply to motions of course made in the progress of a cause. Johnson v. Adleman, 35 Ill. 265.

[a] A motion made in more than one action should be entitled in each. Parent v. Kellogg, 1 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 70; Kellogg v. Collier, 47 Wis. 649, 3 N. W. 433.

[b] Entitled in Another Suit.—A motion to amend a clerical error in the amount of an execution may be entitled in a suit for false imprisonment brought for an arrest made under it. Holmes v. Williams, 3 Caines (N. Y.) 98, Colem. & C. Cas. 449.

[c] Motion To Subordinate.—Where an assignee of a junior judgment moves to subordinate supplementary proceedings upon certain prior judgments against the same debtor to the proceedings taken by himself under his judgment, he may entitle his motion in either action. New York Loan & Improvement Co. v. De Navarro, 38 Misc. 436, 77 N. Y. Supp. 1006, 11 N. Y. Ann. Cas. 360.

[d] Where no suit is pending the papers should not be entitled in any cause. People ex rel. Roddy v. Tioga Common Pleas, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 291; Haight v. Turner, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 371.

[e] A motion to vacate attachment need not be entitled in the original cause. Heyn v. Farrar, 36 Mich. 258.

ties.⁷² Original papers should be addressed to all attorneys opposed.⁷³

An error in entitling the papers will be disregarded where it is a mere irregularity,⁷⁴ but a mistake in this respect which misleads the opposite party is fatal to the motion.⁷⁵

3. Signing.—Certain motions must be signed or subscribed,⁷⁶ and even in the absence of statutory requirement, it may be usual in the practice of the jurisdiction to sign the motion.⁷⁷ The signing may be done by the parties themselves,⁷⁸ or their counsel.⁷⁹

4. Verification.—By statute⁸⁰ or rule of court,⁸¹ verification of

STANDARD PROC. 135.

[a] Surplusage.—Where a motion should be addressed to a judge of the court and not to the special term, the words "at the next special term," etc., in the motion, after the name of the judge, may be rejected as surplusage. People v. Sessions, 10 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 192.

[b] A motion to transfer a cause from the common pleas to the supreme court is properly entitled in the common pleas. Miller v. Dows, 2 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 98.

[c] Entitled in Appellate Court. The motion should be entitled in the court to which the cause has been appealed. Clickman v. Clickman, 1 N. Y. 611, 3 How. Pr. 365, 1 Code Rep. 98.

[d] Amendment.—Motion papers entitled in the wrong court are defective and cannot be amended under 149th section of the code. Clickman v. Clickman, 1 N. Y. 611, 3 How. Pr. 365, 1 Code Rep. 98.

[a] Where one defendant moves in a cause in which there are other defendants his papers should be entitled with the defendant moving, impleaded with the others. Foote v. Emmons, 2 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 89; Felt v. Hyde, 1 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 64.

[b] A motion made for all the defendants may be entitled in the names of all of them. Rowell v. Crofoot, 3 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 15.

[c] Parties Reversed.—(1) When both notice and affidavit are wrongfully entitled by reversing the parties, the error is fatal (Parkman v. Sherman, Colem. & C. Cas. (N. Y.) 260, 1 Caines 344); but (2) though the parties are reversed in the title of the notice, it is not fatal if they are rightly named in the affidavit. Ryers v. Hillyer, 1 Caines (N. Y.) 112.

papers upon which the motion is founded must sometimes be served on the opposite party⁹⁹ with the notice of motion.¹

Upon Whom. — Service of motion papers may be made on the attorney for the opposite party.²

Manner of Service. — Motion papers are served in the same manner as other papers in a cause generally.³ Service by mail is authorized,⁴ but in such case no part of the writing, composing any part of the papers served, should be upon the wrapper.⁵

X. FILING.⁶ — It is necessary, generally, to file with the clerk or enter upon the motion docket, motions⁷ that are required to be

XI. NOTICE OF MOTION.¹⁰ — A. NECESSITY FOR. — 1. In General. — Notice of a motion is necessary when required by statute or rule of court, or when directed by a court or judge in pursuance thereof.¹¹ And if the statute does not define the cases in which notice of motion is necessary, the question whether notice should be given to the adverse party will depend upon the particular facts presented and the circumstances under which the application is made.¹²

2. Notice From the Record. — It is an accepted rule that a party over whom a court has obtained jurisdiction must take notice of all motions filed in the cause until final judgment is rendered therein,¹³

[b] Special motion must (1) be filed with the clerk (United States Exp. Co. v. Bedbury, 40 Ill. 122), and (2) entered in special motion book. Bertram v. McNaughton, 1 Mich. N. P. 200.

[c] Motion After Final Judgment. Where the motion is made after final judgment the place of filing is the office of the clerk of the county where the judgment was entered. Curtis v. Greene, 28 Hun (N. Y.) 294.

[d] The record should show (1) the filing of the motion (Daggs v. Smith, 193 Mo. 494, 91 S. W. 1043), but (2) the motion should not be copied into the record since that would be a useless and improper incumbrance of such record. Daggs v. Smith, 193 Mo. 494, 91 S. W. 1043.

[e] Time of Filing. — (1) Special motions must be filed at least one day before they are submitted to the court. United States Exp. Co. v. Bedbury, 40 Ill. 122. (2) That motion papers need not be filed before making the motion, see Makepeace v. Lukens, 27 Ind. 435, 92 Am. Dec. 263; Corwith v. State Bank, 8 Wis. 376.

[f] Failure to file the motion papers as required by the statute or rule of practice will cause the order to be set aside. Curtis v. Greene, 28 Hun (N. Y.) 294.

[g] Unless properly verified the motion is not entitled to filing. Sylvester v. Olson, 63 Wash. 285, 115 Pac. 175.

[a] "In practice, courts are in the habit of requiring motions to be made with the knowledge or in the presence of opposite counsel when they are known. But this is a matter of courtesy and not of right. In legal strictness, counsel are presumed to be present when the court is in session on a day in which any step in a pending unless actual notice is required to be given by some rule or order of court.¹⁴ But motions affecting materially the interests of the opposite party must be upon notice when made in causes not of record,¹⁵ or when depending upon matter not upon the record,¹⁶ or when made out of court or when the trial is not in progress,¹⁷ or after the action has been terminated by final judgment.¹⁸

3. Invoking Discretionary Powers.—Where the motion invokes the purely discretionary powers of the court and notice of it could serve no purpose, notice is necessary.¹⁹

[a] New York Rules.—(1) Unless a rule of practice or special provision of law prescribes otherwise, eight days' notice is required where the same is personally served. Citizens' Sav. Bank v. Bauer, 49 Hun 238, 1 N. Y. Supp. 450, 14 Civ. Proc. 340, 17 N. Y. St. 81; Rogers v. McElhone, 12 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 292, 20 How. Pr. 441; Anonymous, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 288. (2) There is no absolute right to a notice of eight days. People ex rel. Mayor of New York v. Nichols, 79 N. Y. 582. (3) The time may be shortened by an order to show cause, see infra, XI, C, 2, b. (4) In certain cases a shorter notice than eight days is provided for. Thus by sec. 537 of the Code a notice of not less than five days is required in an application for judgment upon a frivolous demurrer. Singleton v. Thornton, 45 Hun 589, 9 N. Y. St. 600. (5) Sixteen days' notice is required where the service is by mail. Code Civ. Proc., §780. (6) Notice of motion to prove exhibits at the hearing must be served four days before the hearing. Consequa v. Fanning, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 481.

[e] Five days before the hearing if both parties reside in the county; otherwise ten days. And if service is by mail the time of service must be increased by one day for every twenty-five miles between the place of deposit and the place of service. See Eadie v. Eadie, 44 Mont. 391, 120 Pac. 239, Ann. Cas. 1913B, 479.

[f] Four Days.—McCaslin v. Camp, 26 Mich. 390. In Michigan the general established practice recognizes four days as the usual time for all except a few peculiar motions. A longer notice is needed where the service is for a distant point. McCaslin v. Camp, 26 Mich. 390.

b. Order To Show Cause.—Statutes in many jurisdictions empower the court to shorten the prescribed notice of motion by an order to show cause,³³ and, it seems, the court has inherent power to issue orders fixing the time for hearing motions whether the purpose is to shorten or lengthen the statutory notice.³⁴

This does not mean that any judge at chambers has power to shorten the time of notice but only the judge before whom the application to which the order relates is to be made. Merritt v. Slocum, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 350.

[e] Review.—(1) The action of a judge at chambers in granting an order shortening a notice is subject to review (People ex rel. Mayor of New York v. Nichols, 79 N. Y. 582; Sixth Ave. R. Co. v. Gilbert Elev. R. Co., 71 N. Y. 430, 434), but (2) an order of notice or order to show cause.³⁷ Defects not specified in the notice cannot be urged in support of the motion,³⁸ and a failure to specify the grounds of the motion is ground for denying the same.³⁹

Time To Be Made.—The notice of motion must state the time when it will be made or brought on for hearing,⁴⁰ being sufficient in this

[a] Either by the notice or the affidavits the particular grounds of the motion should appear. Ellis v. Jones, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 296.

[b] Notice of motion to set aside an order must ordinarily state the irregularities relied upon, but this is not necessary where the objection is jurisdictional and upon the merits. In re George Ringler & Co., 70 Misc. 576, 127 N. Y. Supp. 934.

[c] Notice of motion for new trial need not state the grounds. See Bohn v. Bohn, 164 Cal. 532, 129 Pac. 981, and generally "New Trial."

[d] In a special proceeding to recover judgment upon facts to be shown, particularly if judgment for a penalty is sought, the notice must be as specific as a petition. Skaggs v. Hines, 5 Ky. L. Rep. 106.

[e] Irregularities complained of should be specified. Perkins v. Mead, 22 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 476; Selover v. Forbes, 22 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 477; Lewis v. Graham, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 126.

[f] Limits of Rule.—"It is a salutary rule in all cases, where in answer to a motion, the opposite party would have a right to explain by affidavit the matters which constitute the foundation of the motion, that he should be apprized by the notice of the motion, or by the papers upon which the motion is to be founded of the grounds upon which the moving party relies to sustain his motion." Brower v. Brooks, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 423. See also Hanna v. Curtis, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 263.

[g] Shown by Other Papers.—Notice of motion is not objectionable which does not point out the irregularity complained of, where such irregularity sufficiently appears in the moving papers. Blake v. Loey, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 108, 1 Code Rep. (N. S.) 406.

[a] Defects in substance are not within the rule. "In other words, it is the omission of some matter of form. Where, however, as here, the defects go to the sufficiency of the affidavit as evidence, they are matters of substance, not mere irregularities, and the rule has no application." *Agnew v. [a] "Or as soon thereafter," etc. (1) Following the designation of a specified day in the notice appear such phrases as "or as soon thereafter as the court can attend to the same," or "as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard," etc. White v. Rockafellar, 45 N. J. L. 299. (2) Such a notice is good for the day succeeding the designated day. White v. Rockafellar, 29 N. J. L. 299.

[b] A rule of court cannot dispense with the necessity of such statement. Bohn v. Bohn, 164 Cal. 532, 129 Pac. 981.

[c] In motion for new trial such statement not necessary. See Bohn v. Bohn, 164 Cal. 532, 129 Pac. 981.

[d] Stated in Alternative.—A notice of motion must specify one certain time only when the motion will be brought on, it cannot be made in the alternative. Crane v. Crofoot, 1 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 191.

[e] Uncertainty in designating the time of hearing of the motion will not invalidate the notice where it appears, the opposite party was not misled thereby. Blake v. Sherman, 12 Minn. 420.

[f] Day Misdated.—A notice which states that a motion will be made on Friday the seventh is bad when Friday is the eighth. Brown v. Williamson, 8 N. J. L. 363.

respect if it designate the particular term at which the hearing will take place.⁴¹

Place of Moving.—The place where court will be held need not be specified in the notice since that is a matter fixed by law of which a party must take notice at his peril.⁴²

Papers Upon Which Based.—The papers upon which the motion is based, if any, must be stated.⁴³

The relief sought should be specified in the notice.⁴⁴ Different kinds of relief may be stated⁴⁵ and set out in the alternative.⁴⁶

D. SERVICE OF NOTICE.⁴⁷—1. In General.—Service of the notice of motion must be in accordance with the statutes regulating the same,⁴⁸ and it is not within the province of the court to order a service which the statute does not authorize.⁴⁹

(N. Y.) 51.

[b] Provision for Continuance.—A notice of motion for a particular term, and that if not then made, it will be continued on the calendar from term to term until it shall be made is insufficient. Beekman v. Reed, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 23.

[b] Each of the several adverse attorneys need not be served. Where the motion bears acceptance of service by one of the attorneys representing the opposing party, it is sufficient. Union Iron Works v. Vekol Min. & Mill. Co., 11 Ariz. 47, 89 Pac. 539.

[c] Upon death, removal or suspension of the attorney or solicitor, and neglect of the party to appoint an attorney, in such manner as the court shall direct, notices of motions in the case may thereafter be served on such party. Hoffman v. Rowley, 13 Abb. Pr. 399; Jewell v. Schouten, 1 N. Y. 241.

[d] A notice of motion to set aside judgment may be properly served on the attorney of record of the opposite party. Branch v. Walker, 92 N. C. 87.

[a] Service (1) on attorney. "To make the service of a notice good, it must be shown that everything has been done to bring it home to the party. The service must be on some person in the office and belonging there. If no person is there, it must be on some one in the house where the attorney resides or where his office is kept and if there is no person there, it may be left in the office." Gelston v. Swartwout, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 136. (2) Service on attorney's clerk in his office (Cooper v. Carr, 8 Johns. [N. Y.] 360; Jackson ex dem. Payn v. Yale, 1 Cow. [N. Y.] 215), whether (3) the attorney be there or not. Jackson ex dem. Payn v. Yale, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 215. (4) Service at attorney's house not sufficient. Jackson ex dem. Pickart v. Eacker, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 331; Anonymous, 1 Caines (N. Y.) 73.

[b] Leaving a copy (1) with a member of family of the party is sufficient where he cannot be found at his usual place of abode (Fleece v. Goodrum, 1 Duv. [Ky.] 306; Fowler v. Mosher, 85 Va. 421, 7 S. E. 542), with (2) wife of party (Fleece v. Goodrum, 1 Duv. [Ky.] 306), but (3) delivery to "a mere boarder, a stranger to his blood," is not sufficient. *Fowler v. corporation may be served on its agent within the state.⁵⁶

4. Return and Proof.—The return of the officer,⁵⁷ and, in some jurisdictions,⁵⁸ but not all,⁵⁹ the affidavit of a disinterested person is sufficient proof of service.

E. FAILURE TO GIVE NOTICE.—1. In General.—Want of notice, where required, although not a jurisdictional defect,⁶⁰ will justify the court in refusing to consider the motion,⁶¹ and renders a decision thereon irregular and erroneous,⁶² unless the want of notice has been cured by the subsequent proceedings,⁶³ or by the appearance, without objection, of the party entitled to such notice.⁶⁴

2. Waiver.—One entitled to notice of motion may expressly waive the same.⁶⁵ If he desires to question the sufficiency of the notice he should appear specially for that purpose,⁶⁶ for by appearing generally and resisting the motion on its merits he waives want of notice⁶⁷

XII. COUNTER-MOTIONS.—The statute sometimes enables the party against whom the motion is made to demand by motion such relief as on the facts presented he deems himself to be entitled to at the same time.⁷¹

Notice of counter-motion should be served on the adverse party,⁷² and such notice should specify the kind or kinds of relief to which the counter movant claims to be entitled in the action.⁷³

Supporting affidavits and papers may, if the party giving the notice chooses, be served therewith.⁷⁴

Place of. — The motion is generally heard in the place where the application is made.³⁹ If made in the principal cause the motion must be heard in the county where the action is pending,⁴⁰ unless the parties consent to its being heard and decided outside the county.⁴¹

Outside the Court. — Where the court has jurisdiction to entertain a motion in chambers, he may do so at any place in his district.⁴²

B. NOTICE OF HEARING. — The party making the motion is not entitled to notice of the hearing,⁴³ but the opposite party must be notified where the statute or practice requires notice.⁴⁴

C. TIME FOR HEARING. — 1. In General. — Courts have a large discretion in fixing the time for hearing pending motions.⁴⁵ If noticed for a certain day the motion should be heard on that day,⁴⁶ unless postponed or continued by order of the court.⁴⁷ Certain motions, however, stand over as a matter of course, as for example, a motion noticed⁴⁸ to be heard at chambers, or one noticed to be heard at a designated day in term.⁴⁹

Special motions are not considered by the court until the day following that upon which they are entered.⁵⁰

2. Respecting the Term.—It is sometimes required that motions not involving the merits be determined at a special term.⁵¹ A motion cannot be heard at a term prior to that to which the opposite party was cited to appear,⁵² but a motion pending and undetermined at the end of a term will stand over to the subsequent term,⁵³ and the court has power to order pending motions carried over to a subsequent term.⁵⁴

3. Time of Hearing at Trial.—Motions constituting dilatory objections must be disposed of before the trial upon the merits is entered upon by the parties.⁵⁵ Two motions may be of such a character as to be triable together,⁵⁶ but if the court proceeds to try them singly, the logical order of precedence should be followed.⁵⁷

[a] If noticed to be heard on the first day of the term and a sufficient number of judges are not present on that day to hear court, the motion may be taken up on the first day on which a court is formed. Com. v. McClelland, Hardin (Ky.) 28.

undisposed of in any of said courts at the end of a term shall stand continued till the next term of the court." Hartman v. Viera, 113 Ill. App. 216.

[b] A notice fixing July 3d "or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard" as the time for hearing a motion, did not lose its vitality by the court's failure to dispose of the motion at that term. Such notice gave the court power to hear the motion on Nov. 6 thereafter. Lowry v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 92 S. C. 33, 75 S. E. 278.

[a] A motion to strike out defendant's motion to dissolve an injunction should be heard in the order stated for where the court hears and decides the defendant's motion first it operates

4. Continuances and Adjournments.—By operation of the statute, motions may stand over, even to a subsequent term, without any formal order of court.⁵⁸ The court, however, may, in its discretion postpone the hearing on a motion,⁵⁹ especially if good cause is shown why a continuance should be granted.⁶⁰

D. CONDUCT OF HEARING.—1. Discretion of Court.—The conduct of the hearing on motion is largely within the discretion of the trial judge.⁶¹

2. Consolidation of Motions.—The court may in a proper case consolidate several motions.⁶²

3. Reference.—The court on hearing of a motion may order a reference to take further testimony,⁶³ but it is in nowise concluded by as a refusal to hear plaintiff's motion to strike out. Chopin v. Freeman, 138 La. 423, 70 So. 421.

4. Arguments.⁶⁵ — The matter of arguing motions is controlled by rules of court or statutes. Certain motions may be submitted on briefs,⁶⁶ or written argument,⁶⁷ and in respect to other motions oral argument may be required.⁶⁸ The court may, in the exercise of its general control over the conduct of the proceedings limit the argument of counsel upon the motion,⁶⁹ or the number of counsel to be heard on each side.⁷⁰

XVIII. DECISION UPON THE MOTION.⁷⁶ — A. NATURE OF. The decision upon a motion, though a judicial act,⁷⁷ is not a judgment but an order merely,⁷⁸ and is not appealable unless made so by statute.⁷⁹

B. RULES OF DECISION. — Where the motion is too broad in its scope it will be denied in the form in which it is presented unless the moving party is entitled as a matter of right to the relief demanded.⁸⁰

C. NOTICE OF DECISION. — Notice of decision on hearing of motion need not be given the moving party.⁸¹

D. DECISION OR ORDER. — Matters pertaining to the form and requisites of orders and the remedies to review them will be found in another part of this work.⁸²

E. REARGUMENT AND REHEARING. — The court has the power upon proper application to grant a rehearing or reargument of a motion,⁸³ but after the time for appealing from the order has expired this power will not be exercised.⁸⁴

How Obtained. — The rehearing or reargument is obtained by motion,⁸⁵ addressed to the discretion of the court,⁸⁶ and showing a sufficient reason for the same.⁸⁷

87. See the discussion immediately following.

Grounds. — To entitle the party to a rehearing it must appear that the order is palpably erroneous⁸⁸ in that the court overlooked some decision or some principle of law which would have a controlling effect,⁸⁹ or was under some misapprehension of fact.⁹⁰

F. CONCLUSIVENESS OF DECISION.⁹¹ — A decision upon a motion, so long as it stands, is conclusive in subsequent controversies when it has adjudicated some substantial right especially if it is made upon a full hearing of controverted facts,⁹² but it has not the force of a former adjudication in the same sense as a judgment finally settling the controversy,⁹³ consequently in a proper case a renewal of the motion may be granted.⁹⁴

XIX. RENEWAL OF MOTION. — A. RIGHT TO RENEW. — 1.

In General. — A party whose motion has been denied has no absolute right to renew the same.⁹⁵ The court, however, having power to review its own decisions may permit a party to renew his motion,⁹⁶ its power in this respect, being most frequently exercised where additional facts are presented.⁹⁷ But in order to justify a renewal, good cause must be shown,⁹⁸ and an application to renew a motion for the same purpose and upon the same state of facts is usually denied,⁹⁹ though even in such cases the court may in its discretion grant a renewal where the facts are more fully stated.¹

2. Terms.—Where an order denying a motion grants privilege to renew it upon certain terms, a compliance with such terms is essential to the right to renew.²

3. Leave of Court.—a. Necessity for.—A motion once denied on the merits cannot, as a general rule, be renewed on the same state of facts,³ or upon facts previously existing,⁴ unless leave of court is first obtained. But no leave of court is necessary where the second motion is made upon a new state of facts arising since the making of the first motion,⁵ or upon new grounds not known until after the hearing on the first motion,⁶ or where the former order was obtained by

(II.) Application for Leave. — Where leave to renew is not contained in the order denying the former motion,¹⁵ an independent application for permission to renew must be made to the court.¹⁶

Sufficiency of Application. — The application to renew the motion must show some good reason for such renewal,¹⁷ as for example that the same proofs then offered could not have been offered at the hearing of the first motion.¹⁸

d. Manner of Granting Leave.¹⁹ — An express order granting leave to renew is usually made,²⁰ but it is sufficient if the giving of the order can be implied from some action or ruling of the court,²¹ and even though formal leave to renew has not been granted, nevertheless if the renewed motion has been heard and disposed of upon its merits, the presumption attaches that leave was previously granted.²²

e. Effect of Leave To Renew. — The order granting leave to renew the motion, reinstates the motion for hearing on the merits just as if the order denying it had never been made.²³

B. HEARING ON RENEWAL. — NOTICE OF. — It is necessary to give the opposite party notice of the hearing on renewal,²⁴ but the court may by order shorten the time for the giving of such notice.²⁵

Supporting Papers. — If the order denying a motion requires the second motion to be on proper papers a failure to observe the condition will result in the court's dismissing the motion,²⁶ and a consequent loss of power in the court to grant leave to make a third motion for the same relief.²⁷ The renewed motion is generally heard on new papers,²⁸ although it is discretionary with the court to hear it on the same papers.²⁹

I. REMEDIES OF VENDOR OR PURCHASER.—A vendor or a purchaser of a motor vehicle has the same remedies in regard to the contract of purchase as have vendors and purchasers generally.¹ Thus, upon breach of a warranty in the sale of a motor vehicle, the purchaser, within a reasonable time, may rescind the contract and sue for the recovery of the purchase price,² or he may affirm the contract and sue for the damages sustained.³ One induced by the fraud of a vendor to enter into a contract for the purchase of a motor vehicle may either rescind,⁴ or he may affirm the contract and maintain an action to recover damages for the tort committed by the vendor in so inducing the sale.⁵ The remedies of the seller of a motor vehicle under a conditional contract of sale which retains title in him until the purchase price is fully paid are the same as those of any other seller under such a contract.⁶

II. ACTIONS FOR INJURIES.—A. PARTIES.—The parties to an action for injuries caused by a motor vehicle are determined by the general rules elsewhere treated.⁷ Thus if two defendants each operating a motor vehicle contribute to an injury to plaintiff, he may sue them either jointly or severally.⁸

B. COMPLAINT OR DECLARATION.—1. In General.—The complaint or declaration in an action for injuries to person or property caused by a motor vehicle must conform to the general requirements of such pleadings elsewhere discussed.⁹ An allegation under a videlicet as to the speed per hour a motor vehicle was being driven is not sufficient to charge that the vehicle was being driven at any particular number of miles per hour.¹⁰

The constitutionality of a statute regulating the speed and use of automobiles may be raised by demurrer to a declaration for damages for injuries received through defendant's negligence in operating his automobile in violation of such statute.¹¹

2. Particular Averments. — Negligence. — Where an injury is suffered by reason of the negligence of the operator of a motor vehicle, the negligence must be pleaded as in other similar cases.¹²

Master and Servant. — Where another than the defendant is driving at the time of the negligent act, the plaintiff must allege that he is under the control of the defendant,¹³ or that the relationship of master and servant existed between the defendant and the driver.¹⁴ Where at the time of the injury another person was driving, it is insufficient to allege that the defendant was in control of the automobile, without showing in what the control consisted.¹⁵

Scope of Employment. — If the driver was agent or servant of defendant it must appear from the complaint that he was acting within the scope of his employment.¹⁶

[b] Pleading negligence eo nomine is not necessary in an action for damages for injuries received in an automobile accident where the complaint does allege the substance of an ordinance, the fact that it was in force and effect, and that defendant's agent failed to comply with its mandate, and that plaintiff was injured in consequence. Such failure to comply with

C. ISSUES, PROOF AND VARIANCE. — Matters admitted by failure to properly deny them are not in issue.¹⁷ Under the general issue, the defendant may show that he was driving on the wrong side of the street because of an excavation and a desire to make a delivery on such side.¹⁸

The general rule that the proof must conform to the pleadings,¹⁹ is applicable in this class of cases.²⁰

D. PROVINCE OF COURT AND JURY. — The general rule that where the evidence is conflicting or more than one inference may be drawn therefrom, the question raised thereby becomes one of fact for the jury or for the court sitting without a jury,²¹ applies in this class of cases. Thus, under such circumstances, it is a question for the jury to determine which one of the two was negligent, the defendant²² or his servant,²³ and whether the injuries in the operation of the motor vehicle were proximately caused by the negligence.²⁴ Whether the signal given by the operator of the automobile was sufficient to warn the plaintiff of danger is a question of fact for the jury to decide.²⁵ Where several defendants are sued as contributing to an injury caused by an automobile accident, it is a question for the jury to determine whether each contributed.²⁶

Employment.—Ordinarily, subject to the court's instructions, it is for the jury to determine whether, at the time of the commission of the negligent acts complained of, the relationship of master and servant or principal and agent existed between the defendant and the driver,²⁷ and whether the driver was acting within the scope of his employment.²⁸

Contributory Negligence.—The determination of the question whether the plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence is one for the jury as in other negligence cases.²⁹

License.—Under a statute allowing an unlicensed person to drive a motor vehicle if accompanied by a licensed operator, it is a question for the jury to determine whether the presence of the licensed operator in the rear seat was a sufficient compliance with the statute to permit the plaintiff driver to maintain an action for injuries received.³⁰

following a rule of law that in an action brought to recover damages for injuries caused by defendant's negligence in running an automobile at a greater speed than permitted by law, the plaintiff makes out a prima facie case if he proves the injury and the fact that the automobile was driven at a greater speed than allowed, is sufficient and proper.³²

F. VERDICT AND JUDGMENT.—Under a complaint against two defendants, as master and servant, charging them with negligence in the operation of a motor vehicle, the jury may, where the law and the facts justify it, find for the plaintiff as against one defendant, and for the other.³³ Where separate actions are brought against two joint tort-feasors, the plaintiff is entitled to judgments against each for the full amount of the recovery.³⁴

[a] Heedless Driving.—An instruction is proper which charges that the jury in determining whether the defendant was guilty of heedless driving, as charged, should take into consideration the time and place of the offense charged as to light or darkness; the presence or absence of other vehicles on the highway at the time; the width of the highway; the condition of the vehicle driven as to equipment; the defendant's manner of driving, and all other surrounding circumstances as shown by the evidence. *Territory v. I. DEFINITION AND FORMS OF.—Multifariousness has been defined as "improperly joining in one bill distinct and independent matters, and thereby confounding them."¹

Forms of.—Multifariousness may be said to be of two kinds or classes, the joining in one suit of several parties as complainants or defendants, and unconnected with each other,² or where separate and distinct causes of action are joined which ought not to be joined.³

[a] This is Justice Story's definition (1) and the example by which he illustrates the definition is "the uniting in one bill several matters perfectly distinct and unconnected against one defendant, or the demand of several matters of a distinct and independent nature against several defendants in the same bill." "it may be that the plaintiffs and defendants are parties to the whole of the transactions which form the subject of the suit, and, nevertheless, those transactions may be so dissimilar that the court will not allow them to be joined together, but will require distinct records." II. RULES FOR DETERMINING. — A. GENERAL STATEMENT.

No absolute rule can be laid down as to what constitutes multifariousness,⁵ it is a matter in which the court must exercise to a considerable means misjoinder of causes of action, and sometimes misjoinder of parties." Eng.—Campbell v. Mackay, 1 Myl. & C. 603, 618, 40 Eng. Reprint 507.

[a] "The only way of reconciling the authorities upon the subject is by adverting to the fact that, although the books speak generally of demurrers for multifariousness, yet in truth such demurrers may be divided into two kinds: 1. Frequently the objection raised to the bill, though termed multifariousness, is, in fact, properly speaking, a misjoinder; that is to say, the cases or claims asserted in the bill are of so different a character that the court will not permit them to be litigated in one record. It may be that the plaintiffs and the defendants are parties to the whole transactions which form the subject of the suit, but nevertheless those transactions may be so dissimilar that the court will not allow them to be joined together, but will require distinct records. 2. But what is more familiarly understood by multifariousness, as applied to a bill, is where a party is brought as a defendant upon a record with a large portion of which, and of the case made by which, he has no connection whatever. In such a case he has a right to demur (and so the old form of demurrer was) and to state the evil of thus uniting distinct matters in one record to be that it put the parties to great and useless expense. Such an objection could have no application to the case of a mere misjoinder of different causes of action between the same parties, plaintiffs and defendants, and none others. See Story's Eq. Pl. pp. 406, 407." Gartland v. Dunn, 11 Ark. 720.

[a] No General Rule.—"Lord Cottonham, in Campbell v. Mackay, 7 Simon, 564, and in Mylne v. Craig, 603, says, to lay down any rule, applicable universally, or to say what constitutes multifariousness, as an abstract proposition, is, upon the authorities, utterly impossible. Every case must be governed by its circumstances; and as these are as diversified as the names of the parties, the court must exercise a sound discretion on the subject. Whilst parties should not be subjected to expense and inconvenience in litigating matters in which they have no interest, multiplicity of suits should be avoided by uniting in one bill all who have an interest in the principal matter in controversy, though the interests may have arisen under distinct contracts." *Fitch v. [a] Each Case Determined on Its Own Facts.—"There is, perhaps, no rule established for the conducting of equity pleadings, with reference to which (whilst as a rule it is universally admitted) there has existed less of certainty and uniformity in application, than has attended this relating to multifariousness. This effect, flowing, perhaps, inevitably, from the variety of modes and decrees of right and interest entering into the transactions of life, seems to have led to a conclusion rendering the rule almost as much an exception as a rule, and that conclusion is, that each case must be determined by its peculiar features." *Shields v. the suit is single and the defendants have an interest therein though their interests may be distinct;⁴⁶ or, according to some decisions, the acts of the several defendants of which complainant complains, all affect the same property,⁴⁷ a bill joining such defendants is not multifarious. Nor will the objection of multifariousness lie where a complainant seeks appropriate relief from the acts of several defendants who have combined or acted together in reference to the subject matter, though the interests of the several defendants may not be identical.⁴⁸ So too, it is held that several defendants who claim or have interests in the subject matter of the bill which can be conveniently settled in the one suit, may be joined without rendering the bill multifarious.⁴⁹

Matters arising from the same transaction or affecting the same subject matter in which several defendants are interested will be found elsewhere in this article.⁵⁰

Interest Need Not Extend to Entire Bill. — It is not necessary that all the parties should have an interest in all the matters contained in the suit; the objection will be defeated if it appears that each party has an interest in some matters in the suit, and they are connected with the others.⁵¹

Same Defendant in Several Capacities.—One defendant cannot be sued in a single bill on claims both as an individual and in a representative capacity,⁵² except, perhaps, under the same circumstances in which separate persons might be joined.

I. WHAT CONSIDERED IN DETERMINING.—The court will look to the bill only in determining the question of multifariousness.⁵³

III. REASON FOR RULES AGAINST.—The object of the rule against multifariousness has been said to be to protect a defendant from unnecessary expense,⁵⁴ or inconvenience or embarrassment,⁵⁵ and prevent unnecessary confusion,⁵⁶ in the conduct of the litigation.

Blatchf. 444, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 6,703; Gamewell Fire-Alarm Tel. Co. v. Chilli-cothe, 7 Fed. 351, the court saying: "It may be drawn from the cases, and is in accordance with the reason of the rule, that the test of multifariousness is: What is the burden imposed on the defendant? to what defense is he forced? can he make one defense to the whole bill?"

[a] "The question in all cases where the objection is interposed, is whether the court can accord full and substantial relief to all parties in interest without embarrassing the chances for defense." Wade v. Pulsifer, 54 Vt. 45.

[b] "Courts, in dealing with this question, look particularly to convenience in the administration of justice; and, if this is accomplished by the mode of proceeding adopted, the objection of multifariousness will not lie, unless the course pursued is so injurious to one party as to make it inequitable to accomplish the general convenience at his expense. So that when we look to see if a bill is multifarious, the first question to be determined is, does the bill propose to reach the end aimed at in a convenient way for all concerned? And, if the mode adopted does accomplish the end of convenience, then the question arises, is any one hurt by it, or so injured as to make it unjust for the suit to be maintained in that form?" County School Board of Albemarle County v. Farish's Admr., 92 Va. 156, 23 S. E. 221.

56. Horman Patent Mfg. Co. v. Brooklyn City R. Co., 15 Blatchf. 444, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 6,703.

As a rule the objection of multifariousness cannot be raised for the first time on appeal, it being deemed waived if not taken in the trial court,⁵⁷ but some authorities hold that in an extreme case the objection may be taken in the upper court for the first time.⁵⁸

Generally the objection must be raised before hearing on the merits in the trial court.⁵⁹ After decree, the objection comes too late,⁶⁰ even though the defendant failed to appear and the decree went against him by default.⁶¹

B. MANNER OF RAISING.—The weight of authority is that the objection of multifariousness must be taken by demurrer or it will be waived, unless it be not apparent on the face of the bill in which case

57. U. S.—Oliver v. Piatt, 3 How. 333, 412, 11 L. ed. 622, the court says: "An appellate court would scarcely entertain the objection, if it was not forced upon it by a moral necessity." Ala.—*Betts v. See also cases cited infra, IV, B.

[a] Even Though Decree Taken Pro Confesso.—Gilmore v. Sapp, 100 Ill. 297.

[b] Reason for Rule.—"The ground on which the doctrine of multifariousness rests is the inconvenience of mixing up in one bill several distinct matters having no necessary connection with each other, and which may require different proceedings and distinct decrees (Story's Equity Pl., p. 280), thus embarrassing the court as well as the defendants. But to allow the objection at this time, under the circumstances of this case instead of being productive of convenience, would be productive of inconvenience, expense and delay, for the same question that has been decided would have to be re-litigated, and the same decree rendered upon the same allegations and proof that should have been rendered if the bill had not contained the prayer for a divorce. Under such circumstances we will treat the question of multifariousness as it appears to have been treated in the court below, that is, as waived or abandoned." Betts v. Betts, 18 Ala. 787.

58. U. S.—Hefner v. Northwestern, etc. Life Ins. Co., 123 U. S. 747, 8 Sup. Ct. 337, 31 L. ed. 309, the court in its discretion may take the objection at the hearing or on appeal, and order the bill to be amended or dismissed. Ill.—Gilmore v. Sapp, 100 Ill. 297. Md.—Ashton v. Ashton, 35 Md. 496, 504.

[a] See also Gray v. Payne, 43 Mo. 203, where the court says: "As the case is now presented, the only question which will be noticed arises upon the pleadings. That there is a misjoinder of causes of action combined in the petition is patent, and that the objection is fatal is well established by a uniform current of decisions in this court. It is true the point was not raised in the court below by the defendant's counsel, but the matter is apparent upon the face of the record, and will be noticed here on either error or appeal, whether exceptions were saved or not."

[d] Reason.—"Where advantage of multifariousness is desired to be taken by defendants, the desirable practice is for them to present the objection by demurrer, that the court may pass upon it before the expense of reference and testimony is incurred. If, instead of taking this course, they only by their answer reserve the privilege of making the objection at the hearing, when the expenses are already incurred, and when the court is put to the trouble of a full discussion of the case, they cannot complain if the court disregards their objection, unless the nature of the case is such that justice cannot be done to the parties upon the pleadings and evidence as then presented. At that stage of the case, the court, instead of the party, is to take the objection of multifariousness." Payne v. Avery, 21 Mich. 524.

[e] "We think it may be found that the term multifariousness has not always been used in the same sense, being in some instances confined to cases where a misjoinder of parties or subjects appears on the face of the bill; and in others extended so as to include cases where the answer or plea shows a misjoinder, which was not apparent before. In cases where the answer or plea, by the denial of a fact stated in the bill, or by the introduction of a new fact, shows that there is a misjoinder, this is not, perhaps, to be considered as multifariousness in the strict sense of the term, but as a variance from the case stated in the bill. If the variance is material, the plaintiff fails, because he has not made out the case which he stated. If the objection does not appear in the bill, but is shown by the plea or answer, it is, perhaps, not very material whether it is demonstrated multifariousness, or a misjoinder, or a variance; the defendant must be allowed to insist on the objection by his plea or answer, as he would not do it by demurrer." specific,⁶⁵ or to compel plaintiff to elect on which ground he will proceed.⁶⁶ A motion to dismiss has been held not proper as the error may be cured by amendment.⁶⁷

C. WHO MAY RAISE.—1. Generally.—The objection of multifariousness generally can only be raised by the person who is prejudiced by reason thereof.⁶⁸ Thus a defendant liable for each of the claims in the suit cannot object because of multifariousness.⁶⁹

2. The Court.—Where a defendant omits to demur for multifariousness the court may sua sponte, take the objection and dismiss the bill or order it to be amended,⁷⁰ though this prerogative of the court should be used only in a strong case.⁷¹ Where necessary to pre-

I. JURISDICTION OF EQUITY TO PREVENT.—A. GENERAL-LY.—It is a well settled principle of our legal system that for the purpose of preventing the vexatious recurrence of litigation, equity will assume jurisdiction.¹ Pursuant to this equitable principle, legis-

[a] Difficult Rule To Apply.—"It is easy to say it rests upon the prevention of a multiplicity of suits, but to say whether a particular case comes within the principle is sometimes a much more difficult task. Each case, if not brought directly within the principle of some preceding case, must, as we think, be decided upon its own merits and upon a survey of the real and substantial convenience of all parties, the adequacy of the legal remedy, the situations of the different parties, the points to be contested and the result which would follow if jurisdiction should be assumed or denied; these various matters being factors to be taken into consideration upon the question of equitable jurisdiction on lation in some of the states has partially defined this jurisdiction.²

The necessity for invoking this rule arises, first, when numerous persons assert similar claims against one individual,³ or when similar claims are asserted by one individual against many;⁴ and, second,

this ground, and whether within reasonable and fair grounds the suit is calculated to be in truth one which will practically prevent a multiplicity of litigation and will be an actual convenience to all parties, and will not unreasonably overlook or obstruct the material interests of any. The single fact that a multiplicity of suits may be prevented by this assumption of jurisdiction is not in all cases enough to sustain it. It might be that the exercise of equitable jurisdiction on this ground, while preventing a formal multiplicity of suits, would nevertheless be attended with more and deeper inconvenience to the defendants than would be compensated for by the convenience of a single plaintiff; and where the case is not covered by any controlling precedent the inconvenience might constitute good ground for denying jurisdiction." *Hale v. B. REQUISITE JURISDICTIONAL ELEMENTS.—The right to invoke the jurisdiction of equity to prevent a multiplicity of suits arises out of the inadequacy of legal remedies to afford relief.⁷ It is not an independent source of jurisdiction and therefore may not be invoked by one who has no prior existing cause of action or defense.⁸ The legal relief to which one may be entitled need not be of the same kind as that which he demands and obtains from a court of equity.⁹ It must appear that the danger of a multiplicity of suits is real and not merely a possibility,¹⁰ that the exercise of the jurisdiction of equity is necessary,¹¹ and that the result to be obtained will be a simplification of the issues, that is, avail to prevent a multiplicity of suits.¹²

[a] In Mississippi (1) the rule has undergone frequent change. As first laid down, it was held a community of interest in the questions of law and fact involved was sufficient. Pollock & Co. v. Okolona Sav. Inst., 61 Miss. 293; Nevitt v. Gillespie, 1 How. (Miss.) 108, 26 Am. Dec. 696. (2) But later it was decided that the community of interest must be in the subject matter. Tribette v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 70 Miss. 182, 12 So. 32, 35 Am. St. Rep. 642, 19 L. R. A. 660. (3) This case was overruled and the broader doctrine reestablished for a time. Gulf & S. I. R. Co. v. Barnes, 94 Miss. 484, 48 So. 823; Whitlock v. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co., 91 Miss. 779, 45 So. 861; Tisdale v. Ins. Co. of North America, 84 Miss. 709, 36 So. 568, overruling Crawford v. Mobile, etc. R. numerous threatened actions belonged to that class involving successively an indefinite number of actions at law between two parties,¹⁷ particularly those which were the reiteration of an unsuccessful claim, the early doctrine compelled the complainant to establish his right or title to the thing in controversy by repeated recoveries at law before he could invoke the jurisdiction of equity;¹⁸ but now it is generally held that one recovery is sufficient, the criterion being the establishment of the right and not the number of adjudications in his favor.¹⁹

[a] An Obsolete Proceeding Under the Statute.—The equity of the plaintiff in cases involving the continued prosecution of an unsuccessful claim arose from the protracted litigation for the possession of property which the action of ejectment at common law permitted. A recovery in one action constituted no bar to another similar action or to any number of such actions. To put an end to such litigation and give repose to the successful party, courts of equity interfered and closed the controversy. Under the statutes on ejectment this proceeding is no longer necessary. See the statutes, and Sharon v. Tucker, 144 U. S. 533, 542, 12 Sup. Ct. 720, 36 L. ed. 532; Leighton v. Leighton, 1 P. ments and limitations previously stated, where multiplicity exists equity will take jurisdiction to determine the rights of all the parties in one proceeding, and will enjoin all actions at law relating to the same subject-matter.²⁰ So an injunction will issue when a multiplicity of suits between the same parties is threatened;²¹ or, as formerly occurred at common law, when vexatious ejectment suits were repeatedly brought;²² or when numerous unnecessary suits are brought, not in good faith, but to cause annoyance;²³ or when, having jurisdiction on other grounds, multiplicity may be avoided by adjudicating other questions, incidental to the principal case, but relating to the same subject-matter.²⁴

III. PARTIES.²⁵—Either party may invoke the jurisdiction of equity to prevent a multiplicity of suits,²⁶ but in the federal courts

I. SCOPE AND DEFINITIONS. — This article embraces proceedings involving municipal corporations proper, and their officers, as well as counties; it excludes, however, matters particularly relating to those quasi-municipal corporations such as towns,¹ school districts,² and drainage and irrigation districts,³ which are treated elsewhere in this work.

Definitions. — A municipal corporation is a body corporate and politic established by law to share in the civil government of the country but chiefly to regulate and administer local or internal affairs.⁴ It possesses a dual character, governmental and private, and in the latter capacity is to be regarded as a private corporation.⁵ In the broader sense, and in common usage, the term municipal corporations includes counties.⁶

II. SUITS AND ACTIONS GENERALLY.—A. BY AND AGAINST MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.—1. Generally.—While municipal corporations generally possess only such powers as are granted to them by the legislature,⁷ the capacity to sue,⁸ and be sued,⁹ is either expressly conferred upon them by statute,¹⁰ or is implied as a necessary incident of the corporate existence of a municipality.¹¹ A statutory or charter provision expressly giving a municipal corporation the power to sue and be sued carries with it the authority to compromise claims,¹² and includes actions in equity.¹³ Neither the fact that a vision, the filing of a notice of claim with the municipality prior to the commencement of an action is not necessary.³⁰ And a municipality cannot by ordinance prescribe that all claims against it must be presented before the institution of legal proceedings thereon.³¹

In the absence of an express statute no action can be maintained against a municipal corporation for a breach of duty imposed upon it in the exercise of its governmental functions,²⁴ even though the plaintiff has sustained special damages.²⁵ Hence, a municipal corporation cannot be sued for failure to enforce its ordinances,²⁶ or to exercise its discretionary power.²⁷ But where a municipal corporation exercises proprietary or business powers it may be sued for damages alike with private corporations.²⁸

Statutory or charter provisions requiring the presentation of claims prior to the commencement of an action, are generally regarded as a condition precedent and are deemed mandatory.³² The claim must be presented within the prescribed time unless the claimant is wholly incapacitated from doing so.³³ But in some jurisdictions the omission to present a claim as required does not bar an action thereon but merely deprives plaintiff of his right to the recovery of costs.³⁴ Where the statutory or charter provision gives the municipal authorities a certain period of time within which to pass on the claim, no

Actual notice, by the municipal authorities, of the claim, does not dispense with the necessity of giving the statutory notice.³⁶ But it has been held that where a presentation of the claim would have been manifestly useless, it is not a condition precedent to the maintenance of an action.³⁷ Thus, where the debt is wholly repudiated by the municipality the statutory requirement of notice has no application.³⁸ Statutory and charter provisions requiring the presentation of claims are not applicable to actions for equitable relief solely.³⁹ Hence, a claim against a municipal corporation arising from a nuisance need not be presented to the municipal authorities before an action thereon can be maintained.⁴⁰

Such provisions for notice are not to be construed liberally against the rights of a claimant but are applicable only to cases which clearly come within their terms.⁴¹ Thus, a provision that demands against a municipal corporation,⁴² or that all accounts and demands against it⁴³ shall be presented for allowance or rejection prior to the commencement of an action is not applicable to actions arising out of a tort. Nor does a statutory provision declaring that no action shall be brought against a municipality for any debt or demand without previous presentation apply to actions ex contractu where the damages are unliquidated.⁴⁴ And where a provision expressly refers to actions for damages for injuries it does not include actions for damages based upon breach of contract.⁴⁵ A statutory provision requiring presentation of claims for personal injuries likewise cannot be applied to actions for injuries to property.⁴⁶ But where the law expressly provides that no action can be brought against a municipality without the previous filing of a notice of the claim, the prior presentation of the claim is essential to the maintenance of an action growing out of a tort,⁴⁷ except, it has been held, where the statute or charter provides for "auditing" the claim.⁴⁸ Some statutes⁴⁹ and municipal charters⁵⁰ provide in express terms that all claims for damages must be first presented to the municipal authorities before an action may be brought thereon.

pressly provide that a notice of claim shall not be deemed invalid by reason of any inaccuracy therein contained.

c. Mode of Presentation of Claim.—In the absence of a provision requiring the presentation of claims to a designated officer the service of a notice of claim on the mayor is proper.⁶⁰ But where the statute designates the officer upon whom service of the notice of claim should be made, service thereof upon another municipal officer is insufficient.⁶¹ Thus, under a statute providing for presentation to the chief fiscal officer of the municipality it must be presented to its treasurer;⁶² and it is not sufficient to present it to the board of trustees.⁶³ But service of notice on an assistant of a designated municipal officer is equivalent to service on such officer,⁶⁴ and under a statute requiring the service on the city council, service on the clerk of the council meets the statutory requirement.⁶⁵ Where the statute designates several officers upon whom the notice of claim must be served, service must be made upon all of them.⁶⁶

though they may waive a defect therein.⁶⁸ But a retention by the city authorities of a claim without objection as to its sufficiency constitutes no waiver of the right to rely upon the defects in the notice as a defense to the action.⁶⁹

3. Jurisdiction and Venue.—Municipal corporations, under some statutes, may be sued only in the courts of the county in which they are situated regardless of the ground upon which the cause of action rests.⁷⁰ Where an action against a municipality is improperly brought outside of the county of its residence the action according to some cases may be removed to the proper county,⁷¹ while in other cases it is held that in such event a change of venue cannot be granted but the action must be dismissed for want of jurisdiction.⁷² In some jurisdictions courts of record have exclusive jurisdictions of actions brought against municipal corporations.⁷³

Where exclusive jurisdiction over actions against a municipal corporation is given by statute to a specified court, municipal officers cannot by consent confer jurisdiction upon another court.⁷⁴

4. Form of Action.—A municipal corporation may be sued in any form appropriate to the cause of action and its liability does not differ as respects the form of action from that of a private corporation or individual.⁷⁵

swer upon the ground that no prior notice of the claim had been given is deemed a waiver of such notice. O'Connor v. Fond du Lac, 109 Wis. 253, 85 N. W. 327, 53 L. R. A. 831.

Actions against a municipal corporation as a rule must be brought in the corporate name conferred upon it.⁸⁰ But where no distinct corporate name has been given it, an action against it may be brought in the name of the officers in whom under the charter the corporate power is vested.⁸¹ A municipality re-incorporated under a new corporate name is a necessary party to an action upon an obligation incurred by its predecessor.⁸² And a municipal corporation which has acquired mortgaged property is a necessary party to an action brought by the mortgagee to foreclose the mortgage.⁸³ The inhabitants are not parties to an action brought against a municipal corporation and cannot be joined as such although their property may be taken to satisfy the judgment against the municipality.⁸⁴ Joint tort feorsors with a city may be joined in an action against it,⁸⁵ and the statute sometimes requires such joinder.⁸⁶

Where an action is brought by a municipal officer in his representative capacity a municipality which did not authorize the bringing of the action may intervene therein.⁸⁷ In an action upon a claim against a city payable out of a fund in the hands of its treasurer, the latter,

if not in default in any way, is not a proper party defendant.⁸⁸ If a municipal officer is sued as such upon a claim payable by the city from its corporate funds, the city must be joined as a defendant.⁸⁹

6. Process and Appearance.—a. Generally.—The general statute regulating service upon corporations has no application to municipal corporations and in the absence of an express statute in reference thereto service on the mayor or other head officer in accordance with the common law is sufficient.⁹⁰ Some statutes designate the officer upon whom service in behalf of a municipal corporation is to be made,⁹¹ and where a particular method of service of process upon a municipal corporation is prescribed by the statute, such method must be followed.⁹² To support a default judgment against a municipal corporation, it must appear of record that the person who was served with process has such a relation to the municipality that service on him was tantamount to service on the corporation.⁹³

b. Waiver of Process.—Service of process upon a municipal corporation, as a rule, cannot be waived without express authorization,⁹⁴ but the entry of an appearance by a city attorney for a municipality renders the service of process unnecessary and in the absence of a showing to the contrary such appearance will be presumed to

[b] General Law and Charter Different.—Where the general law prescribing the manner of service of summons upon municipal corporations is different from a charter provision of a municipality, the latter provision must be followed and is not superseded by the general law. *Stabler v. have been authorized.⁹⁵ And it has been held that the entry of an appearance by the mayor of a city without service of process is binding upon the municipality.⁹⁶

c. Appearance by and Authority of Counsel.—A municipal corporation having the power to sue and be sued may appear of record by any counsel it may choose to employ.⁹⁷ But where an action is brought for a municipality by a city attorney who under the municipal charter is authorized to conduct its law business it is not necessary to aver that the municipality directed the commencement of the action,⁹⁸ and the acts of a city attorney within the general scope of his authority are binding upon the municipality.⁹⁹ Counsel for a municipal corporation generally has the same powers in reference to the disposition of a cause as an attorney representing a private person.¹ He may, unless expressly restricted in his authority, consent to a reference of a cause,² and take an appeal from a judgment against a municipal corporation.³

7. Declaration or Complaint.—a. Generally.—It is not necessary to allege that a municipality organized under a charter is a corporation as the court will take judicial notice of the charter and the identity of such municipality.⁴ In the absence of a charter, averments that the defendant is a municipal corporation organized under a certain statute,⁵ or that it is a municipality of a certain class,⁶ a city⁷ or a village⁸ sufficiently show the corporate existence of the defendant municipality. The various preliminary steps by which the municipality became organized need not be set forth.⁹ A municipal corporation which appears and defends in its corporate name admits its corporate existence,¹⁰ and cannot thereafter raise an issue as to its organization.¹¹

The charter of a municipal corporation, being a public law, need not be pleaded,¹² and a recital of the provisions of a charter may be stricken out as redundant matter.¹³ But where the act incorporating a municipality is not a public law the courts cannot take judicial notice of its provisions unless it is pleaded.¹⁴ It is not necessary for a municipal corporation to allege that it has a legal capacity to sue.¹⁵ And where the action is brought in the corporate name of the municipality by its proper officers it need not be averred that it authorized the bringing of the action as such authorization will be presumed until the contrary is shown.¹⁶

Notice of Claim. — Where the presentation to the municipal authorities of a notice of claim is by the statute or charter made a condition precedent to the maintenance of an action thereon, an omission to show in the complaint a substantial compliance with such provision renders the complaint fatally defective.¹⁷ So too, it must appear from the complaint that such notice had been presented within the prescribed time,¹⁸ or a sufficient excuse for the failure to do so must be shown.¹⁹ But it is not necessary to attach to the complaint a copy of the notice of claim presented to the municipal authorities,²⁰ or to recite the contents thereof,²¹ although it has been held, that the complaint must disclose that the plaintiff by such notice furnished the municipal authorities with information sufficient to pass upon the claim.²² An averment that the claim sued upon has been rejected by the municipal authorities likewise is essential to the statement of a good cause of action.²³ While a failure to allege a due presentation of a notice of claim ordinarily may be remedied by an amendment,²⁴ it is a fatal defect which is not cured by verdict.²⁵

b. In Actions on Contracts.—A general allegation that the municipality duly entered into the contract sued upon ordinarily is sufficient to show that it was authorized to make such contract,²⁶ and it is not necessary to set forth every step which led up to the making of the contract.²⁷ But a complaint on a contract must show the validity of the contract under the statute or municipal charter,²⁸ and some authorities require the complaint to show that officers executing a contract were authorized to contract for the municipality.²⁹ An averment that the municipality has ratified a contract made by its officers is not sufficient unless it sets forth the acts by which such ratification was part of plaintiff,⁵¹ and the pleading of damages⁵² are treated elsewhere.

Where the right to compensation for services rendered to a municipality depends upon certain conditions the complaint must show the existence of such conditions.³⁴ In actions on implied contracts for services rendered, it is sufficient to allege the employment without designating the particular officer through whom the municipality acted,³⁵ or his authority to act,³⁶ but it must affirmatively appear from the complaint that the services were accepted by the municipal corporation.³⁷ In an action based upon an alleged wrongful rescission of a contract the orders of the municipal council in regard thereto must be set forth.³⁸

8. Answer or Plea.—a. Generally.—The general rules of pleading pertaining to answer or plea are applicable to actions against municipal corporations.⁵³ The answer to a verified complaint must be made under oath of the proper municipal officer.⁵⁴ Where the fact alleged in the complaint is presumptively within defendant's knowledge a denial of such allegation upon information and belief is insufficient.⁵⁵ New matter constituting the defense of a municipality must be pleaded. Thus, the omission to present the claim sued on within the prescribed time,⁵⁶ the sufficiency of the notice of claim,⁵⁷ the invalidity of the contract sued upon,⁵⁸ and fraud in obtaining it,⁵⁹ as a rule must be specially averred.

b. Ultra Vires.—Where a corporation seeks to avoid its own contract on the ground of its want of power to contract it must make good its defense by the plea of ultra vires.⁶⁰

9. Trial.—a. Variance.—The general rules in reference to variance⁶¹ apply to actions by and against municipal corporations. Thus a variance between the allegations and proof is not material unless it misleads the adverse party to his prejudice.⁶² Under an averment of knowledge of danger on the part of the municipality evidence of actual as well as constructive notice is admissible.⁶³ But a material variance between the claim as presented to the municipal authorities and the proof is fatal.⁶⁴ Where the proof substantially sustains the statements contained in the notice of claim, an inaccuracy in the notice which could not have misled the municipality is not material.⁶⁵ But the variance is material where the proof shows that plaintiff's injury was received at a different place,⁶⁶ or on a different day⁶⁷ than that designated in the notice of claim. A variance as to the amount of damage claimed is not material and the fact that a claimant in his notice specified a less amount of damage than the amount sued upon does not preclude him from recovery of the whole amount demanded in the complaint,⁶⁸ though there is authority to the effect that the right of recovery of damages is limited to the amount specified in the notice of claim.⁶⁹ Proof of waiver of notice of claim is a fatal variance from an allegation that such notice was given.⁷⁰

Pursuant to the general rule⁷¹ that in actions founded upon negligence recovery may be had only for the specific acts of negligence charged, proof that the damage was caused by an act different from that pleaded constitutes a fatal variance,⁷² unless the averments of the complaint are sufficiently broad to cover the negligent act, which the proof shows caused the injury.⁷³

b. Province of Court and Jury.—Whether the mode of presentation and delivery of a notice of claim constituted a compliance with the statute in reference thereto is not a question for the jury but must be determined by the court,⁷⁴ as must the legal sufficiency of the notice,⁷⁵ unless the issue is raised as to whether the statements contained in the notice of claim placed the municipality in a position to investigate the claim.⁷⁶ But where the notice of claim was filed after expiration of the time provided therefor the question whether such notice was presented within a reasonable time after plaintiff's disability ceased is for the jury.⁷⁷ And where the evidence is conflicting it is for the jury to determine whether or not the notice of claim was duly served on the municipal corporation.⁷⁸ The question whether a notice of claim was prepared with the intent to mislead and in fact misled the municipal authorities must likewise be submitted to the jury.⁷⁹

Where the action against a municipal corporation is founded upon negligence, the rules regulating the province of court and jury in such cases⁸⁰ apply. Accordingly, the questions as to what duty the municipal corporation owed to the plaintiff,⁸¹ whether there was a breach of duty on its part,⁸² and what the proximate cause of the

to charge the jury on an issue not supported by any evidence,⁹³ or to omit to charge on an issue which is supported by the proof.⁹⁴ In the absence of a controversy in reference to a notice of claim it is proper to reject an instruction submitting to the jury the question of delivery of such notice.⁹⁵ The giving of an instruction which is not applicable to the issues, however, does not constitute reversible error unless it appears to have been prejudicial to the substantial rights of the complaining party.⁹⁶ Instructions which as far as they are correct are covered by other instructions are properly refused.⁹⁷ And an instruction which attempts to define the liability of the municipality and leaves out one of the basic elements of such liability constitutes prejudicial error.⁹⁸ It is error for the court to assume the existence of contested facts,⁹⁹ unless the facts are such as the court is bound to judicially notice.¹ And the court by its instructions should not invade the province of the jury.² The charge should not be contradictory³ or misleading.⁴ And it is proper to reject a requested instruction which is argumentative⁵ or abstract⁶ and calculated to mislead.⁷

d. Judgment and Costs.—In the absence of a statute prohibiting it, a judgment by default⁸ or confession⁹ may be entered against a municipal corporation in the same manner as against a natural person or a private corporation. A judgment against a municipal corporation, except in a proceeding in rem, should not specify any particular fund from which the judgment is to be paid, but the judgment must leave the plaintiff to pursue the remedy which the law provides to obtain satisfaction of his judgment¹⁰ unless the law upon which the claim is based expressly contains the condition that any amount due thereunder shall be payable out of a certain fund.¹¹ And where a judgment against a municipality provides for its satisfaction out of a certain fund it is error to enter another judgment in an action on the first judgment omitting the restriction as to the mode of payment.¹² A municipal corporation generally is not exempt from payment of costs, and a judgment therefor may be rendered against it.¹³

In some jurisdictions the statute provides that no judgment for costs can be recovered against a city where the claim sued on was not previously presented to the municipal authorities.¹⁴ Such statute must be strictly construed,¹⁵ and does not apply to costs in special proceedings¹⁶ or on appeal.¹⁷

10. Enforcement of Judgment.—a. Generally.—A judgment against a municipal corporation has no other effect than to establish the validity of the plaintiff's claim,¹⁸ and gives him no greater right to the payment of his claim than is given by the statute in reference to the disposition of the revenues of a municipal corporation.¹⁹ Such a judgment is not a lien upon its public property which is necessary to carry out the general purpose for which such corporation is organized,²⁰ and it is error to award an execution against a municipal cor-

The general rules³⁴ regulating mandamus proceedings apply to petitions for mandamus against municipal corporations to enforce execution on a judgment. The right to the writ must be legal and clear,³⁵ and it must appear from the allegations of the petition that the petitioner has no other remedy,³⁶ and that the debt is one for which a tax may be levied.³⁷ It is not necessary, however, to allege that the municipality had the necessary funds to pay at the time the debt was contracted.³⁸ The record of the judgment cannot be contradicted in mandamus proceedings,³⁹ nor can the legality of the contract on which the judgment was founded.⁴⁰ A municipality has no discretion to refuse to audit a valid judgment against it and must provide for its payment.⁴¹ strictly construed, such power may be implied from other rights and powers given by the statute.⁴⁶ Thus, where a county has authority to make a contract it follows as an incident thereto that it may sue or be sued concerning it.⁴⁷ And a statute making the county liable impliedly authorizes the bringing of an action against the county upon such liability.⁴⁸ But it has been held that a statute authorizing counties to commence and prosecute suits at law or in equity does not imply that an action can be maintained against them.⁴⁹ Nor does a statute authorizing county commissioners to sue for the recovery of county funds empower them to bring an action for a tort.⁵⁰

Under some statutes actions may be brought against a county upon implied as well as express contracts.⁵¹ A county is not liable at common law for the tortious acts of its officers whether committed in its behalf or otherwise. Hence, the right to bring an action against a county for a tort must be predicated upon the statute.⁵² In some cases it is held that where a county is empowered to sue and be sued, an action may be brought against it to recover damages for a tort,⁵³ while according to others, such liability cannot be inferred from a statute authorizing the maintenance of actions by and against counties.⁵⁴ Under some statutes actions may be maintained against a county to recover damages sustained by a riot,⁵⁵ and by want of repair of a bridge.⁵⁶

2. Prerequisites to Action.—Some statutes require the presentation of claims to the county as a condition precedent to the maintenance of an action against it.⁵⁷ But in the absence of a statute to jurisdictions a justice of the peace has jurisdiction of actions against a county,⁶⁵ while in others it is expressly provided by the statute that actions against a county must be brought in a court of general jurisdiction.⁶⁶

4. Parties.—a. Generally.—The power of a county to sue and be sued being purely statutory, the mode of instituting an action prescribed by the statute must be strictly followed.⁶⁷ In some jurisdictions actions by or against counties must be prosecuted in their corporate names,⁶⁸ while in others actions by or against a county must be prosecuted or defended in the name of the board of county commissioners,⁶⁹ or board of supervisors.⁷⁰ A statute authorizing a county board to sue on behalf of a county does not empower such board to bring an action in its own name.⁷¹ Accordingly, under a statute requiring county commissioners to sue in the name of the county of which they are commissioners, an action brought by them in their names must be treated as one instituted by them in their individual and not in their representative capacity.⁷² Where the statutory requirement in regard to the name in which a county must be sued is disregarded, the judgment is a nullity.⁷³

b. Joinder of Parties.—A county is a necessary party to an action brought against its treasurer to recover a sum of money owed by the county.⁷⁴ A county auditor is not a necessary party to an action brought against a county for the recovery of salary alleged to be due to one of its officers.⁷⁵ Where a county is sued upon a demand for which other counties are partly liable such counties may be joined by it as parties defendant.⁷⁶

5. Process.—The statutory provisions prescribing the manner of service of process upon a county must be strictly complied with.⁷⁷ Under some statutes service of process must be made upon the commissioners,⁷⁸ or the president of the board of county commissioners,⁷⁹ while in accordance with other statutes service of process upon the county clerk is sufficient.⁸⁰

Where the cause of action against a county is based upon a special statutory power, every essential element of such power must be set forth in the complaint.⁸⁴ The complaint must affirmatively show all the facts required by law to render the obligation sued upon a valid and subsisting claim against the county.⁸⁵ Where the statute specifies the conditions upon which an action sounding in tort may be brought

III. ACTIONS CONCERNING WARRANTS AND BONDS. — A.

ACTIONS ON WARRANTS, ORDERS OR DEMANDS. — 1. Generally. — An action on a municipal warrant as a rule may be maintained and the holder thereof is not bound to resort to mandamus proceedings,⁹⁸ or to sue on the original indebtedness,⁹⁹ though there is authority to the effect that a municipal warrant cannot be made the foundation of an action but is merely evidence of the debt.¹ But where a warrant or order is payable out of a particular fund which is exhausted, mandamus is the proper remedy to compel the municipal officers to take the proper steps to raise such fund,² and no action can ordinarily be maintained on such warrant,³ but the holder of the warrant may sue warrants,¹⁷ but it is not necessary to allege upon what ground payment was refused.¹⁸

3. Plea or Answer.¹⁹—Where the execution of the warrants sued upon is denied by a verified answer such answer puts in issue not only the signature of the municipal officers but the authority to issue the warrants on behalf of the municipality.²⁰ The defendant may interpose any defense going to the validity of the warrant.²¹

B. ACTIONS ON BONDS AND COUPONS.—1. Generally.—An action at law on the bonds²² or coupons,²³ ordinarily is the proper remedy of a holder of municipal bonds or coupons unless an action thereon is expressly prohibited by the statute.²⁴ The fact that the bonds are payable out of a special fund,²⁵ or through the agency of state officials,²⁶ does not affect the right to maintain an action on municipal bonds. Where bonds are issued by a municipal corporation for a lawful purpose but the statutory requirements in regard thereto are not complied with, the bondholder may bring an action for money had and received.²⁷ But where the municipal corporation has not received the proceeds from the sale of the bonds,²⁸ or had no authority to create the indebtedness itself,²⁹ no such action is maintainable. A holder of a municipal bond cannot resort to a suit in equity to compel the municipality to levy a tax for the payment of the bonds before exhausting his remedy at law by bringing an action thereon.³⁰ He cannot recover in the same action a judgment for the amount due and also obtain an order directing the municipality to levy a tax to pay it.³¹

Where the bonds are in excess of the constitutional limitation, an action in equity may be maintained to ascertain whether part of the indebtedness of such bonds can be recognized and enforced without violating the constitutional limitation.³² And a holder of municipal bonds payable from a special fund may bring suit in equity either against the municipal corporation to prevent it from misapplying the moneys of the special fund,³³ or against the municipal officers whose duty it is to pay such moneys on the outstanding bonds to compel them to apply the special fund to the payment of the bonds,³⁴ or the interest thereon.³⁵ In some jurisdictions mandamus lies to compel a municipality to levy taxes for the payment of improvement bonds.³⁶ And where one of the conditions upon which the bonds were issued is that no action should be brought thereon, mandamus is the exclusive remedy of a bondholder.³⁷

is attached to the complaint.⁴⁵ It is not necessary, however, to set out the ordinance which conferred upon the municipal corporation the authority to issue the bonds,⁴⁶ or, under some authorities, to show that all the requirements of the statute in reference to the issuance of the bonds have been complied with.⁴⁷ A general allegation that the bonds were executed and issued in conformity to law has been held sufficient.⁴⁸ Under a statute restricting the issuing of bonds by a municipal corporation to a certain amount the plaintiff need not negative the over-issue of the bonds sued on.⁴⁹ Nor is the plaintiff required to allege that the bonds were not issued in excess of the debt limit,⁵⁰ or that they were bought by him at their face value.⁵¹ The complaint must show that the bonds were issued for a purpose for which the municipality has the power to issue bonds.⁵² An allegation that the defendant by its duly elected and qualified officers executed the bonds sued upon constitutes a sufficient averment of the proper execution of the bonds.⁵³ In an action on coupons made payable at a particular place it is not necessary to allege presentation for payment at such place.⁵⁴

IV. MANDAMUS AGAINST MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, THEIR OFFICERS AND BOARDS.—A. MANDAMUS AGAINST MUNICIPAL OFFICERS GENERALLY.—Municipal officers belong to the class of officers within the superintending control of the courts by mandamus.⁷⁰ Accordingly the writ may be issued against the members of town or city councils,⁷¹ boards of supervisors or commissioners,⁷² election boards,⁷³ and health boards,⁷⁴ as well as against the mayor of a city or town,⁷⁵ the treasurer,⁷⁶ clerk,⁷⁷ controller,⁷⁸ and police officers.⁷⁹

B. APPLICATION OF GENERAL RULES RELATING TO MANDAMUS.—1. Rule as to Control of Discretionary Acts.—The general rule that mandamus will not lie to control the exercise of a discretion applies to mandamus to municipal corporations.⁸⁰ But this rule does not prevent the issuance of the writ against a board as a body wherein the several members are entitled to vote and are equally divided as to performing acts required by law. While in such case the performance of acts enjoined by law may admit of the exercise of discretion, the board is required to exercise its discretion as such, and so long as the complaint is fatally defective. Strang v. Cook, 47 Hun 46, 14 N. Y. St. 150.

as it has failed to perform the acts prescribed by law, it has failed to exercise its discretion.⁸¹

2. Effect of Other Adequate Remedies.—The existence of other adequate legal remedies prevents the issuance of mandamus with respect to municipal matters.⁸² There is a difference of opinion as to whether the remedy by action against the municipality is adequate so as to prevent relief by mandamus. In many states this remedy is not considered adequate.⁸³ Especially is this so when it is necessary to enforce any judgment recovered by obtaining a warrant on the treasurer.⁸⁴ On the other hand, many courts hold that the remedy by action against the municipality is adequate.⁸⁵ And this would seem to be unquestionable where the law allows the judgment creditor to enforce his judgment by levying on the property of the inhabitants of the municipality.⁸⁶

But a remedy by criminal proceedings against the officer refusing to perform his duty,⁸⁷ or by petition to remove him,⁸⁸ is not considered adequate, although it is sometimes considered by the court in exercising its discretion to deny the writ.⁸⁹

3. Parties.—The general rules as to parties in mandamus apply to a mandamus proceeding against a municipal corporation or its officers.⁹⁰ Under a statute authorizing the issuance of mandamus against a corporation, the writ may issue against a city in its corporate name.⁹¹ Generally to enforce the performance of duties upon a municipal corporation, the proceeding may be instituted against both the city and its common council, or other officers whose duty it is to act, or against either of them.⁹² But in a proceeding to compel municipal officers to perform their ministerial duties, the municipality is not a necessary party to the action.⁹³ A mandamus proceeding against a common council should be against them as a body and not individually.⁹⁴ The fact that there may be an entire change in the members composing the council will not affect the proceeding.⁹⁵

4. Pleadings and Writ. — a. Generally. — The pleadings and writ in this class of cases follow the rules elsewhere treated.⁹⁶

b. Service. — Although the proceeding may be brought against the municipal corporation or a board, the peremptory writ should be served upon those officers or members whose special duty it is to act.⁹⁷

C. MANDAMUS IN PARTICULAR CASES. — 1. To Enforce Duties Imposed by Charter. — Mandamus is a proper remedy to compel a municipal corporation to perform a duty imposed upon it by its charter.⁹⁸

2. Boundaries. — The duty of the governing body, upon petition, to fix boundaries disconnecting certain territory, will be compelled by mandamus,⁹⁹ even though the time within which the duty should have been performed has elapsed.¹ The fact that the tribunal erroneously determined the petition insufficient will not preclude relief.²

4. Meetings and Proceedings Therein.—The duty of city councils⁴ or of county boards⁵ to meet and perform certain duties may be enforced by mandamus. And if because of a deadlock they fail to act, mandamus is a proper remedy.⁶ But mandamus is not a proper remedy to compel aldermen⁷ or clerks,⁸ to attend meetings and perform their general official duties. The mayor or chairman of a municipal board may be compelled to reverse his decision on a resolution and to declare it lost or carried as the case may be.⁹ of the county treasurer⁵⁵ to compel the payment or credit.

g. Record and Recovery of Money Received by an Officer.—Mandamus is a proper remedy to compel county commissioners to institute proper proceedings to recover funds in the possession of an officer belonging to the municipality,⁵⁶ and to compel municipal officers to perform a duty to pay over money and fees, where the amount is not in controversy.⁵⁷ But it is not a proper remedy to compel the payment of money received by the officer in his individual capacity for services which are no part of the duties of his office.⁵⁸ And where the return raises disputed questions of law or fact which ought not to be tried in a mandamus proceeding, the court will deny its writ.⁵⁹

Record.—Mandamus lies to enforce the duty of an officer to enter of record fees received by him,⁶⁰ and submit his books to officers authorized to inspect them.⁶¹

h. Payment of Debts Owed by Other Municipalities.—Where one municipality has money belonging to another, mandamus is a proper remedy to compel the passing of a resolution directing payment of a fund raised,⁶² and the issuance⁶³ and payment⁶⁴ of a warrant.

On Division or Annexation. — Mandamus will lie to compel an adjustment of accounts on division of a municipality or on annexation of territory thereto;⁶⁵ but as the adjustment is an act requiring the exercise of judgment, the action of the board will not be controlled.⁶⁶ A ministerial duty to pay the amount reported,⁶⁷ or to levy a tax for its payment,⁶⁸ may be enforced, unless the board failed to determine the debt in the manner prescribed by law.⁶⁹

i. Compelling Replacing of Money Paid Out. — Mandamus is not a proper remedy to compel a treasurer to replace money paid out on a warrant regular on its face but voidable by reason of extraneous circumstances.⁷⁰

j. Compelling Suit To Recover Money Wrongfully Paid. — A statute providing that it is the duty of the district attorney to institute suits against persons to whom money has been paid on order of the board of supervisors made without authority of law, vests a discretion in him not controllable by mandamus.⁷¹ Furthermore the court cannot oversee his action to see that he takes all proper steps and proceedings in the case.⁷²

action on bids submitted in response to an advertisement therefor.⁷⁵ But the award of a contract cannot be compelled by mandamus if the matter rests in the discretion of the municipal authorities;⁷⁶ and even though the authorities have no discretion, mandamus is not a proper remedy if the relator's right is not clear,⁷⁷ if the provisions of the statute and the precise nature of the duty is not clear and distinct,⁷⁸ or if the municipality failed to comply with statutory prerequisites to the making of the contract.⁷⁹ And if the relator was guilty of fraud, the court will not compel the award of the contract to him.⁸⁰ If the person to whom the contract was wrongfully let has completely executed it, the relator will be left to his remedy by action.⁸¹

(II.) To Compel Letting of Contract to Lowest Bidder. — The weight of authority is to the effect that a person who has submitted the lowest bid in response to an advertisement for bids on a contract cannot compel the award of a contract to him after it has been let to another.⁸² Especially is this so when the board is empowered to reject any and all bids.⁸³ Reasons sometimes given for the general rule are that the relator has an adequate remedy in damages,⁸⁴ and that the statute requiring the letting of the contract to the lowest bidder is for the protection of the public, not of the bidder.⁸⁵ But the reason most generally given is that the duties of the municipal tribunal are discretionary. This is obvious where the statute requires the award of the contract to the lowest and best or lowest responsible bidder.⁸⁶ The rule has also been applied under a statute requiring the letting of the contract to the lowest bidder,⁸⁷ although some courts have held that such a statute leaves the board no discretion and that mandamus will lie to compel the award of a contract to the lowest bidder although it has been awarded to another,⁸⁸ if the relator shows a clear legal right in himself.⁸⁹

has once in good faith exercised its judgment as to the amount for which a claim shall be allowed, mandamus will not lie to compel it to audit anew and allow a greater amount,⁷¹ as where they are required to and do fix a reasonable compensation,⁷² unless they allow such a sum only as furnishes evidence of dishonesty and abuse of official power.⁷³

(2.) Liquidated Claims. — If the municipal board refuses to allow a claim that is liquidated by another tribunal,⁷⁴ or by judgment,⁷⁵ or one whose amount is fixed by statute,⁷⁶ mandamus will issue to compel its allowance. And should the board allow the claim for a less than the liquidated amount, the writ will lie.⁷⁷ If the claim consists of several items, some of which are properly rejected, it has been held that the writ may issue as to those items which should have been allowed.⁷⁸

When the board allows a sum in excess of that authorized by law, a tax payer may compel a revocation of the allowance as to the excess.⁷⁹

(3.) Invalid Claims. — Of course when a claim is not a proper charge against the corporation, mandamus will not lie to compel its allowance.⁸⁰

(C.) ALLOWING AMENDMENT OF CLAIM. — Mandamus will lie to compel the auditing officers to allow a claimant to amend an informal bill or claim.⁸¹

[a] In the absence of the mayor's sanction (1) to the council's resolution of a warrant in accordance therewith will not lie (Padavano v. Fagan, 66 N. J. L. 167, 48 Atl. 998), (2) unless in by them, when required by law,¹ or if there are informalities in the presentation of the account which are the basis of the refusal of the officer to issue his warrant,² the peremptory writ will not issue. And although the relator's claim may have been audited and allowed, the writ will not be granted where the order of allowance is wholly unauthorized, or was made by mistake or otherwise.³ This is the case where the claim is not a legal claim against the municipality,⁴ or where the contract with it is illegal.⁵ So also if a warrant does not comply with the statute, the court will not compel the officer to sign it.⁶ If the auditor is directed to draw a warrant in favor of a particular person he cannot be compelled by mandamus to draw a warrant in favor of another even though he has notice of an assignment to the latter.⁷

Where Board Directs Auditor Not To Issue Warrant. — If the board has power to rescind its resolution or order for issuance of a warrant, mandamus will not lie if it has rescinded its action,⁸ but it is otherwise if the board has no such authority.⁹

Where Statute Is Invalid. — If the statute requiring a controller to draw a warrant is invalid on its face, the court will deny the writ.¹⁰

(B.) EFFECT OF LACK OF FUNDS.—Mandamus to compel the issuance of a warrant is not prevented by the lack of funds in the treasury,¹¹ unless, under the statute, the board is under no duty to issue warrants in the absence of funds in the treasury.¹² In such a case, however, the relator may compel the proper officers to include his claim if valid and subsisting, in the estimate for the ensuing year.¹³

(C.) ISSUANCE OF NEW WARRANTS.—Where an auditor has complied with an order of the board and drawn a proper warrant, the court will not mandamus him to draw another.¹⁴ But if the warrants issued are irregular, a duty to issue proper warrants will be enforced by mandamus.¹⁵ And if the warrant drawn is wrongfully collected by the officer drawing it, the issuance of a proper warrant to the claimant will be compelled, as the case is the same as though the warrant was destroyed before delivery.¹⁶ The same is true if the warrant is paid to an officer levying an execution against the claimant, since the warrant is not subject to levy.¹⁷

(V.) Payment of Claims Generally.—(A.) GENERAL RULE.—The payment of claims against a municipality which are not ascertained to be due and are not liquidated by some competent officer or tribunal will not be compelled by mandamus.¹⁸ To justify the issuance of the writ, the fiscal officer of the municipality must have no duty except the mere ministerial act of making payment.¹⁹ If the claim is liquidated and is payable out of a specific fund appropriated and set apart for that purpose, the authorities agree that mandamus is a proper remedy to compel payment on refusal of the treasurer of a demand therefor, because in such case an ordinary action at law is not an adequate remedy.²⁰ And on refusal of the treasurer or other disbursing officer to pay a liquidated claim payable out of the general fund, it is generally held that mandamus is a proper remedy, if the relator's right is clear and there are funds on hand applicable to payment of the claim,²¹ although some courts deny relief on the ground that the party has an adequate remedy at law by action,²² or by summary statutory proceedings.²³ If the claim has not been audited and allowed,²⁴ or if the required warrant or order has not issued,²⁵ payment of the claim will not be compelled.

(B.) WHEN CLAIMS ARE LIQUIDATED. — The term "liquidated" when used in this connection, signifies claims on which the amount due is fixed by law,²⁶ or by some competent tribunal,²⁷ or by agreement of the parties.²⁸ The claim may be ascertained by the action of the municipal authorities by auditing and allowing it,²⁹ or by way of judgment,³⁰ or by the imposition by law of a charge without the action of the municipal authorities, as in the case of fixed salaries of officers and like charges.³¹ Under some statutes, the treasurer is required to pay certain claims on the certificate of specified officers. In such case, the writ will issue without an audit.³²

(C.) NECESSITY OF FUNDS. — (1.) Generally. — A mandamus to compel the payment of claims against municipalities will not issue unless it clearly appears there is money in the treasury appropriated to that purpose, for otherwise the writ would be useless.³³ The court will not direct a payment out of other funds on hand not liable to petitioner's demand,³⁴ even where he has reduced his claim to judgment.³⁵ Nor will the writ direct payment out of funds to be received thereafter.³⁶ The same rule applies where there are other orders or warrants outstanding which will have precedence and will exhaust the funds on hand.³⁷ But even though there were no funds on hand at the time of the presentation of the warrant and at the time of the service of the rule nisi, the writ will issue, it has been held, if the evidence shows sufficient funds came into the hands of the treasurer subsequently.³⁸

(2.) Where Funds Are Misapplied. — In some states, it is held that the inability of the treasurer to pay the warrant or claim will prevent the issuance of the writ of mandamus, even where he has wrongfully paid out the funds, which were appropriated exclusively for the claim in question, on other demands or claims.³⁹ But in other jurisdictions the contrary is held.⁴⁰

(3.) Other Remedies When There Are No Funds. — The lack of funds does not leave the claimant wholly without relief, however. He may maintain an ordinary action at law,⁴¹ or institute mandamus proceedings to compel the levying of a tax,⁴² or the issuance of bonds⁴³ to pay his claim.

(VI.) Payment of Warrants.—(A.) GENERALLY.—If a claim against a municipality has been duly allowed and audited and a proper warrant has issued therefor, and if on presentation for payment, the treasurer refuses to pay it, mandamus will lie, in accordance with the general rules, to enforce the ministerial duty of paying the warrant, if he has funds on hand applicable thereto.⁴⁶ And if the treasurer refuses to pay the warrants in the prescribed order, mandamus is a proper remedy.⁴⁷

Payment of Interest.—The payment of interest will not be compelled except in accordance with the provisions of the warrant.⁴⁸

(C.) CIRCUMSTANCES AUTHORIZING AND PREVENTING ISSUANCE OF THE WRIT.

The relator must have a clear legal right to the payment of the warrant.⁵¹ Although in some states, it is held that the treasurer cannot dispute the warrants or vouchers, unless to show fraud or mistake,⁵² generally if the treasurer refuses to pay a warrant on the ground that the claim was allowed by a board not legally constituted,⁵³ or on the ground the warrant is a forgery, or is illegal,⁵⁴ the court will determine such issue and grant its writ if it finds against the respondent. If the allowance of the claim,⁵⁵ or the issuance of the warrant,⁵⁶ was procured by fraud, the writ of mandamus will not issue. Nor will it issue if the allowance of the claim was without authority of law,⁵⁷ as where the claim is not legally chargeable against the municipal corporation,⁵⁸ or where the contract on which it is based is illegally made,⁵⁹ or where the indebtedness is void.⁶⁰ The same is true if the city disputes the claim,⁶¹ for it has been held the court will not decide this issue in a mandamus proceeding.⁶² Similarly if the warrant was unlawfully issued without an audit by the proper officers,⁶³ or without a direction that the allowed claim be paid,⁶⁴ when these things are necessary, or if the warrant was issued for more than the amount of plaintiff's claim,⁶⁵ or if the warrant itself is defective,⁶⁶ the court will deny its writ to compel payment.

Where Prohibited From Paying Warrant. — Where the officers allowing the claim have authority to rescind their action and direct the treasurer not to pay a warrant, a writ directing payment will not issue,⁶⁷ but it is otherwise if their order is held to be without authority.⁶⁸ So also if an injunction from a court of competent authority restrains the treasurer, a mandamus to compel him to violate the injunction will not issue.⁶⁹

Where Offset Is Set Up. — If the relator owes the municipality money for taxes which is an offset, mandamus to compel payment of full amount of warrant will not issue.⁷⁰

Where Payment Is Made to Wrong Person. — Even though the disbursing officer through inadvertence or misapprehension has paid the order or warrant to another who had no claim or pretense of right to the fund paid out, he may be required to pay the warrant to its rightful owner.⁷¹

(VII.) Indorsement of Warrants Not Paid. — If there are no funds with which to pay the warrant, the treasurer may be required to indorse the warrant "not paid for want of funds."⁷²

(VIII.) Particular Claims. — (A.) JUDGMENTS. — As to judgments against municipal corporations, mandamus will lie to compel their allowance where required,⁷³ to compel the issuance of warrant therefor,⁷⁴ and to compel their recordation,⁷⁵ and payment.⁷⁶ If there is not sufficient money to pay the judgment, the court will require the proper authorities to levy a tax for that purpose.⁷⁷

(B.) BONDS. — The mere ministerial duty of paying bonds of a municipal corporation may be compelled by mandamus,⁷⁸ unless it is an open question whether the bonds are valid and the relator is a bona fide holder.⁷⁹ But holders of non-negotiable municipal bonds issued in payment of a public improvement cannot compel payment where the contract therefor was not complied with by reason of the fraud or wrong of the contractor.⁸⁰ Payment in a particular medium will not be required if there is no statute or contract requiring it,⁸¹ or if there is none of that particular medium in the treasury.⁸² A previous auditing, allowance, and issuance of a warrant is not necessary in some states,⁸³ but where they are necessary, the writ will not issue without them.⁸⁴ In the federal courts a judgment is an essential prerequisite to the writ.⁸⁵

Payment of Interest. — Unless the legality of municipal bonds and coupons is controverted,⁸⁶ mandamus will lie to compel payment of the interest or interest coupons,⁸⁷ if there are funds on hand appropriated to that purpose.⁸⁸ Or if there are no funds, the writ will lie to compel the municipality to make provision for payment of interest and levy taxes therefor.⁸⁹ The relator need not obtain a warrant on the treasurer before he can resort to mandamus,⁹⁰ and the fact that he reduced his claim to judgment does not prevent him from compelling payment from the fund raised to pay interest.⁹¹

(C.) SALARIES.—Mandamus is an appropriate remedy to enforce claims for salaries of municipal officers.⁹²

b. Effect of Other Remedies.—(I.) Generally. —The general rule that mandamus will not lie if there exists an adequate remedy at law applies to mandamus proceedings with respect to claims against municipal corporations.⁹³

(II.) Remedy by Appeal. —The remedy by appeal from the action of the board on a claim prevents relief by mandamus.⁹⁴

(III.) Remedy by Action Against Municipal Corporation. —It is generally held that a right of action against the municipality on a claim, will not prevent mandamus to compel the performance of ministerial acts with respect to claims against it⁹⁵ such as the auditing and allowance of the claim,⁹⁶ or the issuance⁹⁷ or payment⁹⁸ of the warrant. This is particularly true where the action would not advance the claim beyond its present status,⁹⁹ and where on recovery, the judgment must be presented for audit and allowance and the party may have to proceed by mandamus to compel its payment.¹ And indeed, it has been held that an action on the warrants which the treasurer refuses to pay cannot be maintained, as mandamus is the proper remedy.² But on the other hand, some courts hold that the remedy by an ordinary action at law against the municipal corporation is an adequate remedy preventing mandamus to compel either the auditing or allowance of the claim,³ or the issuance⁴ or payment⁵ of a warrant issued therefor, particularly where the judgment may be satisfied by a levy upon the estate of any inhabitant.⁶

[a] Illustration.—Where any judg-

(IV.) Remedy Against Officer and Bondsmen.—The remedy by action on the case against the officer for neglect of duty,⁷ or by action on his official bond if he is a bonded officer,⁸ is not an adequate remedy precluding relief by mandamus to compel the auditing or payment of a claim, although it has been held that a summary statutory remedy against the treasurer and his bondsmen precludes relief.⁹ Nor, it has been held, is the remedy by attachment an adequate remedy.¹⁰

of the acts necessary to obtain payment of a claim should be brought on the relation of the owner of the claim.¹¹ The tribunal or officer who issues the order or warrant is not a proper person to compel its payment,¹² although it has been held that the municipality is a proper relator under certain circumstances.¹³ In mandamus to compel the examination of a claim, the joinder of the officer whose duty it is to sign the warrant is improper as he is not in default.¹⁴ franchise cannot be controlled in this way by mandamus.²¹

14. Building Permits.—Mandamus is a proper remedy to compel the municipal officers to act on building plans submitted to them,²² and to compel them to perform a mere ministerial duty to grant a building permit,²³ unless the municipal charter gives the building owner a remedy by appeal to a higher board.²⁴ But where a board in the exercise of its discretion has denied a building permit, mandamus to compel its issuance will not lie,²⁵ except when plans affording no legitimate ground of objection have been arbitrarily or unreasonably condemned.²⁶ The court will not compel the granting of a permit if the plans submitted violate the ordinance, charter or statute.²⁷ Nor will an officer be compelled to grant a permit where an appeal board directs him to withhold it.²⁸ Mandamus will not compel action by the building department in advance of the preparation and adoption of proper plans.²⁹

Revocation.—A court will not compel a building inspector to revoke a building permit unless the construction authorized clearly violates the building regulations in such respects as to endanger the public health, safety, or welfare.³⁰ And it will not compel a revocation because of defects which have been corrected or which the parties are ready and willing to correct.³¹

Mandamus To Refrain From Granting.—It has been held that mandamus will not lie to compel an officer to refrain from granting a permit.³²

15. Licenses.—Mandamus will sometimes lie to compel the issuance of a license.³³

would be wrongfully assuming the management of the municipal affairs of a city,⁴¹ and interfere with a discretionary executive power,⁴² because the duty is not so specific in its nature or of such a character that the court can prescribe a definite act or series of acts which will constitute a performance,⁴³ and because the grievance is purely a public one which cannot be enforced by private citizens.⁴⁴

Directions to Police by Executive. — A statutory duty of the mayor or executive board to direct the police to enter certain places and arrest certain offenders, will not be enforced by mandamus where it is the duty of the police, without such an order, to prosecute all such offenders.⁴⁵ But the vacation of an order by municipal authorities directing the police not to enforce certain laws may be compelled by mandamus, it has been held.⁴⁶

Arrest. — An officer will not be compelled to make arrests where it would be unlawful to do so.⁴⁷

V. INJUNCTION AGAINST MUNICIPALITIES AND THEIR OFFICERS.⁵⁴—A. AGAINST EXCEEDING POWERS.—Equity has jurisdiction to enjoin municipal corporations from performing ultra vires acts and unlawfully exercising or abusing their powers,⁵⁵ or from exercising their powers in an informal or illegal manner.⁵⁶ To support the exercise of this jurisdiction there must be some established equitable ground sufficient to justify a resort to equity, such as the want of an adequate remedy at law, multiplicity of suits, irreparable injury, breach of trust, or the like.⁵⁷

B. AGAINST AUTHORIZED ACTS.—Equity will not enjoin the action of a municipal corporation or its officers while proceeding within the limits of their well-defined powers.⁵⁸ The mere fact that the acts complained of may be unwise, improvident or extravagant,⁵⁹ or that there may be errors or irregularities in the proceedings,⁶⁰ does not make a case for relief by injunction.

C. AGAINST DISCRETIONARY ACTS.—It is a well settled rule in equity that an injunction will not issue to restrain the exercise of the discretionary powers of municipal officers,⁶¹ in the absence of fraud, or some manifest or gross injustice which would constitute an abuse of discretion.⁶² The fact that the court would have exercised the discretion in a different manner,⁶³ or that the majority of the taxpayers are of a different opinion⁶⁴ does not warrant an injunction.

E. JURISDICTION.⁶⁶—The federal courts have jurisdiction of a suit to enjoin the enforcement of an ordinance which is repugnant to the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment,⁶⁷ or which impairs the obligation of a prior contract with the city.⁶⁸

Jurisdictional Amount.—In a taxpayer's suit for an injunction, the test of jurisdiction is not the amount of his tax,⁶⁹ or the probable increase in his tax burden,⁷⁰ but the moneyed amount in the corporate action sought to be enjoined.⁷¹

F. PARTIES.⁷²—1. Who May Sue.—a. State.—The state acting through its appropriate official may institute proceedings to enjoin the illegal exercise of the powers of a municipality.⁷³ This remedy being somewhat extraordinary, the attorney general should not intervene unless the abuse is one of a substantial nature.⁷⁴ It should appear that the public has a substantial interest in the question,⁷⁵ and the right involved should be a public right, or at least not a private right merely.⁷⁶

b. Municipality.—The municipality itself may institute a suit to prevent its officers from proceeding without authority of law.⁷⁷

[d] Under the New York statute (1) the mere illegality of an act which does not involve a waste of public funds does not of itself justify injunctive relief. To be entitled to this relief, it must appear that in addition to being an illegal official act, the threatened act is such as to imperil the public interests or is calculated to work public injury or produce some public mischief. The act must be such that it could be restrained on the application of the attorney-general or some body or officer acting on behalf of the public. Altshul v. Ludwig, 216 N. Y. 459, 467, 111 N. E. 216; Rogers v. O'Brien, 153 N. Y. 357, 361, 47 N. E. 456. See also Southern Leasing Co. v. Ludwig, 217 N. Y. 100, 111 N. E. 470; Slavin v. McGuire, 205 N. Y. 84, 98 N. E. 405, Ann. [c] Under the Ohio statute (1) the action by the taxpayer should be brought on behalf of the corporation, not on behalf of himself or other taxpayers. If not so brought it should be dismissed (Wood v. Pleasant Ridge, 12 Ohio Cir. Ct. 177; Hensley v. Hamilton, 3 Ohio Cir. Ct. 201, 2 Ohio Cir. Dec. 114 [following Cincinnati St. Ry. Co. v. Smith, 29 Ohio St. 291, 303]), unless (2) the court allows an amendment, as it may well do. Shaw v. Jones, 4 Ohio N. P. 372, 6 Ohio Dec. 453.

The state is not a necessary party to a suit by taxpayers for an injunction against municipal officers.⁸²

(II.) Necessity for and Nature of Injury. — Injury to the taxpayer is the gist of the suit, unless statute provides otherwise,⁸³ and equity will not in general grant an injunction in a taxpayer's action unless it appears the taxpayer and his class would be injured by the acts sought to be enjoined.⁸⁴ This rule has suffered a relaxation under special circumstances, however.⁸⁵ It is not necessary that the damage suffered by the complaining taxpayers be different in kind from that suffered by the public in general within the corporate limits;⁸⁶ the damage suffered by the increase of the burden of taxation is sufficient to authorize the suit.⁸⁷ Except under statutes prescribing a jurisdictional amount in chancery suits,⁸⁸ it is no objection to the taxpayer's suit, that he owns property of small value, or that his individual tax burden will be trifling.⁸⁹

(V.) Who Is Taxpayer.—To constitute a person a taxpayer it is not requisite that he be a resident,⁶ or a citizen,⁷ or that he has actually paid taxes.⁸ But some statutes limit the suit to citizen residents.⁹

d. Creditors.—A creditor of the municipality may obtain injunctive relief as against the municipality where the direct tendency of the act sought to be enjoined will deprive him of his security,¹⁰ and where he has no adequate remedy at law.¹¹

e. Other Persons Not Taxpayers.—Persons who are not shown to be taxpayers cannot sue to prevent abuses threatened by municipal officers in the disbursement of corporate funds.¹²

2. Defendants.—The ordinary rules as to parties in equity and in injunction suits apply to taxpayers' suits for injunctive relief against municipalities or their officers.¹³ The municipal officers sought to be enjoined are necessary or at least proper parties, and if the interest or rights of the corporation are affected, it is a proper if not a necessary party.¹⁴ The holders of warrants against a fund are not necessary parties to a suit to restrain a transfer or diversion of money from that fund,¹⁵ unless a question of priority of payment arises.¹⁶

Ordinances.—The parties defendant to a suit to restrain the passage of ordinances should be the mayor and council,¹⁷ not the municipality.¹⁸ But an action to enjoin the enforcement of an ordinance may be brought against a municipality and its officers.¹⁹

Bonds.—In a suit to restrain the issuance of bonds for public improvements the municipality is a necessary party;²⁰ and if the bonds are to be delivered in payment of claims or of improvements contracted for, the claimant or contractor is an indispensable party.²¹ In suits to enjoin payment of bonds on the ground of their alleged invalidity, the holders of the bonds are necessary parties.²²

Municipal Aid. — In a proceeding to restrain a municipal subscription to railroad stock because of its illegality,²³ or to enjoin the collection of a tax to raise funds therefor,²⁴ the railroad is neither a proper nor necessary party. But in a suit to restrain the collection of taxes to pay interest on bonds in the possession of the railroad company, the railroad is a necessary party.²⁵ If the railroad company has negotiated the bonds, the bondholders are necessary parties.²⁶ So also where it is sought to cancel the subscription and enjoin the issuance of bonds, the railroad company which has the stock books,²⁷ and the county agent,²⁸ who has the bonds for negotiation are necessary parties. The board of commissioners are proper parties where they make the subscription,²⁹ and if it is sought to enjoin the collection of a tax therefor the county court who subscribed and levied the tax³⁰ and the treasurer³¹ are necessary parties.

3. New Parties and Intervention. — In actions against municipal officers, the municipality may be made a party by amendment.³² And in an action to restrain payment of a contract on the ground of its illegality, the contractor may come in and intervene.³³

G. DEMAND AND REFUSAL. — Applying the rule obtaining in actions by stockholders in private corporations,³⁴ it has been held that a citizen and taxpayer of a municipality cannot maintain a suit for an injunction to interfere with the control of corporate property or performance of its contracts unless he calls upon the governing body to perform their duties and they refuse to do so.³⁵ This rule does not apply when there is fraud,³⁶ where the threatened action is ultra vires,³⁷ or will create a public nuisance,³⁸ or where the attitude of the municipal officers is such that a demand would be futile,³⁹ or where damaged thereby,⁵⁸ and without fault himself.⁵⁹ A bill for an injunction on the ground the contract was not awarded to the lowest responsible bidder must show fraud or a gross abuse of discretion.⁶⁰ But in an action to prevent execution of a contract awarded without considering all the bids, it has been held that it is unnecessary to allege that the bid not considered was lower than those considered.⁶¹

Clear Case Must Be Shown. — A person claiming unconstitutionality of an ordinance as to him must make a clear showing of that fact.¹⁸

Determination of Unconstitutionality. — Where a proper case is made a court of equity will determine whether or not the ordinance is void, and grant relief if it finds such is the case.¹⁹ Equity will not pass on any more of the ordinance than is squarely before it and is absolutely necessary to a decision of the case.²⁰ And where the plaintiff does not point out any particular provision which injuriously affects his rights, to justify the court in declaring the ordinance void, the ordinance must be void as a whole, not in some of its provisions merely.²¹ Generally the court cannot consider the motives of the council in passing the ordinance in question.²²

(B.) PENAL ORDINANCES. — Void ordinances which are criminal in nature and do not affect rights in property will not be enjoined,²³ as the party has an adequate remedy at law. Furthermore, if the ordinance is enforceable only by indictment and fines or penalties for its violation, equity will not grant an injunction since the invalidity of attempted wrongful application of the funds. But under special circumstances some courts of equity have restrained the issuance of negotiable bonds because of a contemplated misapplication of funds.⁶⁶

If the bonds have already been issued, a perpetual injunction restraining their issuance is erroneous,⁶⁷ although in a proper case the court may require them to be surrendered, or if they have passed into the hands of bona fide holders pending suit, the court may render a money judgment against the parties who obtained them and placed them beyond the jurisdiction of the court.⁶⁸ If the bondholders are not parties, equity will not pass on the validity of the bonds and enjoin the establishment of the enterprise for which the bonds were issued.⁶⁹

(II.) Payment. — Payment of municipal bonds which are illegal or were issued without authority of law may be enjoined.⁷⁰ But an illegal use of the money received from legal bonds is not a ground for enjoining payment.⁷¹

formance of Contracts Generally.—Contracts Within Discretion of Municipality. —Equity will not enjoin the execution,⁶ or carrying out⁷ of contracts within the discretion of municipal authorities when they are not exceeding their powers or abusing their discretion.

Unauthorized and Illegal Contracts.—A taxpayer who will sustain injury⁸ may enjoin a municipality from illegally letting or from entering into unauthorized contracts in the execution of which it will be necessary to expend public money or to incur an illegal indebtedness,⁹ or if already entered into, he may enjoin carrying them into effect.¹⁰ It has been held that if the contract is void and unenforceable as against the city, equity will not enjoin the letting of the contract at the instance of a taxpayer, as he would suffer no injury by its execution.¹¹ But this rule is not strictly followed in all jurisdictions.¹²

A taxpayer may enjoin the making of municipal contracts which will increase the city indebtedness beyond the debt limit,¹³ as well as the execution¹⁴ and carrying into effect¹⁵ of contracts which are void because of a failure to comply with some prerequisite. And if the municipal authorities exceed their powers in inserting conditions in contracts which will unduly increase the price to be paid for the work and therefore amounts to a waste of public funds, an injunction will issue.¹⁶ But a suit to enjoin the execution or carrying out¹⁷ of a contract is premature where the objection is directed at the apportionment of the expense burden.

Where it is doubtful whether the municipal authorities are exceeding their powers, equity will not interfere.¹⁸

If there is no imminent danger that the contract is about to be entered into, an injunction will not be granted.¹⁹

b. Acceptance of Work and Payment.—Payment of illegal contracts will be enjoined,²⁰ unless it would be inequitable to grant the writ.²¹ Where taxpayers knowingly stand by and allow a contractor to incur liabilities under a contract with the municipality, equity will not enjoin its payment because of irregularities in its execution unattended with fraud.²² But where there is a want of power and not merely an irregular exercise of power an estoppel against taxpayers is not applied,²³ although there are authorities to the contrary.²⁴

Acceptance.—The correctness of the judgment of the council as to compliance with a contract will not be reviewed in a proceeding to restrain payment.²⁵ But it has been held that if the municipal authorities are about to accept and pay for work performed under a contract which is not a substantial compliance with it,²⁶ equity will grant an injunction, unless there is a remedy by appeal from the allowance of the claim for work.²⁷

c. To Restrain Violation of Contract.—An injunction will not lie to prevent a municipality from violating its contracts, for there is a plain remedy at law in such case.²⁸ Nor will equity by mandatory injunction command a city to insist that a contractor live up to his contract, as it would require constant supervision of the court to enforce its writ.²⁹ But where a city decides that its contract or franchise has not been complied with, interferes by force with the exercise of the privileges granted, equity will by injunction preserve the status quo and allow the city to pursue its legal remedy.³⁰

d. *Ordinances Amounting to Contracts and Granting Franchises.*³¹ Passage.—Although some cases hold that the passage of ordinances amounting to contracts,³² or granting franchises,³³ is an exercise of the ministerial powers of a municipality and therefore subject to control by an injunction when void, it is the general rule that the passage of ordinances authorizing contracts³⁴ and granting franchises³⁵ is legislative in character and is therefore immune from judicial interference. But whether the act is regarded as the exercise of a legislative or contractual function, equity cannot grant an injunction if the expediency not the legality of the ordinance is in question.³⁶

Publication.—It has been held that a suit to restrain publication of a resolution declaring a necessity exists for a certain improvement is premature.³⁷

Enforcement.—When the legislation with respect to contracts and franchises is sought to be made effective by a mere ministerial act,³⁸

tions in the advertisement will be enjoined.⁴⁸ But a discretion in rejecting bids will not be controlled by injunction unless abused.⁴⁹

(II.) Letting to Lowest Bidder. — Before the municipal authorities have acted on bids submitted in response to an advertisement therefor, equity will not enjoin them from letting the contract to other than the lowest bidder,⁵⁰ although previously they may have adopted a resolution not to award contracts to a certain class of bidders.⁵¹ Furthermore, it has been held that the award of such a contract would be void and would not irreparably injure taxpayers.⁵²

Lowest Responsible Bidder. — Under a statute requiring contracts to be let to the lowest and best or lowest responsible bidder, the municipality has a discretion and will not be restrained from letting the contract to a particular bidder,⁵³ unless there is fraud or a gross abuse of discretion.⁵⁴ Nor will equity compel it to award the contract to a particular bidder by mandatory injunction.⁵⁵

carrying out⁵⁷ of a contract which has been awarded to one who is not the lowest bidder, and which will cast a debt on the county. And if the municipal authorities are about to make payments on the contract, an injunction against payment will issue.⁵⁸ But if a board advertises for bids, when it is not required to do so, equity will not interfere with their discretion and enjoin them from awarding the contract to one who is not the lowest bidder.⁵⁹

no adequate remedy at law. And some statutes provide for taxpayers' suits to prevent waste or injury to any property of a municipal corporation by its officers.⁶⁴ Equity will not interfere with the bona fide exercise of discretion in the management and disposition of municipal property,⁶⁵ even though it may be erroneous and injurious consequences may follow.⁶⁶ As the remedy by injunction will not be granted where it would operate inequitably, equity will not protect the wrongful possession of city property by a party on the ground that jurisdiction to evict him is not vested in the particular officers who assume to act.⁶⁷

8. Purchase of Property.—The exercise of discretion of municipal authorities in purchasing property for the municipality will not be interfered with by injunction in the absence of abuse,⁶⁸ even where the facts alleged indicate a want of prudence and good judgment.⁶⁹ But equity will grant an injunction if the authority reposed in the officers is exceeded,⁷⁰ or if the debt created by the purchase would exceed the debt limit.⁷¹

9. Public Improvements.—A discretion reposing in municipal authorities as to public improvements will not be interfered with by the granting of an injunction,⁷² in the absence of an abuse of discrebetween persons purchasing property for themselves, equity will not restrain the purchase. Winkler v. Summers, 51 Hun 636, 5 N. Y. Supp. 723, 22 Abb. N. C. 80, granting an injunction where it was agreed to pay $11,000 for a lot worth only $8000. See also Ziegler v. Chapin, 126 N. Y. 342, 348, 27 N. E. 471; Lewis v. Providence, 10 R. I. 97. [b] And when the improvement is so nearly completed that the issuance of the injunction would produce confusion and give rise to embarrassing

11. Permits.—A taxpayer may enjoin the issuing of a permit for the construction of a building or other structure in violation of an ordinance under a statute authorizing taxpayers' suits to prevent any illegal official act.⁷⁹ But permitting the work to proceed under a permit already issued will not be enjoined.⁸⁰ The fact that a permit is wrongfully denied does not authorize an injunction against interference with action had without a permit.⁸¹ But if an ordinance is void because it gives arbitrary power to withhold a permit, equity will enjoin its enforcement against persons proceeding without a permit.⁸²

12. Engaging in Private Business.—A taxpayer can enjoin a municipality from unlawfully engaging in a private business⁸³ unless, it has been held, the business is being operated without cost to the city or at a profit.⁸⁴ But the action cannot be brought by a person who in his capacity as a business man suffers injury by the competition.⁸⁵

14. Abatement of Nuisances.⁸⁷ — The proper exercise of a right of a city to abate nuisances will not be interfered with by injunction.⁸⁸ Equity will enjoin the summary enforcement of a void order, ordinance, or resolution singling out and declaring to be a nuisance a structure or business which is not such per se.⁸⁹ But regardless of the validity of an ordinance authorizing municipal authorities to remove certain structures, equity will refuse any writ designed to perpetuate them if they constitute a public nuisance.⁹⁰

18. Highway Officers.—Under proper circumstances, an injunction is a proper remedy to restrain the laying out and opening of a highway,² to restrain improvement or repair,³ to prevent unlawful change of grade of street or prevent enforcement of a void order changing the route of a highway,⁴ to restrain an obstruction on a highway such as a public nuisance,⁵ to restrain injuries to a public highway or street,⁶ and to restrain the unlawful vacation of a highway or street.⁷

VI. ORDINANCES AND THEIR ENFORCEMENT.—A. PLEADING ORDINANCES IN GENERAL.—Municipal ordinances are regarded as private statutes. Hence courts of general jurisdiction do not take judicial cognizance of an ordinance and where a right is claimed thereunder, it must be pleaded.⁸ But where the cause of action is not

Cas. 480, the court refused to enjoin the police from stationing an officer at the door of a saloon and warning people the place was about to be raided. The statute of New York gives the police the right to inspect places where liquors are sold under a license. In Hagan v. McAdoo, 113 App. Div. 506, 99 N. Y. Supp. 255, it is held that this case is to be limited in its application to liquor selling places. See also McGorie v. McAdoo, 113 App. Div. 271, 99 N. Y. reviewing a judgment of a municipal court will likewise take judicial notice of a municipal ordinance,¹³ although there is authority to the contrary.¹⁴

The power of a municipal corporation to enact the ordinance relied upon need not be specifically averred, since it is judicially noticed.¹⁵ Nor is it ordinarily necessary to allege that the ordinance was legally published,¹⁶ but a general allegation that the ordinance was duly adopted is sufficient without an averment of the manner of its publication,¹⁷ unless the statute expressly requires that the mode of publication of an ordinance be set forth in the pleadings.¹⁸

An ordinance generally may be pleaded by quoting its exact language or by setting forth the substance of its provisions;¹⁹ in which

[a] While it is not necessary to set out an ordinance in haec verba, either the part of the ordinance relied upon or all the substantial parts of the ordinance should be set out so that the requirements of the ordinance may appear upon the face of the pleading. *Illinois Cent. event reference to its title or date of enactment is not necessary.²⁰ There is authority, however, to the effect that an ordinance must be set out in full,²¹ or a copy of it attached to the complaint.²² Some statutes permit an ordinance to be pleaded merely by reference to its title, section and chapter,²³ or title and date of adoption.²⁴ But in the absence of statute such an abbreviated pleading of an ordinance without a statement of its substance, is not sufficient.²⁵ While a statutory method of pleading is usually permissive and not exclusive,²⁶ if relied upon it must be strictly followed. Thus, under a statute providing that an ordinance may be pleaded by reference to its title and the day of its passage, it is not sufficient to state merely the number of the ordinance.²⁷

B. MANDAMUS TO COMPEL ENACTMENT.—Mandamus is a proper remedy to compel the enactment of an ordinance where the duty of the council is ministerial merely.²⁸

magistrates,³⁷ recorders,³⁸ town clerks,³⁹ mayors,⁴⁰ and similar local officers or courts.⁴¹ The jurisdiction so far as affected by the amount in controversy is discussed elsewhere in this work.⁴² The proceeding to punish for the violation of an ordinance must be instituted within the geographical boundaries of the municipality.⁴³ A change of venue may be awarded only where the statute expressly authorizes it.⁴⁴

c. Parties.—A prosecution for the violation of an ordinance must be instituted in the name of a municipality, unless otherwise provided by the statute.⁴⁵ Under some statutes such prosecutions must be in the name of the board of commissioners,⁴⁶ or the treasurer of the municipal corporation;⁴⁷ under other statutes they must be conducted in the name of the people.⁴⁸

d. Process.—Process in accordance with the statutory and charter provisions pertaining thereto is generally essential to give a magistrate jurisdiction of a person charged with the violation of an ordinance,⁴⁹ unless by a voluntary appearance the defendant waives service of process.⁵⁰ Depending upon the local law, the process may consist either of summons⁵¹ or warrant,⁵² and where the defendant is in custody it is sufficient to enter the charge on the docket of the magistrate.⁵³

e. Complaint or Information.⁵⁴—It has been held that no written complaint is necessary in the absence of some statute or charter provision requiring it.⁵⁵ But generally a written accusation is required.⁵⁶ A defendant who proceeds to trial without a written charge against him waives the right thereto.⁵⁷ A statutory or charter method of enforcement of municipal ordinances is exclusive and must be followed.⁵⁸ The statutes variously provide for the commencement of a language of the ordinance is not alone sufficient to advise the defendant of the offense sought to be charged.⁷⁷ The time⁷⁸ and place⁷⁹ and other matters essential to the statement of an offense,⁸⁰ must be alleged, pursuant to the general rules elsewhere treated.

Whether provisos or exceptions contained in the ordinance must be negatived in the complaint depends wholly upon the application of rules and principles elsewhere treated.⁸¹

Pleading Ordinance. — Where the court is one which is bound to take judicial notice of an ordinance,⁸² it would seem to be unnecessary to plead the ordinance violated either by setting it out or referring to it specifically by its title or number,⁸³ except perhaps where this may be necessary to advise the defendant of the charge against him.⁸⁴ Generally, however, either by virtue of statute or otherwise it is necessary to plead the ordinance in some manner.⁸⁵ In some states it is sufficient to refer to the ordinance by its title or number and date of enactment,⁸⁶ or, in others the substance of the ordinance may be set forth,⁸⁷ though in some courts it is necessary to plead it in haec verba.⁸⁸ Where the ordinance is set forth it is only necessary to plead the portion or portions of the ordinance which relate to the offense charged.⁸⁹ In some states the adoption of the ordinance by the municipality must be alleged,⁹⁰ but this is not generally required,⁹¹ and neither due publication of the ordinance⁹² nor the corporate existence of the municipality⁹³ need be averred.

[a] A violation of two ordinances though relating to the same general subject but different as to the penalty

unless the ordinance expressly authorizes any number of violations thereof to be included in one charge.⁹⁶ But where an ordinance makes a continuance of the violation thereof a separate and substantive offense, cumulative penalties for the violation of the ordinance may be recovered in the same proceeding.⁹⁷ A person accused of violation of an ordinance and also of a distinct offense under a statute cannot be prosecuted in one proceeding for both offenses.⁹⁸

Amendment.—Generally, a complaint or information charging the violation of an ordinance may be amended in accordance with general principles and rules elsewhere treated.⁹⁹

f. Defensive Pleading.—The defensive pleadings follow the general rules fully treated elsewhere in this work.¹ Thus under appropriate circumstances the defendant may demur,² move to make the complaint more definite and certain,³ or move to quash.⁴ The fact that the complaint follows the form prescribed by ordinance does not prevent the accused from questioning its sufficiency in jurisdictional matters.⁵ It has been held that a defendant who seeks to avoid an ordinance on the ground that it is unequal and oppressive must plead the particular facts.⁶

The effect of interposing or failing to interpose particular pleas or objections is governed by the general rules.⁷

(D.) RECORD. — The contents of the record are governed largely by the extent of the review, whether *de novo*⁵⁷ or revisory merely,⁵⁸ and by the nature of the proceedings in the municipal court, whether civil or criminal.⁵⁹ Where the hearing is de novo the record is necessarily simple,⁶⁰ but where the merits are not inquired into, the points of law relied on must be brought before the court by a proper transcript of the record or substitute therefor,⁶¹ and unless the necessity

[a] On certiorari (1) the record must show everything necessary to constitute a legal conviction. It should show such facts as are necessary to constitute the statutory offense, that the defendant was convicted and the judgment of forfeiture. Bridgeton v. Pierce, 74 N. J. L. 220, 64 Atl. 693. See Mattox v. Glennville, 16 Ga. App. 568, 85 S. E. 765; Elizabeth v. Central R. Co., 66 N. J. L. 568, 49 Atl. 682; Jersey City v. Neihaus, 66 N. J. L. 554, 49 Atl. 444. (2) A mere transcript of the steps taken in the proceedings, together with the complaint and summons, does not constitute a sufficient record. Massinger v. Mill-

[b] Failure to file abstract may result in dismissal of appeal. Marble Hill v. Caldwell, 189 Mo. App. 286, 176 S. W. 294.

[d] Ordinances.—Where the reviewing court does not take judicial notice of municipal ordinances, the ordinance in question must be incorporated in the record. Ga.—Hill v. Atlanta, 125 Ga. 697, 54 S. E. 354; Nobles v. Dublin, 18 Ga. App. 496, 497, 89 S. E. 604; Davis v. Dublin, 17 Ga. App. 737, 88 S. E. 416. Ill.—Chicago v. Richardson, 197 Ill. [h] Errors in the affidavit and warrant are not reviewable unless by proper exceptions to the answer of the magistrate, they are incorporated in the record. Mattox v. Glennville, 16 Ga. App. 568, 85 S. E. 765.

therefor is obviated by statute,⁶² the party must assign errors⁶³ and file briefs⁶⁴ in accordance with the general rules governing such matters.

(E.) STAY PENDING APPEAL.—The city has authority to provide for the stay of proceedings on judgment of conviction in its police court, pending an examination into the same by the circuit court on appeal.⁶⁵

(VI.) Proceedings in Reviewing Court.—(A.) IN GENERAL.—Whether the proceedings in the higher court consist of a trial de novo,⁶⁶ or merely of a review of the action below,⁶⁷ depends entirely upon the statute, which sometimes provides for a summary proceeding without a jury.⁶⁸

(B.) PLEADING.—The pleading below is preserved in the record. Specific provisions relative to pleading in the higher court are sometimes found in the statutes, as for example, provisions dispensing with written pleadings on review⁶⁹ or requiring a brief statement of the cause of complaint.⁷⁰

(F.) REVIEW AND DECISION.—SCOPE OF REVIEW. — Unless the hearing is de novo⁷⁹ the supervisory power of the court will be confined to errors properly brought before it.⁸⁰ It will not scrutinize the proceedings of the municipal court with the same technicality as though the court were one of general jurisdiction.⁸¹ Where there is any evidence to support them neither the findings⁸² nor the verdict⁸³ will be disturbed, nor will errors that are harmless be reviewed.⁸⁴ The usual presumptions, moreover, will be indulged in favor of the proceedings below.⁸⁵

Instructions. — Upon review in the circuit court the defendant is entitled to an instruction that he must be believed guilty beyond a reasonable doubt although prosecutions for violations of municipal ordinances are civil actions.⁸⁶

the action of a municipal body acting within its discretion, even though it might arrive at an opposite conclusion on the same facts.⁹⁸ A municipal council in the exercise of its legislative powers is as free from judicial control as the state legislature,⁹⁹ but it has no such exemption in the exercise of its administrative or ministerial powers even though it may speak through ordinances.¹ Courts of equity have no general supervisory power over the acts and proceedings of the governing bodies of municipal corporations, and equity will not interfere unless the case is brought within some well defined head of equity jurisdiction.²

B. APPEALS FROM DECISIONS OF COUNTY BOARDS. — 1. Generally. The right to appeal from decisions of a county board does not obtain unless expressly conferred by statute,³ but the statutes generally provide for appeals from decisions of county boards involving the exercise of judicial discretion,⁴ thus giving the aggrieved party the choice of either prosecuting an appeal or bringing an independent action at law or in equity.⁵ No appeal lies, as a rule, from decisions of county boards made in the exercise of purely administrative or governmental powers,⁶ unless the statute in express terms authorizes an appeal in such cases.⁷

An appeal may be taken only from a final decision of a county board.⁸ A party having a claim against a county cannot split it so as to accept part of the amount allowed and appeal from the decision rejecting the balance.⁹

2. Parties.—While an appeal from a decision of a county board can be brought only by a party interested in the subject matter,¹⁰ it is held under statutes authorizing any person aggrieved by the decision of a county board to bring an appeal therefrom, that the appellant need not be a party to the proceedings before the board.¹¹ The county cannot be joined with the board as a party to the appeal from a decision of the board.¹²

3. Manner of Taking Appeal.—Where the mode of appealing from a judgment of a county board is prescribed by the statute, the terms of the statute must be strictly complied with.¹³ The party appealing must serve notice of appeal on the county board,¹⁴ and under some statutes must furnish an appeal bond¹⁵ to be approved by the clerk of the county board¹⁶ or the county auditor.¹⁷ But in some states no bond is required.¹⁸

In some jurisdictions a complete transcript of the proceedings of the county board must be transmitted to the clerk of the court to which the appeal is taken,¹⁹ while in others appellant under the statute may embody the facts and evidence in a bill of exceptions to be signed by the president of the board.²⁰

[a] If the transcript is not filed the appeal will be dismissed. Clyne v. Bingham, 7 Idaho 75, 60 Pac. 76. See Shirk v. Moore, 96 Ind. 199, dismissing appeal on the ground no bond and transcript were filed.

[b] The omission of the county clerk to transmit the papers within the time prescribed by the statute does not deprive appellant of the benefits of his appeal. Humbird Lumber Co. v. Kootenai County, 10 Idaho 490, 79 Pac. 396.

20. Bridges v. Clay, 57 Miss. 252.

[a] A bill of exceptions not signed by the presiding officer of the board but simply certified by the county clerk cannot be considered by the court on appeal. Union, etc. Bank v. Board of Thurston Co., 65 Neb. 408, 91 N. W. 286, 92 N. W. 1022.

4. Hearing on Appeal.—An appeal vacates the order of the county board and the cause must be tried de novo.²¹ In some cases it is held that no pleadings are required to be filed on appeal,²² although the court in its discretion may order or permit formal pleadings to be filed.²³ But under some statutes providing for a trial de novo on appeal, pleadings must be filed and issues joined.²⁴ The appellate court is confined to the matters upon which the county board acted.²⁵ Issues of fact on appeal from a decision of a county board must be submitted to a jury in accordance with the general rules unless a jury trial is waived.²⁶

5. Disposition of Appeal.—The action of a county board will not be disturbed on appeal unless there is a clear abuse of discretion.²⁷ The court hearing the appeal may either direct the board to take the necessary legal steps or render a final judgment and make all necessary orders for the enforcement thereof.²⁸ Where the appeal is dismissed for any cause the decision of the board again becomes effective as if no appeal had been taken.²⁹

6. Review of Appellate Decision.—Under some statutes the judgment of a court on appeal from a decision of a county board may be reviewed by appeal or on error.³⁰

C. APPEALS FROM DECISIONS OF CITY BOARDS.—Statutes sometimes authorize appeals to courts from the judgment or decision of the municipal authorities of a city, town or village,³¹ but no such right exists in the absence of statute.³²

D. MANDAMUS.—Where a municipal board acts judicially, mandamus does not lie to correct an erroneous decision.³³

E. INJUNCTION.—The remedy by injunction is not available where the municipal board acted within the limits of its statutory power.³⁴

F. CERTIORARI.—Certiorari will lie to review judicial or quasi-judicial acts of municipal corporations and their boards,³⁵ but not to

H. REVIEW OF ANNEXATION PROCEEDINGS. — Taxpayers of a municipality generally may under the statute appeal from proceedings ordering the annexation of a territory to the municipality,³⁹ or denying a petition to exclude certain territory from its limits.⁴⁰ In a proper case equity will enjoin an illegal annexation or detachment of territory,⁴¹ or the collection of taxes assessed upon land illegally annexed.⁴²

[c] Scope of Appeal.—An appeal in annexation proceedings should be distinguished from ordinary suits or proceedings and is permissible only to correct an abuse of discretion, or irreg-

it is within their authority to prevent the act.⁴⁴ Thus, municipal corporations are liable to indictment for neglect to keep in repair highways, streets and bridges,⁴⁵ for failure to maintain schools as required under the statute,⁴⁶ for creating a nuisance,⁴⁷ and for failing to remove the same.⁴⁸ But a municipality cannot be indicted for the maintenance of a nuisance which is not occasioned by its officers but by private persons.⁴⁹ And generally a municipal corporation is not criminally liable for the acts of its officers in enforcing or for the failure to enforce the penal ordinances of the city in reference to abatement of nuisances.⁵⁰

The indictment should be against the municipality as a corporate body,⁵¹ and must follow the general rules of criminal pleading.⁵² It is not necessary to allege that the defendant is a duly organized corporation where that fact is judicially noticed.⁵³

[a] For What Crimes Punishable. In Com. v. Proprietors of New Bedford Bridge, 2 Gray (Mass.) 339, the rule that municipal corporations may be indicted for a misfeasance is stated in the following language: "Corporations cannot be indicted for offenses which derive their criminality from evil intention, or which consist in a violation of those social duties which appertain to men and subjects. They cannot be guilty of treason or felony; of perjury or offenses against the person. But beyond this, there is no good reason for their exemption from the consequences of unlawful and wrongful acts committed by their agents in pursuance of authority derived from them."

I. HOW ALLEGED.—A person must be designated in the pleadings by name, and not merely by a general description, to become a party to an action.¹ Ordinarily a party should sue or be sued by his true name,² but a person may be sued by a fictitious name, the true name to be inserted by amendment when it becomes known,³ and an abbreviation for the Christian name may be used in the pleading under some circumstances.⁴ A person suing under an assumed or trade name, will afterwards, in his real name, be estopped from denying the validity of the judgment.⁵ The name of a party should be the same in the declaration as it is in the writ.⁶

As to necessity of declaration con-

The anglicized spelling of a foreign name may be used in the pleadings of an action or other proceeding.⁷

Action Upon Contract.—Where an instrument is executed to a party by a wrong name, he must sue in his true name⁸ and allege in his declaration that the instrument was executed to him in the name given in the instrument.⁹ So if a party brings an action upon an instrument wherein he is designated by his initials, he must aver in his pleading what his name really is.¹⁰ In some jurisdictions, it is provided by statute that a person may sue or be sued in the same name by which he is designated in the written instrument upon which the action is brought.¹¹ And where a judgment has been recovered against a person under an erroneous name, in future litigation thereon his true name may be stated, and he may be connected with the judgment by proper averments.¹²

II. IDEM SONANS.—A. IN GENERAL.—The law does not regard the spelling of names so much as their sound,¹³ and by the doc-

III. PRESUMPTION OF IDENTITY.—Identity of person will ordinarily be presumed from identity of name,¹⁸ unless the facts or circumstances are such as to make such inference improper.¹⁹

IV. VARIANCE.²⁰—Ordinarily the pleading should conform to the proof in respect to names, as in all other material matters.²¹ Where the name of a third party is necessary to the description of the offense, proof of a different name than the one alleged in the indictment makes a variance.²² But the variance is not fatal if the identity of the party in the evidence is established with the one named in the indictment,²³ or if the defendant has not been misled or prejudiced in his defense.²⁴ If the name of a person is immaterial mistake in a middle name, or its entire omission, will not support a plea of misnomer,³⁴ nor will the absence of an addition which is no part of the name, support a plea in abatement.³⁵ Misnomer may be objected to by setting it up in the answer.³⁶ A pleading is not subject to demurrer for misspelling the name of a party where the name as alleged is idem sonans with the correct name.³⁷ An objection to the name in which suit is brought cannot be raised by an objection to the jurisdiction of the court.³⁸ Misnomer cannot be taken advantage of by a motion to dismiss,³⁹ nor is it ground for a motion to arrest,⁴⁰ or for a reversal of the judgment.⁴¹ A pleading giving only the initials of the Christian names of the parties is not subject to a demurrer.⁴²

It is a ground of demurrer to the plea of misnomer if the names are idem sonans,⁴³ or if the true name precedes the alleged alias,⁴⁴ or if the ground of the plea is that the middle name of the defendant is not stated.⁴⁵ In some jurisdictions the state, in a criminal case, may file a replication to a plea of misnomer.⁴⁶

B. WAIVER AND CURE OF.—An objection going to the averment of the names in the pleadings cannot be taken for the first time on appeal.⁴⁷ But where the trial is had de novo on appeal, the fact that the misnomer was not presented in the lower court does not constitute a waiver.⁴⁸ An amendment of the name of a party may be made to cure a mistake therein,⁴⁹ and may be made after plea and before trial, upon leave of court.⁵⁰ An error in or insufficiency of the names of the parties is cured by the verdict,⁵¹ or it may be cured by the subsequent pleading of the adverse party,⁵² and a voluntary general appearance may waive misnomer.⁵³

Effect Upon Judgment.—The use of the initials instead of the Christian name will not render the judgment void,⁵⁴ and by failing to object, a party may be concluded though he is misnamed in the judgment.⁵⁵

VII. DESIGNATION OF PARTIES ON APPEAL.—Upon appeal, the parties should generally be designated by the same name as in the proceedings in the trial court,⁵⁶ but a mistake in the notice of appeal in the name of a party will not support a motion to dismiss the appeal, the notice being otherwise duly entitled and intelligible.⁵⁷ In those jurisdictions where the use of the initials, instead of the full Christian name, is not permissible in pleadings,⁵⁸ an assignment of errors must contain the full names, and not merely the initials of the Christian names of the parties.⁵⁹

VIII. CHANGE OF NAME PENDING ACTION.—A change in the name of a party pending the action or proceeding will not affect the merits,⁶⁰ and the action will proceed in the original name.⁶¹

IX. PROCEEDING TO CHANGE NAME. — A. RIGHT TO CHANGE NAME. — 1. At Common Law. — At common law, a man could change his name at will, and sue or be sued by such adopted name,⁶² and this is still true, in the absence of a restrictive statute;⁶³ nor do statutes providing a procedure for the change of name, abrogate the common-law rule.⁶⁴ But the common-law rule does not apply to a corporation, which cannot change its name, either directly or by user, except as authorized by law.⁶⁵

2. Under Statutes. — a. In General. — Statutes in many jurisdictions provide a proceeding for the change of names, either of individuals or of corporations.⁶⁶

Character of Proceeding. — A proceeding to change a name is a judicial one, although no controversy nor actual or threatened denial of petitioner's rights is involved.⁶⁷

b. Jurisdiction. — The court of the county of the residence of the person who petitions for a change of name, has jurisdiction to hear and determine such application.⁶⁸

c. Form and Sufficiency of Petition. — The petition for a change of name must be in the form prescribed by the statutes and rules of court.⁶⁹ Thus it must specify the present name of the person or corporation,⁷⁰ and also the name it is proposed to assume.⁷¹ And it must specify the reason for such change of name.⁷²

d. Order To Show Cause. — Upon the filing of the petition, the court makes an order to show cause, designating the time and place of the hearing,⁷³ which order is published or posted for such time as is prescribed by the statute.⁷⁴

e. Objections to Application. — Any person interested may appear at the time designated in the order for the hearing to show cause why the application for change of name should not be granted.⁷⁵

[a] Contents of Petition.—In Matter of Hamilton, 10 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 79, the court said: "It is our rule in these matters to require evidence by affidavit or by verified petition whether the applicant is married or single; whether he is now a party to any and what action or proceeding in the courts; whether there are any judgments against him; whether there is any outstanding bond or commercial paper, made, indorsed or accepted by him in the name which he wishes to abandon; of his age and birth place and the name of his parents." The petitioner must also allege that he is a citizen of the United States for at least six months prior to making the application and give the place, county where he resides, by street and number, and the length of time he has been such resident, before his application will be granted. Matter of Burstein, 69 Misc. 41, 124 N. Y. Supp. 989.

Scope of Article. — This title includes procedure in judicial proceedings only, excluding matter as to the acquisition of citizenship by legislative grant or by reason of residence in territory ceded by one sovereignty to another.

I. DEFINITIONS. — Citizenship is membership in a political society,¹ and implies a duty of allegiance on the part of the member and a duty of protection on the part of the society.²

Naturalization is the act of adopting a foreigner, and clothing him with the privileges of a native citizen.³

2. Luria v. United States, 231 U. S. 9, 34 Sup. Ct. 10, 58 L. ed. 101.

[a] A citizen, in the popular and appropriate sense of the term, is one who by birth, naturalization or otherwise, is a member of an independent political society called a state, kingdom, or empire, and as such is subject to its laws and entitled to its protection in all his rights incident to that relation. *Dorsey v. II. JURISDICTION OF COURTS.—A. GENERALLY.—What courts have jurisdiction in naturalization proceedings, whether original or appellate, must be determined by the laws enacted by congress.⁴

B. FEDERAL COURTS.—United States district courts in any state, for the territories of Hawaii and Alaska, the supreme court of the District of Columbia, and formerly the United States courts for the Indian Territory, have jurisdiction of naturalization proceedings.⁵

C. STATE COURTS.—Acts regulating the naturalization of aliens have always authorized such proceedings in the state as well as federal courts.⁶ The present federal statute on the subject gives naturalization jurisdiction to all state or territorial courts of record,⁷

11, and the following. It is undoubtedly true that the right to create courts for the states does not exist in congress. The constitution provides (Art. III, §1) that the judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one supreme court and in such inferior courts as the congress may from time to time ordain and establish. But it does not follow that congress may not constitutionally authorize the magistrates or courts of a state to enforce a statute providing for a uniform system of naturalization, and defining certain proceedings which, when complied with, shall make the applicant a citizen of the United States. This congress had undertaken to do in making provision for the naturalization of aliens to become citizens of the United States in a certain class of state courts—those of record having common law jurisdiction, a clerk and a seal. Rev. Stat. U. S., §2165 (since superseded by the Act of June 29, 1906, c. 3592, 34 Stat. 596)." Holmgren v. United States, 217 U. S. 509, 517, 30 Sup. Ct. 588, 54 L. ed. 861.

Effect of State Laws or Absence Thereof.—While it is doubtful if the courts of a state could be compelled by act of congress to take jurisdiction of naturalization proceedings,¹³ there is no doubt that such courts, at least with the consent of the constitution or laws of the state, may exercise this jurisdiction when conferred upon them by a law of the United States.¹⁴ And it has been held that state courts may exercise such jurisdiction, notwithstanding the absence of specific

Judges of Hudson Pleas, 29 Vroom 97; In re Gilroy, 88 Me. 199. In all these cases the right of the state to confine the jurisdiction permitted by the act of congress to such of the state courts as the state legislature might select was sustained. Those cases arose indeed under a different act of congress, but the new act of 1906 is no more compulsory upon the state tribunals than the former. The right of the state to limit the exercise of the jurisdiction involves the right to select the court which may act or to forbid any to act. This is a right most important for the state if it is to preserve its own sovereignty and prevent the regular work of courts created by the state and sustained at its expense from being hampered by duties imposed upon them by an independent sovereignty. The reasons are sufficiently stated by Mr. Justice Van Syckel in the case above cited. We need only suggest, in addition, the embarrassment to the administration of justice in New Jersey if petitioners should insist on their applications to be naturalized being heard before this court, as the act of congress would permit. Congress recognized the difficulty, and by failing to make action by the state courts compulsory, necessarily left those courts and their officers to the control of such regulations as the legislature might make." Freeholders of Passaic v. Slater, 85 N. J. L. 621, 90 Atl. 377.

III. PROCEEDINGS.—A. NATURE OF, AND LAW GOVERNING. While a proceeding for the naturalization of an alien is in a certain sense a judicial proceeding,²⁰ being conducted in a court of record and made a matter of record therein,²¹ yet it is not in any sense an adversary proceeding.²² It is generally regarded as a proceeding in rem.²³ The jurisdiction of the courts to naturalize aliens being conferred by special statute,²⁴ it is to be exercised in a special and summary manner,²⁵ and not according to the rules governing courts in plenary proceedings.²⁶ Naturalization proceedings are liberally construed, every intendment being in their favor.²⁷ But all the provisions of law prescribing the procedure necessary to be followed in such proceedings are mandatory,²⁸ and should be strictly followed.²⁹

What Law Governs.—Since the state courts act as national governmental agencies in naturalization proceedings, they are controlled therein exclusively by the federal law so far as such law extends;³⁰ and where the federal statutes and state statutes conflict, the former will govern.³¹

B. THE DECLARATION OF INTENTION.—1. Necessity.—The filing of a declaration of intention is a jurisdictional necessity in most cases under the present Naturalization Act.³² But persons having exercised the rights of citizenship in good faith, though in fact not citizens, are under certain circumstances allowed to be naturalized without having filed a declaration.³³

[a] The capacity in which state courts act in naturalization proceedings is well stated by Justice Frick in Eldredge v. Salt Lake County, 37 Utah 188, 106 Pac. 939, as follows: "It seems to us too obvious to require either argument or the citation of authorities that in naturalization proceedings the United States government exercises functions which exclusively belong to that government, and, further, that, in authorizing the state courts to act in such proceedings, the national government selects such courts and the clerks thereof as government agencies through whom said government is discharging one of its peculiar functions of national sovereignty. Whatever may have been the theory of some courts regarding the power of congress to confer such authority upon the state courts in the past, the question is now settled that congress has such power, and that state courts may constitutionally exercise the same when authorized by congress to do so. . . . The question as to whether the state courts continue or cease to be state courts while acting in naturalization cases, while interesting, is not material. It is enough for the present to know that in so doing such courts are merely agencies of the national government." [a] Persons Who Need Not File

The widow and minor children of a deceased declarant who had died before being naturalized, may, by complying with the provisions of the statute in all other respects, be naturalized without making a declaration of intention.³⁴

Soldiers, Sailors, etc. — The necessity for aliens in the service of the army,³⁵ navy, marine corps, coast guard, or merchant marine,³⁶ filing a declaration depends upon the naturalization act in force at the time of the application.

2. Before Whom. — The declaration must be before the clerk of a court having naturalization jurisdiction.³⁷ The declaration cannot be taken out of the court house, and the clerk should not carry records therefrom to take a declaration.³⁸

3. Contents and Sufficiency. — a. Generally. — A declaration filed upon a form other than that prescribed and furnished to courts by the bureau of naturalization, is a nullity.³⁹ The declaration must conform

Declaration.—Under this act, the following class of persons need not file a declaration: First. Persons who under existing laws might become citizens. Second. Who have resided in the United States continuously from May 1, 1905, to May 1, 1910. Third. Who have in good faith exercised the rights of citizenship, under a mistaken belief that they had a right to so act. Fourth. Who make a showing of these facts satisfactory to the trial court. In re Ross, 223 Fed. 366; In re Center, 218 Fed. 975.

b. Amending Declaration.—A declaration may be amended before final hearing to correct a mistake in naming the monarch whose allegiance is renounced.⁴³ But the declaration may not be changed as to the name of the applicant, unless the fact of error in the record clearly appears from the evidence and also the state of the record as it should be.⁴⁴

4. Place and Time of Filing.—The declaration must be filed in a court in the district where applicant resides.⁴⁵ It may not be filed until after the applicant has reached the age of eighteen years.⁴⁶ It

laration of intention must be filed on the form furnished for that purpose by the government. If filed on a form other than that furnished by the government, it is a legal nullity. Otherwise there is an end to uniformity, and government control and supervision cannot exist. If filed on some form other than that furnished by the government, why is it necessary for a declaration to be filed on any form at all? It becomes apparent that to permit this would destroy this most wise provision of the naturalization law." In re Brefo, 217 Fed. 131.

5. Effect of Declaration. — The declaration is simply the first step in the process required by law. It is in no sense a complete or binding act, and carries no full right of citizenship before the final act of admission.⁴⁸

C. THE PETITION. — 1 Generally. — The naturalization law requires every applicant to file a petition with the clerk of a court authorized to act upon it.⁴⁹ The petition may be filed either in term time or vacation,⁵⁰ and not less than two years,⁵¹ nor more than seven years after the declaration.⁵² A petition cannot be filed during the minority of the applicant.⁵³

It is the clerk's duty to file a petition for naturalization which contains all proper allegations, regardless of his personal opinion of the lack of qualifications of the applicant.⁵⁴

A copy of the petition and the affidavits supporting it must also be filed in the department at Washington.⁵⁵

2. Contents and Sufficiency. — The petition must allege the existence of all facts and the fulfillment of all conditions, upon the existence and fulfillment of which the statutes which confer the right to naturalization have made it dependent.⁵⁶ The requisites of the petition are fully described by the statute.⁵⁷

[a] Continuously resident does not mean (1) that the applicant must be actually and physically present in the United States every day of the five-year period. A temporary absence, not unduly extended, with intention of returning, is not a fatal interruption of the required residence. United States v. Deans, 230 Fed. 957, 961, 145 C. C. A. 151 (absence of six months); United States v. Cantini, 212 Fed. 925, 129 C. C. A. 445; United States v. Rockteschell, 208 Fed. 530, 125 C. C. A. 532; United States v. Timourian, 225 Fed. 570, absence of eighteen months on a business trip. See also In re Willis, 169 N. Y. Supp. 261. (2) But there must be such a residence as to satisfy the court that it was the intention of the petitioner to make this country his permanent home. In re Willis, 169 N. Y. Supp. 261. (3) A lengthy absence invalidates the declaration previously filed. United States v. Simon, 170 Fed. 680 (absence of seven months during which the alien applied for foreign citizenship); United States v. Mulvey, 232 Fed. 513, 146 C. C. A. 471 (absence of about two and one-half years); United States v. Cantini, 212 Fed. 925, 129 C. C. A. 445 (absence of about two years); In re Cook, 239 Fed. 782; *United States v. twenty years); In re Pearlman, 226 Fed. 60, absence of about four and one-half years.

[b] Intention (1) is an important element in determining validity of residence (United States v. Shanahan, 232 Fed. 169. See In re Willis, 169 N. Y. Supp. 261); and (2) one who leaves the country with the intention not to return, annuls his declaration of intention previously filed. In re Cameron, 165 Fed. 112.

[c] A residence aboard a foreign vessel ten months of the year, only two months being spent ashore, is not a continuous residence in the United States within meaning of act. In re Willis, 169 N. Y. Supp. 261.

[d] Question of Fact.—The question whether an alien has resided continuously in the United States for the required five years is one of fact to be determined from all the facts and circumstances in each particular case. United States v. Jorgenson, 241 Fed. 412; In re Cook, 239 Fed. 782; In re Brash, 235 Fed. 1003.

[a] The word character in the statute is not synonymous with reputation. It means what the person really is. United States v. Hrasky, 240 Ill. 560, 88 N. E. 1031, 130 Am. St. Rep. 288, 16 Ann. Cas. 279. See also United States v. Leles, 236 Fed. 784.

[b] A person has not "behaved as a man of good moral character," who has habitually, unlawfully sold liquor on Sunday (United States v. Hrasky, 240 Ill. 560, 88 N. E. 1031, 130 Am. Cas. 279, distinguished in In re Hopp, 179 Fed. 561 [holding that, where the public authorities made no effort to enforce the Sunday closing law and it was a general custom of saloonkeepers in the community to disregard it without secrecy, applicant was not disqualified for following such custom]), or (2) has been convicted of the crime of illegal liquor selling within the five-year period (In re Trum, 199 Fed. 361), or (3) who has knowingly made use of a certificate of citizenship illegally obtained (In re Di Clerico, 158 Fed. 905), or (4) has been guilty of falsehood in answering questions of the naturalization examiner preliminary to the hearing in court. In re Talarico, 197 Fed. 1019.

[c] Manslaughter.—One who has pleaded guilty to, and served his sentence for manslaughter, cannot be naturalized despite good conduct for more than five years preceding his application. In re Ross, 188 Fed. 685.

[d] Presumption.—Good character once proved is, in the absence of countervailing evidence, presumed to continue. United States v. Deans, 230 Fed. 957, 145 C. C. A. 151.

[a] The applicant (1) should have sufficient knowledge and understanding of the constitution to indicate that he is desirous of supporting it. In re Bodek, 63 Fed. 813. However, (2) an uneducated man, though unable to elucidate and define the principles of the constitution, may, by his life as a good man, peaceable, industrious, of good moral character and law abiding, indicate satisfactorily his attachment to such principles. In re Rodriguez, 81 Fed. 337, 355; Ex parte Johnson, 79 Miss. 637, 31 So. 208, 89 Am. Northumberland County Naturalizations, 18 Pa. Co. Ct. 270. (4) A person who cannot read or write the English language, though he stated he had read the constitution in his own foreign language, and who in 1889 spoke of George Washington as president, should not be naturalized as it does not appear that he has sufficient intelligence to understand the principles of the government. In re Kanakaian, 6 Utah 259, 21 Pac. 993, 4 L. Use of Depositions.—The proof of residence in the state for one year or more must be by witnesses in open court and in the presence of the judge;⁹⁰ but depositions may be taken to prove such portion of the necessary five-years' residence in the United States, as has been outside the particular state.⁹¹ As a soldier is not required to prove residence in any state for one year, he may use depositions to show his necessary year's residence in the United States.⁹² Depositions,⁹³

IV. THE JUDGMENT OR DECREE.⁹⁴ — A. NATURE GENERALLY. A judgment of a court admitting an alien to citizenship is of the same dignity as any other judgment of a court having jurisdiction.⁹⁵ However, since it is in its essence an instrument granting political privileges, it is, like other public grants, open to be revoked if and when it shall be found to have been unlawfully or fraudulently procured.⁹⁶

B. REQUISITES AND RECORD. — A judgment or decree granting naturalization is not required to be in any particular form.⁹⁷

The naturalization law provides that every final order must be under the hand of the court,⁹⁸ and entered in full upon a record kept for that purpose.⁹⁹ The record, however, need not show the facts in evidence, such as residence,¹ or good moral character of the applicant.² It need not show jurisdiction, or that all the legal requisites have been complied with, in order to import validity.³ Every reasonable intendment of construction should be allowed to give effect to a record of naturalization, that would be allowed to sustain a record in an ordinary case, and immaterial omissions or inadvertences of the clerk in making up the record should not be considered as of importance.⁴ The record may be amended nunc pro tunc so as to correct an error of the clerk and make it conform to the truth.⁵

ported by such commissioner to the court, cannot be considered. C. EFFECT OF.—1. Generally.—The judgment of admission to citizenship is ordinarily conclusive as to all matters necessarily before the court and actually litigated therein.⁶ Such judgments can be impeached only as other judicial judgments may be.⁷ But the order entered in a naturalization proceeding in which the United States is represented is not res judicata as to matters actually litigated therein so that the certificate of naturalization cannot be set aside as having been procured by fraud or illegality.⁸ One who has been legally naturalized cannot maintain proceedings to obtain a second judgment.⁹ A judgment denying naturalization for lack of good character, is a bar to a second application until applicant can prove that he has been of good moral character for at least five years.¹⁰

2. As to Applicant.—Naturalization operates prospectively, in the future, and not retroactively.¹¹ It confers only civil rights, not necessarily political rights, such as suffrage.¹² Naturalized citizens, while in foreign countries, are entitled to the protection of the United States.¹³

3. As to Family of Applicant.—An alien woman capable of citizenship becomes a citizen by marriage to a citizen,¹⁴ or upon her husband's becoming a citizen.¹⁵ But a wife does not attain citizenship through her husband's status until she has actually gained admission to the United States.¹⁶

D. VACATION OF JUDGMENT. — The trial court may within the term revoke or cancel naturalization papers for good cause.²¹ After the term, however, the judgment cannot be vacated, corrected or set aside, as the control of the trial court over the judgment has expired.²²

E. APPELLATE REVIEW. — As to whether the circuit court of appeals has appellate jurisdiction over naturalization proceedings in a federal district court is a question as to which there is considerable conflict in the decisions, jurisdiction being denied by some,²³ and affirmed in others.²⁴ Such jurisdiction has been exercised, apparently without being questioned, in many cases.²⁵ It has been held that since

V. [a] Proceeding Not Adversary.

B. JURISDICTION OF COURTS. — The cancellation suit may be brought in any court having naturalization jurisdiction³⁵ in the judicial district in which the owner of the certificate resides at the time of bringing suit.³⁶ Thus, a federal court in the proper district has jurisdiction of a suit to cancel a certificate of naturalization issued by a state court.³⁷ The cancellation suit need not be brought before the same federal judge who issued the certificate, even though begun in the same district.³⁸

Power of State Courts. — It would seem that the state courts have jurisdiction of proceedings to cancel a certificate of naturalization.³⁹

C. PARTIES AND SERVICE. — 1. Who May Sue. — It is the duty of the United States attorney, upon affidavit showing good cause, to institute suit.⁴⁰

2. Service on Defendant. — The defendant is entitled to sixty

[a] "If a state court has authority to naturalize aliens and issue certificates of citizenship, it is not within the power of congress to deprive it of its equitable powers to correct any fraud upon, or fraudulent use of, its process. Congress may establish a uniform rule of naturalization, as authorized by the federal constitution, but it certainly will not be presumed, in the absence of a declaration to the contrary, that such legislation prevents any court, state or federal, from annulling a certificate of citizenship bearing its seal which is a forgery. The power to correct and purge its records is inherent in every state court of general jurisdiction, and it may be exercised in the case of the naturalization of an alien as well as in any other case in which it has jurisdiction to act. It, therefore, follows that the Act of 1906, . . . did not deprive the court below from entering its decree annulling the forged certificate of citizenship and directing that it be surrendered for cancellation." In re Macoluso's Naturalization, 237 Pa. 132, 85 Atl. 149, Ann. Cas. 1914B, 226, holding that the statute furnishes cumulative remedy for a wrong which there was an existing appropriate remedy for, and hence is not exclusive.

days' notice to answer the petition.⁴¹ If the defendant is absent from the United States or the district in which he last had his residence, notice may be made, according to the state law, by publication,⁴² or in other manner provided for service of summons upon absentees.⁴³

D. GROUNDS FOR CANCELLATION. — 1. Fraud. — Cancellation proceedings may be based on the ground that the certificate was obtained by fraud.⁴⁴ Fraud may consist of misrepresentation or concealment of material facts without which the certificate would not have been granted,⁴⁵ or that applicant at the time of admission was a person of immoral character.⁴⁶

2. Illegal Procurement. — A certificate may be cancelled upon proof that it has been illegally procured.⁴⁷ If procured when prescribed qualifications have no existence in fact, it is illegally procured.⁴⁸ Mere errors of procedure, not going to the court's authority nor rendering the certificate false or spurious, are not ground for cancellation,⁴⁹ such as failure to attach to the petition the certificate of the department of commerce and labor, of alien's entry,⁵⁰ or conferring citizenship upon a petition signed by applicant's mark instead of in his handwriting.⁵¹

3. Foreign Residence After Naturalization. — The fact that a person, within five years after naturalization, takes up permanent residence in a foreign country, constitutes prima facie evidence of lack of intention to become a permanent citizen at the time of application for citizenship, and unless rebutted by countervailing evidence, is sufficient basis for cancellation.⁵²

E. AFFIDAVIT OF COMPLAINT. — The affidavit of complaint, which sets in motion a suit for cancellation, is not a pleading,⁵³ is not subject to technical attack,⁵⁴ and is sufficient if made on information and belief.⁵⁵

F. THE PETITION. — The petition is sufficient if it sets forth the necessary statutory facts justifying cancellation.⁵⁶ But without the averment of supporting facts, mere conclusions of law such as that the judgment was fraudulently and illegally procured, are insufficient.⁵⁷

G. THE HEARING. — A cancellation suit, being equitable rather than legal in nature, should be heard by the court without a jury.⁵⁸

Scope of Review. — The only action by the naturalizing court which may be reviewed, is its errors of law,⁵⁹ such as absence of declaration of intention in cases not falling within the statutory exceptions,⁶⁰ admitting applicant to citizenship within two years after declaration,⁶¹ and the consideration by the court of depositions not authorized by the statute.⁶² The trial court's decision on questions of fact is conclusive,⁶³ such as a finding as to continuous residence,⁶⁴ as to the age

A decision of a state court based on a construction of state laws that it has jurisdiction should not be reviewed in a cancellation suit.⁶⁸

I. OBSTRUCTIONS. — A. CIVIL REMEDIES. — 1. In General. The public, as a general rule, have a paramount right to navigate all waters that are naturally subject to navigation;¹ if unlawfully obstructed a remedy lies in favor of the state,² or a private individual, if it has one, should be averred,⁴⁶ also its navigability at the point of obstruction,⁴⁷ and the place thereof.⁴⁸ If built under authority of a statute, a failure to comply with the statute must be specifically alleged.⁴⁹

3. Trial.⁵⁰ — At the trial of a criminal action for erecting or maintaining an unlawful obstruction in navigable waters, navigability of the water in question is for the jury,⁵¹ also the question whether the injury complained of was caused by an unavoidable accident.⁵²

Instructions must conform to the issues,⁵³ and to the law applicable to the case.⁵⁴

B. WHARVES, PIERS, DOCKS, ETC. — A riparian land owner on navigable water may be enjoined from building a wharf, pier, or dock in front of his land, if it would operate as an obstruction to navigation.⁵⁹ So also he may be enjoined from encroaching on his neigh-

D. ACCRETIONS. — The riparian owner may protect his right to accretions by any suitable action.⁷⁰ Future deposits by accretion may be protected by injunction, in some jurisdictions, against any one who by changing the course of a stream, or other act, would prevent their formation;⁷¹ or an action for damages may be maintained.⁷² Title acquired by reclamation, to submerged lands along a navigable stream, may be protected by ejectment against any one unlawfully in possession.⁷³

I. COURTS OF INQUIRY. — A. GENERAL STATEMENT. — Courts of inquiry, to examine into the nature of any transaction of, or accusation or imputation against, any officer or soldier, are provided for both in the army,¹ and navy.² These courts are courts of inferior jurisdiction and their findings are usually advisory.³ They are usually convened only for the purpose of informing the department in a preliminary way as to the facts involved in the inquiry.⁴ In the army a court of inquiry may be ordered by the president or by any commanding officer.⁵ In the naval service the power to order a court of inquiry is vested in the president, the secretary of the navy, or the commander of a fleet or squadron.⁶ The president may appoint one court of inquiry, or several courts, in his discretion.⁷

B. COMPOSITION AND OFFICERS of courts of inquiry are regulated by the statute.⁸

C. JURISDICTION. — This court, in the military service, has no jurisdiction where the person whose conduct is to be investigated is neither an officer nor a soldier.⁹ Where a court of inquiry, properly instituted, has jurisdiction of the person, and has entered into an investigation, a civil court will not remove the person while the inquiry is in progress.¹⁰

D. CONDUCT OF PROCEEDINGS. — The proceedings before a court of inquiry are not in anywise summary,¹¹ the accused being present with his attorney and having the right to examine and cross-examine witnesses.¹² Auditors and spectators have access to hearings before courts of inquiry by permission, but not of right.¹³ Courts of inquiry, in both branches of the service, have the same power to summon and examine witnesses as courts martial.¹⁴ While naval courts of inquiry are specifically given power to punish contempts,¹⁵ the military courts have not this power.¹⁶

E. REPORT. — The proceedings of a court of inquiry must be authenticated by the signatures of the recorder and the president thereof,¹⁷ or of the president and judge advocate,¹⁸ as the case may be, and delivered to the commanding officer. Courts of inquiry in the report should state only facts,¹⁹ and not give an opinion on the merits unless specially ordered to do so.²⁰ In case of a disagreement between the members of the court as to the opinion, separate reports may be presented.²¹

F. INQUIRY AS BAR TO FURTHER PROCEEDING. — A private reprimand given in accordance with the recommendation of a court of inquiry is no bar to a court martial for the same offense.²²

II. PROCEEDINGS AGAINST PERSONS IN MILITARY SERVICE.²³ — JURISDICTION OF STATE AND MILITARY AUTHORITIES. In time of war all offenses committed by soldiers are cognizable by courts martial or military commissioners.²⁴ In time of peace civil courts of a state have general jurisdiction over persons in the military service who are accused of a public offense, committed in the state and not on property belonging to the United States or over which the United States had jurisdiction,²⁵ though federal courts may in their discretion remove the party charged from the custody of state officers in advance of a trial in the state courts.²⁶ Also if the civil courts seek to inflict punishment which tends to interfere with the duty which the soldier owes the United States the utmost good faith is required and any unjust and unfair discrimination will be remedied by the federal courts at the instance of his commander.²⁷

B. EXEMPTION FROM ARREST AND PROCESS.²⁸ — Private soldiers and non-commissioned officers while engaged in the performance of their military duties are exempt from arrest under civil process.²⁹ It is

In such a prosecution the exact time at which the offense was committed need not be proved as laid;³⁸ and the fact that it appears that the person solicited to leave the state had theretofore been rejected as physically unfit is not a defense.³⁹

I. DEFINITION AND NATURE OF WRIT. — A. DEFINITION AND GENERAL STATEMENT. — The writ of ne exeat is an equitable process designed to prevent the departure of a debtor from the jurisdiction of the court, and to render him amenable to its processes during the pendency of a cause.¹ It is not regarded as a prerogative writ, in this country,² but as a writ of right.³ In many states the use of the writ of ne exeat is abolished, by express terms of the statute,⁴ or by implication.⁵

B. NATURE OF THE REMEDY.⁶ — The ne exeat proceeding is not an action, but is ancillary to a suit in equity.⁷ Ne exeat is a mesne process,⁸ in the nature of equitable bail.⁹ It is frequently said to be analogous to the capias at common law.¹⁰ In some jurisdictions it is merely a preliminary process used to procure attendance of the defendant within the jurisdiction at the time judgment is rendered;¹¹ while in others it is regarded as continuing in force until discharged or the judgment is satisfied.¹²

II. JURISDICTION TO ISSUE.—Independent of statute, chancery courts have the power to issue the writ of ne exeat.¹³ The justices of the supreme court may issue it in proper cases;¹⁴ also circuit,¹⁵ and district courts, where they have equitable jurisdiction.¹⁶ The writ cannot be allowed except by the judge himself;¹⁷ consequently a master in chancery, or commissioner, has no power to issue it,¹⁸ unless specially authorized by statute.¹⁹ By statutes in some states, judges of inferior courts,²⁰ justices of the peace,²¹ and other officials,²² have been authorized to issue the writ under prescribed conditions.

III. PROCEEDINGS TO PROCURE.—A. IN GENERAL.—The proceeding to obtain the writ is ex parte,²³ and it may be applied for at any stage of the suit.²⁴

B. APPLICATION.—The writ may be had upon petition or motion;²⁵ or it may even be granted under the prayer for general relief in the bill, if facts sufficient are alleged therein.²⁶ There is no technical form of application.²⁷ Sufficient equity must appear in the face of the bill itself;²⁸ or if the proceeding is statutory, the complaint should make out a prima facie case under the statute.²⁹ It must appear either missions in the answer⁴³ dispensing with the necessity of proof.

2. As to Certainty.—The affidavit as to the truth of the allegations should, as a general rule, be stated in positive terms;⁴⁴ and an oath as to the complainant's information and belief will not ordinarily suffice.⁴⁵ The averments as to an existing debt must be positive;⁴⁶ but in a suit for accounting, when it is shown that something is due, the amount may be sworn to on belief.⁴⁷ The intended departure must be averred by positive allegations, or by facts, threats, or declarations evidencing such intention.⁴⁸ If stated upon belief or information, the grounds for the belief,⁴⁹ and the source of the information, should appear.⁵⁰

D. BOND OF COMPLAINANT.—Both by the chancery practice,⁵¹ and by the provisions of statute,⁵² complainants may be required to furnish bond, with security, conditioned for the payment of the costs and damages the defendant may be entitled to, in case the issuance of the writ was procured without probable cause. bond when required by statute is fatal to the proceeding.⁵³ The clerk of the court ordinarily approves the bond.⁵⁴

E. ORDER.—The writ of ne exeat is issued only on the special order of the court.⁵⁵ The order should fix the sum in which the party is to be held to bail,⁵⁶ and this is usually an amount equal to the debt claimed,⁵⁷ but may be regulated by statute.⁵⁸ In matrimonial cases the amount depends upon the circumstances of the parties and of the case.⁵⁹ The order usually prescribes the condition of the bond,⁶⁰ which generally is that the party will not depart the state.⁶¹ And it is error to require the payment of the judgment as a further condition,⁶² but the order may be in the alternative.⁶³

IV. FORM AND SUFFICIENCY OF WRIT.—The writ of ne exeat is usually directed to the sheriff,⁶⁴ and commands him to cause the defendant to give sufficient security that he will not depart the

of course.⁸⁸ The security required on this proceeding for discharge of the writ is usually in the form of a bond,⁸⁹ but it may be furnished by other means approved by the court.⁹⁰

D. WAIVER AND CONDITIONS OF DISCHARGE. — Giving bail is not a waiver of the right to move to vacate the writ;⁹¹ but rights to further relief may be waived by preliminary proceedings unless specially reserved.⁹² Leave of absence from the state may be granted by the court without discharge of the writ, or prejudice to the bail bond.⁹³ When the writ is discharged for irregularities, the court may nevertheless require security for the performance of the decree as a condition;⁹⁴ but not when the ground for discharge is insufficiency of affidavits.⁹⁵ The order discharging the writ may include an injunction,⁹⁶ or require the defendant to stipulate,⁹⁷ against suing at law for the wrongful issuance of the writ. Where a party is guilty of contempt, the motion for discharge will not be considered until he has purged himself of the contempt.⁹⁸

VII. ACTIONS ON BONDS.—A. IN GENERAL.—The chancery courts ordinarily retain control of the liability in ne exeat proceedings on bonds given by either the complainant,⁹⁹ or defendant.¹ This right to control is inherent with the power to issue the writ.² It may be enforced by an injunction against suing at law to recover damages or penalties,³ or by requiring a stipulation between the parties against such suit.⁴ It is therefore for the chancery court to say whether there has been a breach of the condition of the bond,⁵ to decide the question of liability,⁶ and the extent of liability.⁷ Redress may either be granted in the court issuing the writ,⁸ or a suit at law may be authorized.⁹ Leave to prosecute the bonds is usually had by petition.¹⁰ Where the ne exeat proceeding is regulated by statute, of course the statute controls.¹¹

In a suit upon a bond conditioned for payment of costs and damages, a plea of payment of costs is good,¹² but not a plea of non damnificatus.¹³

B. ON BOND OF DEFENDANTS.—Upon default of defendants, a ne exeat bond may be forfeited by the chancery court, and the sureties directed to pay the amount thereof into court.¹⁴ Summary judgment may be entered upon default of sureties,¹⁵ after notice to show cause;¹⁶ or suit at law may be ordered brought on the bond.¹⁷ In some jurisdictions the action at law is the only method of enforcing liabilities of sureties.¹⁸ Statutes providing conditions precedent to suits on bail bonds, apply to ne exeat bonds.¹⁹ When sued on the bond, sureties may not question the sufficiency of the affidavit upon which the writ was granted.²⁰ The remedies and rights of sureties are similar to those of sureties on bail bonds at common law.²¹ Sureties may not, however, obtain their discharge by surrendering their principals;²² but where ne exeat bonds are regarded as appearance bonds,²³ presence of defendant in court when final judgment is entered discharges the bond.²⁴

I. FORM OF ACTION.—If the negligence operates only indirectly and consequentially, case is the appropriate form of action;¹ but where it operates directly or immediately upon the person or thing injured, the courts are not entirely agreed as to whether the plaintiff should proceed in trespass or in case, or whether he has an option.² The simple code action has of course largely displaced the formal remedies in use under the former system.³

II. PARTIES.—A. PLAINTIFF.—The general rules governing parties plaintiff apply to actions founded upon negligence.⁴ Generally any person who has sustained damages by reason of the negligent act of another may maintain an action therefor.⁵ This general principle, however, is subject to limitations and exceptions elsewhere treated, depending upon statutes and upon the character and relation of the parties involved and the nature of the property interests affected.⁶ Where several persons have a joint interest in the damages sustained by defendant's negligence, they are properly joined as parties plaintiff.⁷

B. DEFENDANT.—Where acts of negligence of different persons concur in causing a single injury, the injured party ordinarily may bring an action against all or any number of them.⁸ And where the defendants owe a joint duty they may be sued jointly, although there

III. PLEADING. — A. DECLARATION, COMPLAINT OR PETITION.¹¹

1. In General. — It is important in connection with the averment of negligence to observe the general rules of pleading, as for example, the requirement that a party set out his cause of action in ordinary and concise language,¹² avoiding, on the one hand, undue prolixity,¹³ and the statement of mere evidentiary facts,¹⁴ and on the other the averment of naked legal conclusions.¹⁵ Ultimate facts should be alleged;¹⁶ facts sufficient to apprise defendant of the negligence complained of and to enable him to prepare his defense.¹⁷

Elements of Cause of Action for Negligence. — Tested by the foregoing rules, the complaint for negligence must set forth in plain and concise language facts from which appear a duty resting upon the defendant to use proper care under the circumstances;¹⁸ negligence in the exercise of that duty;¹⁹ and consequent injury to plaintiff as a proximate result of such negligence.²⁰

2. Allegation of Duty. — a. Generally. — The existence of defendant's duty towards the injured person and a breach thereof must appear.²¹ The duty need not be averred in terms,²² for a complaint showing that the defendant owed a duty to plaintiff and that he had been guilty of negligence which was the proximate cause of the injury complained of is good as against a demurrer.²³ On the contrary, an averment that the defendant owed a duty is insufficient, unless such averment is connected with a statement of facts from which the law infers the duty.²⁴ Nor is the omission to state facts showing defendant's duty supplied by an averment that the defendant neg-

e. Statute or Ordinance.—Where the duty is imposed by a statute, it is not necessary to plead the statute specifically.³² But if negligence is predicated upon a failure to comply with a municipal ordinance, the ordinance must be pleaded³³ in accordance with the rules elsewhere treated.³⁴

3. Averment of Breach of Duty.—a. Generally.—After the averment of facts showing a duty, the complaint must state facts showing a breach of that duty.³⁵ Since negligence is the breach of the duty with which we are here concerned, it must be pleaded in some manner;³⁶ and it should appear that such negligence was the proximate cause of the injury.³⁷

b. How Negligence Is Alleged.—(I.) Generally.—The courts very generally regard negligence as an ultimate fact, inferable from certain evidence, and frequently say that it is sufficient to plead it generally.³⁸ This statement, however, must always be taken in con-

42. Gogol v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 226 Fed. 224; Warfield v. Hepburn, 62 Fla. 418, 57 So. 618.

[a] All negligence is not actionable, and pleadings to be sufficient to state a cause of action grounded on negligence must affirmatively show that the negligence relied upon is actionable. If pleadings as to negligence show a duty owed by the defendant to the plaintiff and a breach of that duty to the damage or injury of plaintiff, very general averments of negligence will suffice. As is often said they need be but little more than conclusions; but the duty and its breach must be shown. Merely alleging that a given act was negligence, or was negligently negligence, cannot, as a matter of law amount to negligence, the fact that they are characterized as negligent does not make them sufficient.⁴³

(II.) As Affected by Method of Attack. — In asserting the sufficiency of a general allegation of negligence, the courts must not be understood as pronouncing such pleading invulnerable to every form of attack. It will, it is true, usually withstand a general demurrer;⁴⁴ but, except when it is not within plaintiff's power to make a more specific statement of the facts,⁴⁵ he may be required to do so on a done, without more, is not sufficient. Such pleadings may allege negligence, but the trouble is it is not in such cases actionable negligence. Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Beard (Ala. App.), 73 So. 828; Tarrance v. Chapman, 196 Ala. 88, 71 So. 707.

[b] Thus a declaration for injuries on a railroad track is not sufficient which merely alleges that at a certain time and place specified the defendants, employes, agents, etc., so negligently conducted themselves in the management, etc., of defendant's locomotives, cars, etc., that "through the fault, carelessness, negligence and improper conduct of the said defendant, by and through its said servants and employes, with great force and violence, was driven, run and struck against the plaintiff." The bare statement that the act was negligently done is not sufficient. The declaration must show how the act was negligent. Gogol v. Baltimore, etc. R. Co., 226 Fed. 224.

(III.) General and Special Allegations. — It is a familiar rule that a complaint which avers negligence in general terms, and then attempts to set out the particular acts constituting the negligence is demurrable, unless the acts so specified in themselves constitute negligence as a matter of law.⁵¹

ligence on the part of the injured person is bad on demurrer.⁶⁷

b. Mode of Averment.—In pleading contributory negligence the plaintiff is not required to set forth the specific steps and precautions taken to avoid the injury, but a general allegation that the injury was sustained without plaintiff's fault is sufficient.⁶⁸ It has been held that where the complaint contains an averment that the injury was caused solely by defendant's negligence, such averment impliedly negatives contributory negligence.⁶⁹

c. Want of Knowledge of Danger.—The want of knowledge of danger need not as a rule be alleged in the complaint;⁷⁰ and in jurisdictions in which freedom from contributory negligence must be shown in the complaint an averment of due care dispenses with the necessity of alleging the same.⁷¹

6. Averments as to injuries and damage in actions for negligence are governed by rules elsewhere discussed.⁷²

B. PLEA OR ANSWER.⁷³—1. Generally.—The general rule that affirmative defenses must be specially pleaded is applicable in actions based on negligence.⁷⁴ So also the rule that a plea of the general issue or a general denial puts in issue the material allegations of the complaint,⁷⁵ applies to actions founded upon negligence.⁷⁶ It has been held that a denial that defendant's negligence caused the injury constitutes a sufficient defense, without a denial of the acts set forth in the complaint constituting the alleged negligence.⁷⁷

acts of negligence pleaded in the complaint.⁹⁶ And where the complaint contains a general statement of negligence followed by an averment of the specific facts, the plaintiff will be confined in his proof to such specific facts.⁹⁷ Where averments of specific negligent acts are followed by a general allegation of negligence, however, the plaintiff is not restricted to proof of the specific acts of negligence set forth in the complaint.⁹⁸ Where the acts alleged are sufficiently broad to include the negligent act proved, the variance will be deemed immaterial.⁹⁹

Where several acts of negligence are set forth in the complaint, it is not a variance that the proof supports some, but fails to sustain other, averments of negligence.¹

3. Statutory and Common Law Negligence.—Where negligence of the defendant is predicated upon the violation of a law, proof of common law negligence creates a fatal variance.² Nor does proof of negligence consisting in violation of a law support a complaint based upon common law negligence.³

introduction of evidence tending to prove acts of negligence which are not mentioned in the complaint does not deprive a party of the right to avail himself of the variance on appeal. Peterson v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 242 Ill. 38, 89 N. E. 696.

er to limit the negligence to the specific acts, according to the following:

[a] "The act relied on to establish as a matter of law the existence of contributory negligence must be distinct, prominent and decisive, and one about which ordinary minds would not differ in declaring it to be negligent. Where the nature and attributes of an act relied on to show negligence contributing to an injury sustained can only be determined correctly by considering all the attending and surrounding circumstances of the transaction, it falls within the province of the jury to pass upon and characterize it, and it is not for the court to determine its quality as matter of law." Taxicab Co. v. Emanuel, 125 Md. 246, 93 Atl. 807.

ing.²⁶ But where the facts are uncontroverted and but one reasonable inference may fairly be drawn therefrom, the court determines the question of contributory negligence as a matter of law.²⁷ Where the constitution expressly provides that the defense of contributory negligence, but circumstances such as physical conditions, unobstructed view or other like matters are relied on to rebut the presumption of due care, it depends upon the facts of each particular case in determining whether the question of contributory negligence is for the court or jury. *Schmidt v. 3. As to Proximate Cause.—The question as to what was the proximate cause of the injury is ordinarily one of fact for the jury.²⁹ But where but one inference can be reasonably drawn from the evidence, the question whether a certain act was the proximate cause of the injury is to be determined by the court.³⁰ If the evidence does not show that the injuries were produced by a cause for which the defendant is responsible, the jury cannot be permitted to speculate as to the cause thereof, but it follows as a matter of law that plaintiff cannot recover.³¹

gence proximately caused the damage;⁶⁰ a charge on contributory negligence which omits to tell the jury that in order to defeat plaintiff's right to recover such negligence must have been the proximate cause of the injury constitutes error.⁶¹

b. Invading Province of Jury.—The court should not invade the province of the jury when it is its duty to say under all the circumstances of the case what is or is not negligence. Hence it is an invasion of the province of the jury to charge that certain acts do or do not constitute negligence,⁶³ or contributory negligence,⁶⁴ unless an act or omission to perform an act are made by law to constitute negligence per se,⁶⁵ or both the facts and the inferences therefrom are undisputable,⁶⁶ in which cases, the question of negligence is one for the court alone.⁶⁷

3. Presumptions and Burden of Proof.—It is error to refuse to charge the jury that the burden of proving defendant's negligence rests upon the plaintiff.⁶⁸ And it is error to charge that it is incumbent upon the defendant to prove his freedom from negligence.⁶⁹ It is proper to instruct that negligence ordinarily cannot be presumed, but requires affirmative proof.⁷⁰ But where it is proper to instruct the jury on a presumption of negligence from certain facts, to omit telling the jury that such presumption is not conclusive but may be rebutted is error.⁷¹

Where contributory negligence is a matter of defense and freedom therefrom need not be pleaded by plaintiff, it is proper to instruct the jury that the burden of proving contributory negligence rests upon the defendant;⁷² and it is error to charge that the plaintiff is required to prove the want thereof.⁷³ But where freedom from contributory negligence is alleged in the complaint, it is not error to instruct the jury that the plaintiff must prove such issue.⁷⁴ So too,

I. PROCEEDINGS TO ENFORCE. — A. DETENTION OF VESSELS. The president of the United States may authorize the withholding of clearance,¹ or the collectors of customs at United States ports may detain a vessel, when there is a probability that it is intended by the owners to be employed to commit acts of hostility against a foreign people with whom the United States is at peace.² A vessel thus detained will not be released until authorized by the president,³ or until the owner gives a sufficient bond.⁴

[a] By Military Commander. — A vessel which is probably to be used to violate the neutrality laws of the United States, may be detained by a military commander, acting under authority from the president, until it can be proceeded against in the method provided by law. Stoughton v. Dimick, 3 Blatchf. 356, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,500.

[a] Merely because armed, a vessel belonging to citizens of the United States is not prohibited from sailing out of our ports; it is only required that security be given that the vessel will not be employed by them in hostilities against foreign countries at peace with the United States. United States v. Quincy, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 445, 8 L. ed. 458. See also Hendricks v. Gonzalez, 67 Fed. 351, 14 C. C. A. 659; U. S. Comp. St., 1916, §10,180; U. S. Rev. St., §5289; 5 Fed. St. Ann. 376.

B. FORFEITURE OF VESSELS.—A proceeding to enforce a forfeiture of a vessel for violating the neutrality statute⁵ is an action in rem in admiralty,⁶ of which the federal courts have exclusive jurisdiction.⁷ A libel against a vessel for forfeiture is maintainable only in the name of the United States,⁸ and if instituted by an informer the United States may intervene.⁹ A conviction of the persons committing the acts alleged is not necessary.¹⁰ If two libels are filed, one for prize and one for forfeiture, an election to proceed on one and abandon the other cannot be required.¹¹ A foreign consul may intervene as claimant and assert the claim of his government.¹² An amendment of a libel for forfeiture is within the discretion of the court.¹³

C. CRIMINAL PROSECUTION.—Any one indicted for violating the neutrality laws of the United States should be tried where the offense is committed,¹⁴ or if committed at sea, then in the district where arrested.¹⁵

Indictment.—In drawing an indictment for an offense against the neutrality laws the general rules for drawing indictments should be observed.¹⁶ An indictment for setting on foot a military expedition

[b] Disjunctive or Alternative Allegations.—Where the statute prohibits fitting out or arming a vessel for against a government with whom the United States are at peace, need not aver that such expedition actually set out.¹⁷ An indictment for exporting contraband must definitely name the point of destination,¹⁸ unless it contains an averment that such point was to the grand jury unknown.¹⁹

Trial.²⁰—In a prosecution for fitting out a military expedition or enterprise against a foreign country with which the United States is at peace, the existence of the military expedition is a question for the jury.²¹

II. WRONGFUL SEIZURE.—An action of trespass for damages may be maintained by the owner of a vessel wrongfully seized for violation of neutrality laws against the party responsible for the seizure,²² but not before a final decree is pronounced in the forfeiture proceeding.²³ Such an action is not maintainable against an officer service, the indictment may charge either fitting or arming; it need not charge both. United States v. Quincy, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 445, 8 L. ed. 458.

[c] Duplicity.—(1) Where one is indicted under the statute against engaging in any military expedition to be carried on from the United States against a country with which it is at peace (U. S. Rev. St., §5286; U. S. Comp. St., 1916, §10,177; 5 Fed. St. Ann. 366), and (2) the indictment uses certain words describing the offense in the conjunctive which the statute uses in the disjunctive, but no objection is made by defendant, and the court in charging the jury limits the proof or evidence to one count in the indictment, the verdict will not be disturbed on the ground of duplicity. Wiborg v. United States, 163 U. S. 632, 16 Sup. Ct. 1127, 1197, 41 L. ed. 289. See generally 12 STANDARD PROC. 499.

[d] Recognition of a new government is not a condition precedent to the issuance of a valid indictment against one for preparing or carrying on a military expedition or enterprise from this country against a people with whom the United States is at peace. The Three Friends, 166 U. S. 1, 49, 17 Sup. Ct. 495, 41 L. ed. 897; De Orozco v. United States, 237 Fed. 1008, 151 C. C. A. 70; The Lucy H., 235 Fed. 610.

17. United States v. Chakraborty, 244 Fed. 287.

18. United States v. Phelps-Dodge Merc. Co., 209 Fed. 910; United States v. Albert Steinfeld & Co., 209 Fed. 904.

19. United States v. Phelps-Dodge

Merc. Co., 209 Fed. 910; United States v. Albert Steinfeld & Co., 209 Fed. 904.

[a] Charging Shipment of Contraband.—(1) Under the Act of March 14, 1912, 37 St. at L. 630, relative to the shipment of arms and munitions of war to other American countries during times of domestic violence therein, an indictment for initiating a shipment of contraband is sufficient, the word "export" in the statute referring to a shipment which is merely begun, as well as to a shipment which has been completed. United States v. Chavez, 228 U. S. 525, 33 Sup. Ct. 595, 57 L. ed. 950. (2) But an indictment which charges the shipment of contraband from one point to another in the United States, "with the intent" to reship into the foreign country, is fatally defective, since the statute refers to an actual export and not an intent to export. United States v. Albert Steinfeld & Co., 209 Fed. 904; United States v. Phelps-Dodge Merc. Co., 209 Fed. 910.

who has been granted a certificate of reasonable cause,²⁴ nor, it would seem, against one acting on authority from the president.²⁵ A plea justifying a seizure on account of a forfeiture incurred under the statute, should allege besides the actual forfeiture, the facts relied on to establish the same.²⁶ and different cause of action, cannot be allowed, either before trial,⁴ during trial,⁵ or afterwards,⁶ unless consented to by the parties.⁷ Sometimes the rule is stated to be that amendments setting up new causes of action different from that which the party intended to declare on are not permissible.⁸ But in some states, with varying restrictions,⁹ amendments may be made before trial introducing new causes of action.¹⁰

Effect of element of intent upon conclusiveness of the determination of the identity of the causes of action, see infra, I, G, 1, d.

9. See infra, this note.

[a] Thus (1) it is variously required that the cause of action in the amended complaint must be warranted by the summons (Brown v. Leigh, 49 N. Y. 78, 12 Abb. Pr. [N. S.] 193), or (2) that it does not substantially change the claim (Rae v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 14 N. D. 507, 105 N. W. 721; Wynnewood Cotton Oil Co. v. Moore [Okla.], 153 Pac. 633; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Keiffer, 48 Okla. 434, 150 Pac. 1026; Fort Prod. Co. v. Southwestern G. & P. Co., 26 Okla. 13, 108 Pac. 386), or (3) that it does not prejudice the defendant (Williams v. Randon, 10 Tex. 74), (4) and is not inconsistent with the cause of action originally stated (Walker v. Howard, 34 Tex. 478), or (5) that the plaintiff does not substitute an entirely new cause of action. Townes v. Dallas Mfg. Co., 154 Ala. 612, 45 So. 696; Montgomery T. Co. v. Fitzpatrick, 149 Ala. 511, 43 So. 136, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 851; Phillips v. Bradford, 147 Ala. 346, 41 So. 657; Crimm's Admrs. v. Crawford, 29 Ala. 623, leading case.

[b] That (1) it is only when the amendment involves the statute of limitations that the right to amend is limited (see Blake v. Minkner, 136 Ind. 418, 36 N. E. 246), but (2) this is often considered as an additional reason for allowing the amendment, if it is otherwise proper. McLaughlin v. West End St. R. Co., 186 Mass. 150, 71 N. E. 317.

10. Ill.—De Moss v. Thomas, 118 Ill. App. 467, allowing amendment changing action to recover for labor to one for money had and received.

Amendments To Conform to Proof.¹¹—The code provision allowing any amendment to conform the pleadings to the proof when the amendment does not substantially change the claim is held by some courts to forbid amendments changing the cause of action, when offered on the trial,¹² but by others to allow them.¹³

On Trial De Novo.—A party cannot amend so as to change his cause of action, on appeal from a justice's court where a trial is had de novo.¹⁴

B. WHERE AMENDMENT ADDS NEW COUNT.—Amendments by the addition of a new count which introduce a new cause of action are not allowable,¹⁵ although some cases permit an amendment setting

C. WHERE COURT GRANTS LEAVE TO AMEND. — A rule of court permitting the filing of a new declaration or complaint does not authorize an amendment stating a new cause of action.¹⁷ Nor does an order granting permission to file amendments to conform the pleadings to the proofs.¹⁸

D. WHERE CAUSE OF ACTION IS BARRED BY STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. A new cause of action distinct from that averred in the declaration, cannot be set up by way of amendment,¹⁹ or by adding additional counts to the declaration,²⁰ after the time for suing upon such cause of action has expired by the statute of limitations. But in some jurisdictions, it is discretionary with the court whether such an amendment shall be allowed,²¹ although, in such case, the defendant cannot be deprived of his defense of the statute.²²

E. DETERMINING WHETHER NEW CAUSE OF ACTION IS INTRODUCED.
1. Generally. — A new cause of action, under the rule against allowing amendments introducing new causes of action, is, of course, one which has not been stated before.²³ In determining whether such a cause of action has been introduced each case must, of course, be decided on its own facts,²⁴ but there are several tests which are sometimes applied.²⁵ The decision is also sometimes influenced by the definition which the particular court gives to the term cause of fenses?³⁰ It has been said that the true test is whether the effort is to introduce what is a new subject of controversy, or merely to amplify or correct the statement of the cause of action already set up.³¹ But the fact that two causes of action may be joined in separate counts is not a test by which to determine whether one cause can be substituted for another.³²

These tests taken separately may not always be decisive or infallible.³³ Indeed, causes of action concerning which some of the tests may be answered in the affirmative, may nevertheless be different; and conversely, causes of action may be identical although some of the tests may be answered in the negative; but no two causes of action can be identical if all the tests must be answered in the negative.³⁴

3. As Affected by Definition of Cause of Action.—In ascertaining whether the cause of action in an amendment is identical with that in an original pleading, the courts sometimes give different definitions to the expression "cause of action" from that which they give when merely determining whether a cause of action exists.³⁵

F. APPLICATION OF RULES AND TESTS. — 1. Amendments to Pleadings. — a. Amendments Changing Form of Action and Remedy. (I.) Generally. — An amendment which merely changes the remedy does not offend the rule against introducing new causes of action,³⁶ although amendments changing the form of action are sometimes held to change the cause of action originally stated;³⁷ but it has been held that an amended petition which restates the gravamen of the charge does not set up a new cause of action although the original pleading was in tort and the amendment is on contract.³⁸

Amendments which merely state evidential facts,⁴⁵ or matters in aggravation of damages,⁴⁶ which plead the facts with more particularity,⁴⁷ or which are a mere amplification of the original statement,⁴⁸ do not introduce new causes of action. Nor do amendments introduce new causes of action, which merely cure some imperfect or erroneous statement of the subject matter forming the basis of the cause of action,⁴⁹ which strike out words inaccurately describing the transaction sued on,⁵⁰ or which correct descriptions of property,⁵¹ or correct the names of persons mentioned,⁵² or which seek to make clear a description,⁵³ or to supply an averment of damages.⁵⁴ So also amendments do not change the cause of action which strike out irrelevant and redundant matter,⁵⁵ or conversely, which add averments which may be treated as redundant and surplusage.⁵⁶ And an assignment of further breaches of a duty allowing of several breaches does not state a new cause of action.⁵⁷

[b] The rule requiring "enough to amend by" does not mean the same as "enough to be good in substance without amendment." On the contrary the some authorities, an amendment to a complaint wholly failing to state a cause of action adds a new cause of action,⁶² and is not permissible, in some states, after the lapse of the statutory period.⁶³ Although this statement is not strictly correct, as it involves the absurdity of asserting that the first paper stated a cause of action,⁶⁴ the effect of the rule is retained by holding that the statute of limitations may be pleaded to the amended pleading filed after the running of the statute.⁶⁵ An amendment to set up jurisdictional facts does not necessarily state a new cause of action,⁶⁶ but it may do so.⁶⁷

(III.) Where Different Liability Is Set Up.⁶⁸ — According to some authorities, an amendment which departs from law to law does not state a new cause of action if it is based upon the same state of facts as those originally pleaded,⁶⁹ although it may be otherwise if new

[a] In Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Wulf, 226 U. S. 570, 33 Sup. Ct. 135, 57 L. ed. 355, Ann. Cas. 1914B, 134, a parent sued in her individual capacity as sole surviving parent and as sole beneficiary for damages for the death of her unmarried son, averring the facts are set up.⁷⁰ But according to other authorities it is held that death resulted from negligence of the company and by reason of defects in one of its engines and setting up the law of Kansas. In her amended petition she set up the same facts and sued in her representative capacity under the federal employers' liability act. It was held that no new cause of action was set up. The court was presumed to be cognizant of the federal statute and to know that with reference to the liability of interstate carriers the federal statute superseded the state statute. The reference to the state statute did not vitiate the pleading any more than a reference to any other repealed statute. The court distinguished Union Pac. R. Co. v. Wyler, 158 U. S. 285, 15 Sup. Ct. 877, 39 L. ed. 983, in which the original petition was based on the common law of master and servant and averred that the injury was due to negligence in knowingly employing an incompetent fellow servant. The amendment eliminated the charge of incompetency of the servant and relied on the negligence of a fellow servant under the statute of a sister state. A new cause of action was stated as the amendment set up a different state of facts as well as a different rule of law as the ground of action. It was necessary to plead the statute as the action arose in a sister state. Accordingly in the Wulf case it was held "Since in the present case the federal statute did not need to be pleaded, and the amended petition set up no new facts as the ground of action, the decision in the Wulf case is not controlling," and a new cause of action is not introduced. But as to the ground on which the Wulf case was distinguished, the court in the Wulf case says (page 295): "It is argued, however, that as all the facts necessary to recovery were averred in the original petition, the subsequent amendment set out no new cause of action in alleging the Kansas statute. If the argument were sound, it would only tend to support the proposition that there was no departure or new cause of action from fact to fact, and would not in the least meet the difficulty caused by the departure from law to law." Consequently it would seem that the Wulf case overrules the Wyer case.

(C.) INTRODUCING OR SUBSTITUTING AN IMPLIED OR EXPRESS CONTRACT. The fundamental facts involved in a transaction being unchanged, an amendment does not change the cause of action which changes a complaint based on express contract to one based on implied contract, or which introduces a count on implied contract, or vice versa,⁸⁶ although there are cases in conflict with this rule.⁸⁷ Of course, if it affirmatively appears that common counts are intended to present new causes of action they cannot be added by amendment.⁸⁸

42. Cal.—Stewart v. Spaulding, 72 Cal. 264, 13 Pac. 661, where other judgment debtors were joined in an action always the original plaintiff has a cause of action in himself.⁴³ And in an action brought by several plaintiffs, an amendment striking one of the parties plaintiff does not change the cause of action generally.⁴⁴

(III.) Correcting Mistake as to Description.⁴⁵ — An amendment which merely corrects the name of a plaintiff does not introduce a new cause of action.⁴⁶ The same is true of amendments striking out the descriptive words,⁴⁷ or adding the words "doing business" under a certain firm name.⁴⁸

c. As to Parties Defendant. — An amendment correcting a misnomer of the defendant does not introduce a new cause of action, there being no change in the party.⁴⁹ So also where a defendant is sued by a fictitious name, an amendment inserting his real name does not change the cause of action.⁵⁰ And an amendment adding omitted parties defendant,⁵¹ or striking out parties defendant, improperly joined,⁵² does not state a new cause of action. G. REMEDIES. — 1. Objection to Amendment Because it States a New Cause of Action. — a. Generally. — Objections on the ground that an amendment introduces a new cause of action must be timely made.⁵⁵

in those jurisdictions in which such an amendment is proper,⁵⁸ in which case the defense of the statute of limitations may be interposed,⁵⁹ but judgment on the pleadings cannot be obtained.⁶⁰ A demurrer is a proper remedy in some states;⁶¹ but this is not true under the codes and practice acts.⁶² Nor is an answer a proper method of raising the objection,⁶³ although it has been held that a plea is a proper remedy.⁶⁴ A new trial may be granted in a proper case.⁶⁵

of action may be waived; or the party may be estopped from raising the objection.⁶⁷

c. Determination.—The questions of whether a new cause of action is introduced is a question of law,⁶⁸ to be determined by an inspection of the original and amended declaration,⁶⁹ without reference to extrinsic facts,⁷⁰ unless the intention of the pleader is an element by which the power of allowing amendments is to be governed,⁷¹ in which case, the question is one largely of fact,⁷² and the court may consider the extrinsic circumstances of the case,⁷³ hear testimony,⁷⁴ or receive affidavits.⁷⁵ In determining the question, the court will look to the substantial nature of the claim introduced and not to the formal manner in which it is declared on;⁷⁶ and will give the original complaint a liberal construction.⁷⁷

d. Review.—Orders refusing amendments for want of power,⁷⁸ and allowing amendments inserting an entirely new cause of action,⁷⁹ have been held to be appealable; but an order denying a motion to strike an amended pleading from the files on this ground is not an appealable order,⁸⁰ although the matter may be brought before the appellate edge of the amendment, pleading to the declaration is not a waiver. Church v. Syracuse C. & S. Co., 32 Conn. 372.

I. PROCEEDINGS IN CASE OF CONTEST OVER SELECTION OF OFFICIAL NEWSPAPERS. — A. IN GENERAL. —

The power to hear contests concerning the selection of official newspapers is usually vested by statute¹ in such bodies exercising the right of selection, as boards of county supervisors,² or commissioners.³ Though formal pleadings are not as a rule required in these contests,⁴ nevertheless appropriate issues should be framed and presented.⁵

Costs. — Unless the statute specially provides for the taxation of costs, each party must pay his own costs.⁶

B. REVIEW.⁷ — The action of the board of supervisors or commissioners is sometimes reviewable by appeal,⁸ taken at the proper time,⁹ and in accordance with the usual procedure relating to notice and appeal bond.¹⁰ On such appeal the review is generally confined to questions raised at the hearing below.¹¹

Certiorari. — Within its customary limits,¹² certiorari is an available remedy; but the board's exercise of discretion will not be thus reviewed.¹³

II. MANDAMUS TO OFFICERS AND BOARDS.¹⁴ — Provided publication is required,¹⁵ and is possible,¹⁶ the officer or board empowered to select a newspaper therefor may be compelled by mandamus to proceed with such selection;¹⁷ but its choice, if resting¹⁸ in

I. NATURE AND OFFICE OF NEW TRIAL. — A. DEFINITION.

A new trial is sometimes very briefly, although incompletely, defined as "a re-examination of an issue in fact."¹ It is frequently defined

1. Zaleski v. Clark, 45 Conn. 397, 401.
 [a] This Definition Is Based Upon Blackstone's Definition of Trial. "Trial is the examination of the matter of fact in issue." Com. 3, 330.
 [b] Blackstone, however, defines new trial as "a rehearing of the cause before another jury, but with as little prejudice to either party, as if it had never been heard before." Com. 3, 391. To the same effect, Star Bottling Co. v. Louisiana Purchase Exposition Co., 240 Mo. 634, 144 S. W. 776; Gunn v. Union R. Co., 23 R. I. 289, 49 Atl. 999.

by statute, a typical illustration of statutory definition being "A re-examination of an issue of fact in the same court after a trial and decision by a jury or court, or by referees."² A more complete and satisfactory definition is the following: A new trial may be defined to be a re-investigation of the facts and legal rights of the parties upon disputed facts, either upon the same, or different, or additional evidence before a new jury before either the same or another judge, and which, in general, is in the power and discretion of the trial court to grant or refuse, according to the exigency of each particular case, and generally upon principles of substantial justice and equity.³

In a criminal prosecution it has been defined as the re-examination of the facts under the same plea of not guilty, on the same information or indictment.⁴

B. SCOPE OF REMEDY.—1. Corrective Remedies at Law.—As stated elsewhere in this work,⁵ at common law, remedies for errors committed during judicial proceedings may be invoked either by certain motions made after verdict and before judgment, or by certain proceedings taken after judgment; and the former class consists of motions for a new trial, motions in arrest of judgment,⁶ and motions for judgment non obstante veredicto.⁷

2. History of New Trial.—The remedy of new trial is an evolution, an outgrowth of the English common law system of trial by jury, and has been a great factor in maintaining the integrity of that institution, and preserving public confidence in it.⁸ The custom of granting new trials grew up in the English common law courts of King's Bench

[c] It is a rehearing of the legal rights of the parties, upon disputed facts, before another jury, granted by the court on motion of the party dissatisfied with the result of the previous trial, upon the presentation of proper grounds or cause. Bouvier Law Dict., 1914, title "New Trial."

and Common Pleas.⁹ At what time new trials were first recognized in connection with erroneous verdicts does not clearly appear.¹⁰ The first reported case in which a new trial was granted on this ground, is the case of Wood v. Gunston, decided about 1655.¹¹ For a long time, however, new trials were granted with an intolerable degree of strictness.¹² But it has not been the spirit of the common law of England to regard the verdict of a jury in civil causes as final in the first instance. Some mode of revision has long existed. Anciently, the practice was by attain of the jury for perjury, that is, for being false to their oath to render a true finding.¹³

3. Object or Purpose.—There are two objects or purposes of a new trial. The first is the attainment of justice;¹⁴ the second, is

[a] During the early part of the 17th century, the court of common pleas was accustomed to grant new trials upon the certificate of the judge that the verdict was contrary to his opinion. The court of King's Bench required some matter appearing on the record to justify such a grant. Holdsworth Hist. Eng. Law, I, 90; 3 Bl. Com. 388; Martyn v. Jackson, 3 Keb. 398, 84 Eng. Reprint 787.

10. It seems that the first reported case in which a new trial was moved for on the ground of an erroneous verdict is Slade's Case (decided in 1648), Style 138, 82 Eng. Reprint 592. Compare Smith v. Parkhurst, Andrews 315 (1738), 95 Eng. Reprint 414.

[a] Power to grant new trials, in the Connecticut colony, was given as early as 1644. Judge Baldwin, in Bissell v. Dickerson, 64 Conn. 61, 29 Atl. 226.

11. Wood v. Gunston, Style 462, 466, 82 Eng. Reprint 864, 867.

[a] The reason why the matter cannot be traced further back is "that the old report books do not give any account of determinations made by the court upon motions." Bright v. Eynon, 1 Burr. 390, 97 Eng. Reprint 365.

[b] Earlier New Trials.—In the case of Dorner v. Fortescue, 21 Viner's Ab. v. Trial, M. G. pl. 2. N., it is said that new trials began before 1655, and in Argent v. Darrell, 2 Salk. 648, 91 Eng. Reprint 551, Chief Justice Holt says that there were new trials more anciently than the case of Wood v. Gunston, Style 462, 466, 82 Eng. Reprint 864, 867, because it was long before this case a good cause of challenge to a juror that he before had been a juror in the same cause. However, in Rex v. Bell, 2 Str. 995, 93 Eng. Reprint 991, it is said that this statement by Holt is not conclusive since one might have been a juror in the same cause where a venire de novo had been awarded.

[a] "Looking at the principle upon which a motion for a new trial is founded, having taken the place of attain, and in some measure of writs of error and bills of exception, it is founded upon the broadest and most liberal principles of justice. It is for the interest of the community that this power should be as unrestrained as possible, because it affords one of the most simple, direct, prompt and convenient modes of considering, deciding and applying the rules of law to the circumstances of every case which can arise." Bicknell v. Dorion, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 478, 484.

to afford the court an opportunity to correct errors in its own proceedings without subjecting parties to the expense and inconvenience of appeal.¹⁵ In fact, a motion for a new trial is an appeal to the trial court for the correction of its errors, and a formal notice of what the appellate court may be asked to review if relief is not granted in the trial court.¹⁶ The office of a motion for a new trial is not alone to secure a new hearing, but to present the errors complained of for correction, if possible, without another hearing.¹⁷

4. Distinguished From Other Remedies.—There are other corrective remedies more or less akin to the remedy of new trial, and it is important at times to differentiate them.

a. Venire De Novo.—A motion for a venire facias de novo should not be confused with a motion for a new trial, although the effect of the motions is the same, and the former is frequently classed with the latter.¹⁸ Motions for new trials have a wider scope, however, and in modern practice they have largely superseded motions for a venire de novo.¹⁹

[b] Justice to the Court.—In Weber v. Kirkendall, 44 Neb. 766, 63 N. W. 35, it is said that the power of courts of general jurisdiction, in the correction of errors committed by them, "is exercised not alone on account of their solicitude for the rights of litigants, but also in justice to themselves as instruments provided for the impartial administration of the law." And such is the view generally entertained by the courts in this country. Ia.—Allen v. Wheeler, 54 Iowa 628, 7 N. W. 111. La.—State ex rel. Henderson v. McCrea, 40 La. 16. See infra, I, B, 9.

[a] The cardinal object of a new trial, however, was not to correct the errors of the court, but of the jury. Kearney v. Snodgrass, 12 Ore. 311, 7 Pac. 309.

17. Railroad Co. v. Johnson, 114 Tenn. 632, 88 S. W. 169. See also Barnes v. Noel, 131 Tenn. 126, 174 S. W. 276.

[a] "A venire facias de novo and a motion for a new trial are very different things; they agree indeed in some things, but differ in many; they agree in this, that a venire facias de novo must be awarded in both, and that the court may or may not grant either of them; but they differ first in this, that a venire facias de novo is the ancient proceeding of the common law, a new trial is only a new invention; the first is as ancient as the law, when attainments were in use . . . and therefore to avoid that severity it was thought better to proceed in a milder way, and so motions for new trial were introduced. . . . The most material difference between them is this, that a venire facias de novo must be granted upon matter appearing upon the record, but a new trial may be granted upon things out of it." Witham v. Lewis, 1 Wils. K. B. 48, 95 Eng. Reprint 485.

See also Kinney v. Beverley, 2 Hen. & M. (12 Va.) 318, where Judge Tucker uses the same language.

19. The grounds for a new trial, at common law, include not only those causes in which a venire de novo would at all times have been granted, but also include other causes. See infra, II.

b. Directing a Verdict.—The considerations and legal principles that guide the courts in directing a verdict and in granting a new trial on the evidence are not the same.²⁰ In directing a verdict the court is governed by practically the same rules that are applicable in demurrers to evidence.²¹ Where there is some substantial evidence to support a verdict for one party a verdict for the other should not be directed because a preponderance of evidence is favorable to the movant.²² But under proper circumstances a new trial may be granted under such circumstances.²³

c. Arrest of Judgment.—Arrest of judgment is based upon some defect apparent upon the record. It stays the entry of judgment. It is in the nature of a demurrer to the facts of the case as presented by the record.²⁴ Motions in arrest of judgment for causes not apparent of record are, practically, only applications for new trials.²⁵

d. Motion for Judgment Non Obstante.—A motion for new trial differs materially from a motion for judgment non obstante veredicto.²⁶

e. Mistrial.—A new trial recognizes a completed trial which for sufficient reason has been set aside so that the issues may be litigated de novo. A mistrial is a nugatory trial. A new trial results from the exercise of judicial discretion, while a mistrial is a positive matter of law.²⁷

f. Trial De Novo.—A trial de novo, that is anew or a second time, is not in any sense a new trial, but means a trial in a higher or appellate court, as if no action had been brought in the lower court. It is not a proceeding to correct errors, but a consideration of the case anew either upon the same or additional evidence.²⁸

g. Rehearing.—Although a new trial has been said to mean the rehearing of a cause from the beginning,²⁹ yet a "rehearing" proper is a term, used in connection with appellate proceedings at law, signifying a new hearing in a matter once decided; a further consideration of a case upon a re-argument.³⁰ The term is also used in connection with equity practice, meaning a second hearing before the original jurisdiction, in distinction from appeal.³¹

h. Re-reference.—When a matter has been referred to a master or to a referee by order of a court, especially in courts of equity, and the character of the report shows that there is a necessity for correction or for further investigation, the report may usually be sent back or "referred back," or "recommitted" to the master or referee. Such a proceeding is in no sense, of course, a new trial.³²

5. Power To Grant.—a. Courts of Common Law.—(I.) General Jurisdiction.—(A.) POWER INHERENT.—New trials are peculiar to courts of common law where jury trials prevail,³³ and, with reference to courts of general jurisdiction, the power to try a case also implies the power to hear and decide a motion for a new trial.³⁴ While, in many jurisdictions, the power to grant new trials is conferred upon the courts by express statutory authority, yet courts of general common-law jurisdiction have inherent power to grant, or to refuse, such motions,³⁵ because courts of general jurisdiction, in civil actions,³⁶ have by the principles of the ancient common law the power to correct errors in their own proceedings, and therefore a right to set aside verdicts and to grant new trials.³⁷ This inherent power will not be deemed to have been abrogated by statute unless the intent so to do is clear.³⁸

jurisdiction to grant new trials is not arbitrary, however, but is based upon judicial discretion,³⁹ that is, a legal discretion, to be exercised according to principles ascertained by adjudged cases,⁴⁰ because the ground for granting a new trial must be a legal one.⁴¹ The statutes however, may give an absolute right to a new trial in certain cases.⁴²

(II.) Inferior Jurisdiction.—The inherent power to grant new trials is limited to courts of general jurisdiction,⁴³ and in the absence of authority by statute, courts of inferior and limited jurisdiction have no power to set aside the verdict of juries found in their courts and grant new trials.⁴⁴ The jurisdiction of inferior courts, as, for example,

As to new trial in justices' courts, see 18 STANDARD PROC. 77.

[a] The Rule Has Come Down From the Early English Decisions.—It was held that new trials could not be granted in inferior courts, because trials in such courts were not like trials at nisi prius, since the nisi prius trials are subordinate upon writs issuing out of King's Bench, over which the latter court had authority and inspection. Mayor v. Alderman of Bristol, 2 Salk. 650, 91 Eng. Reprint 553.

[b] In criminal cases, under the former English practice, a new trial could not be granted by an inferior court, but only by the court of King's Bench. In order that a motion for a new trial could be heard at all in a criminal case (and they were grantable only in misdemeanors), the proceedings must have originated in the King's Bench, or have been removed into that court by a writ of certiorari. Skinner v. Northallerton County Court, App. Cas. (1899) 439; Reg. v. Dudley, 14 Q. B. Div. 273, 560; Reg. v. Parke, 2 K. B. (1903) 432.

county courts, probate courts, justices of the peace, and municipal courts to grant new trials is derived wholly from statutory provisions.⁴⁵

b. Courts of Equity.—The chancery and ecclesiastical courts proceeded according to the method of the civil law, having no jury trials as a matter of right,⁴⁶ but their decrees or decisions might be made the subject of a rehearing by any aggrieved party.⁴⁷

c. Courts of Admiralty.—A rehearing or a new trial may under proper circumstances be granted in admiralty.⁴⁸

d. Federal Courts.—The federal statutes expressly provide that the district courts may, after trial by jury, grant new trials,⁴⁹ and the language of the seventh amendment to the Constitution of the United States, "no fact tried by a jury shall be otherwise re-examined in any court of the United States, than according to the rules of the common law," has been construed to give to federal courts the power, in their discretion, to set aside verdicts and grant new trials.⁵⁰ A

[a] The control of the court over the verdict after it is given is as much a part of the trial by jury as the giving of the verdict itself, and the right to have the issues tried by a second jury, or even a third jury when the verdict of the first jury is affected by some infirmity for which the common law required the trial court to set that verdict aside, is as much a right of "trial by jury" preserved by the first constitution as the first trial. Hughey v. Sullivan, 80 Fed. 72, 76.

state statute cannot enlarge or restrict the power of a federal court to grant a new trial, because in regard to motions for a new trial federal courts are independent of any statute or practice prevailing in the courts of the state,⁵¹ and the power of the federal courts to grant new trials is not controlled by the federal statute which provides that procedure in civil cases shall be as near as may be to the practice of the state in which the court is held.⁵² It has been held, however, that a state statute limiting the number of new trials will be followed by the courts of the United States.⁵³

e. Appellate Courts.—Appellate courts, such as supreme courts, courts of errors, and other courts of review, may, in the exercise of their appellate jurisdiction for the correction of errors in the trial courts, order new trials in the courts below,⁵⁴ and, in some jurisdictions, the statutes or rules of court, provide that the supreme court may grant a new trial, on original application, either on some particular ground, or because the time for granting a new trial in the lower court has expired.⁵⁵ However, to review original proceedings in the appellate courts, or obtain the reconsideration of a decision on appeal,

6. Granted in What Causes.—a. At Law.—(I.) Civil Actions.

(A.) IN GENERAL.—The particular causes in which new trials may be granted upon issues of fact, in civil actions, in courts of law of general jurisdiction, are practically as numerous as the causes themselves, whether in the nature of contract, of tort, or of special proceedings; and the right given to the trial judge to grant new trials in civil cases is not limited to any particular classes of action.⁵⁷ In illustration of the general right in civil cases to grant new trials, it has been held that such motions may be entertained in such special proceedings as quo warranto,⁵⁸ in a proceeding to remove one from elective office,⁵⁹ in an action for the usurpation of a franchise,⁶⁰ mandamus,⁶¹ in condemnation proceedings,⁶² in distress proceedings,⁶³ in proceedings to compel the listing of omitted property for taxation,⁶⁴ and the determination of a contested petition for distribution of a decedent's estate.⁶⁵ A new trial may also be granted in involuntary liquidation proceedings against a bank, under a bank commissioner act.⁶⁶ Moreover, in general, the power to grant a new trial should be exercised in any cause, whenever a trial judge is convinced⁶⁷ that

There may be authority for this position in some code states, but we see no occasion for adopting such construction here. Our statute provides merely the manner and time within which such motions are to be made and does not prescribe or limit the class of actions where permitted. It is a wholesome and ancient method of correcting promptly and inexpensively errors that may creep into the rulings of the court or findings of the jury, and the silence of the statute does not inhibit its use." *Owens v. to enter judgment on a verdict would result in a miscarriage of justice.

(1.) Issues of Fact. — A new trial being a re-examination of an issue of fact, there can be no new trial unless in a previous hearing there has been a trial of such an issue,⁶⁸ and the term "issue of fact" refers to an issue arising on formal pleadings,⁶⁹ in which evidence in some form or other is taken.⁷⁰ Where a cause is submitted on pleadings without a trial upon any issue of fact, no new trial can be had,⁷¹ and when a cause is submitted to the court upon an agreed statement of facts, no new trial will lie after the decision.⁷² Moreover,

[a] Does Not Apply to Every Order. A new trial applies to issues of fact, and in those cases in which issues of fact are framed. It does not apply to every order which may be made ex parte, or by the court of its own motion, simply because the court has permitted written objections to be filed. Leach v. Pierce, 93 Cal. 614, 29 Pac. 235.

[b] The allowance of alimony is an incident to an action of divorce, and, although a determination as to its allowance may involve a controversy as to facts, such determination is not the trial of an issue in the case. It may be before or after the trial. Hunter v. Hunter, 111 Cal. 261, 43 Pac. 756, 52 Am. St. Rep. 180, 31 L. R. A. 411.

[c] Proceedings to set apart a homestead, or to exempt personal property from execution, or for a family allowance, under the provisions of the California statute, do not involve any trial of issues of fact, and, consequently, a motion for a new trial does lie in such proceedings. In re Heywood's Estate, 154 Cal. 312, 97 Pac. 825; Leach v. Pierce, 93 Cal. 614, 29 Pac. 235. In this latter case, the court speaking of the application of jury trials, and, consequently, new trials, in probate matters said: "In In re

Moore, 72 Cal. 340, 13 Pac. 880, it was suggested that the operation of these sections should be confined 'to those cases in which the code has expressly authorized issues of fact to be framed.' " It is not necessary, however, in this case to lay down a rule of universal application; and all we decide is that, in the matter before us proceedings for a new trial were not authorized. It is better perhaps to follow the suggestion of Mr. Justice Miller in Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 104, 24 L. ed. 616, as to ascertain the intent and proper application of the provisions bearing upon the subject "by the gradual process of judicial inclusion and exclusion, as the cases presented for decision shall require."

[a] Does Not Apply to Mere Motions.—A motion which does not ask for a decision on an issue of fact that arises upon the pleadings is not subject of a new trial, and it needs little reflection to see that if every motion which is made in the courts on a trial, or with reference to an action, could be followed by a motion for a new trial of such motion, the case itself would be inextricably involved in the determination of these motions, and the final judgment in the action indefinitely postponed. there cannot be, at common law, a "new trial" in cases of default, since there has never been a trial.⁷³ A judgment by default may be set aside by proper motion, but such a remedy is quite different from a new trial which is a re-examination of an issue of fact.⁷⁴ By force of statute, however, in some states, a retrial may be obtained, under certain circumstances, in default cases.⁷⁵

Likewise in criminal cases, a new trial can be granted only after a trial, that is, after a verdict of conviction,⁷⁶ and, consequently, a motion for a new trial will not lie after a plea of guilty.⁷⁷

(2.) Issue of Law.—There can be no new trial upon an issue of law, since such issues can be investigated upon appeal without previous examination by the trial court.⁷⁸ Consequently, no new trial can be granted for rulings upon demurrers,⁷⁹ and if the facts have been agreed to or have been eliminated so that the controversy depends upon a question of law, there is nothing upon which to base a new trial.⁸⁰

Moreover, although some of the grounds for which a new trial may be granted may involve only a question of law, yet there can be no new trial upon such grounds until there has been an original trial, that is, such a trial as results in a verdict, a report of a referee, or a decision by the court which involves and determines the facts in issue.⁸¹

(3.) Case Tried by Court.—In some states, new trials are grantable only in cases tried by jury,⁸² and in the federal courts, new trials apply only to jury cases.⁸³ In many states, however, there may be a new trial of an issue of fact whether the case be tried by a jury or by the court, and this practice is expressly authorized by many of the statutes.⁸⁴

(4.) Decision by Referee.—In some states,⁸⁵ the report or decision of a referee may be set aside, and a new trial granted, in like manner as

[a] Where the statute is general in its terms relating to the granting of new trials, the court is vested with the same power in cases tried by a referee, as in cases tried by the court itself, or by a jury. Every case is placed upon the same footing, and the grounds in cases of a decision of the court, or a verdict of the jury, and the statutes sometimes expressly so provide.⁸⁶

(B.) ACTIONS FOR PENALTIES. — It was at one time held that in an action for a penalty, a verdict for the defendant would not be set aside and a new trial granted on the sole ground that the verdict was against the evidence,⁸⁷ and this rule was extended to actions for libel and slander, and to other actions vindictive in their nature.⁸⁸ The rule was settled in analogy to criminal proceedings,⁸⁹ but the modern rule is that a new trial may be granted in such instances,⁹⁰ because the action for a penalty is not a criminal but a civil action.⁹¹

(II.) Criminal Proceedings. — At common law, motions for new trials were permitted in cases of misdemeanor tried before the King's Bench, either originally or removed from inferior courts into that court by certiorari, or sent by that court to be tried at nisi prius.⁹² New trials were not grantable, however, in cases of felony or treason.⁹³ The authority and jurisdiction of criminal courts, in this country, to grant new trials are usually derived from the statutes,⁹⁴ though it has been upon which a new trial may be granted are the same in all cases irrespective of the manner in which the case was originally tried. Cappe v. Brizzolara, 19 Cal. 607.

[a] Jury Cases Only.—In jurisdictions where new trials apply only to cases tried by juries, the decision of a referee is not subject to such motions. Thus a motion for a new trial cannot be granted by the court, where an action at law is referred to a referee to hear and determine. Alder v. Edenborn, 198 Fed. 928. See *Roberts v. held that such a court has the inherent power to grant a new trial,⁹⁵ and generally throughout the United States, new trials are granted in all criminal cases, whether for misdemeanors or felonies, for practically the same causes, and under like circumstances, as in civil cases,⁹⁶ and, as in civil cases, motions for a new trial in criminal cases are addressed to the discretion of the trial judge.⁹⁷ Under the English common law, a new trial in misdemeanor cases was not granted, as a rule, in favor of the prosecution upon the acquittal of the accused,⁹⁸ even though the verdict of acquittal was against the evidence, or was founded upon a misdirection of the judge.⁹⁹ In this country, after a verdict of acquittal, it is the almost universal rule that no new trial can be granted to the prosecution in any criminal case whatsoever.¹

of law refused to grant new trials, courts of equity sometimes arrested the enforcement of a judgment at law for the purpose of deciding whether a new trial should be had in order to prevent serious wrong. Although this procedure has become practically obsolete,⁶ yet, in some jurisdictions, after the judgment, or after the time for a motion for a new trial at law has expired, a bill in equity may be filed to vacate the judgment and to obtain a new trial.⁷ In jurisdictions, however, where the distinctions between pleadings in law and in equity have been abolished, the former chancery practice of proceeding by petition for rehearing, or a bill of review, is no longer necessary since the court may grant a new trial on motion.⁸

[a] Single Question.—(1) In Secomb v. Provincial Ins. Co., 4 Allen (Mass.) 152, 153, a new trial was granted on a single question "whether Smyrna, in a commercial sense and by commercial usage, was a port in Europe." (2) In Amherst Bank v. Root, 2 Mete. (Mass.) 522, 542, the court said: "As the only exception, which is sustained relates to the proof of the execution of the bond, the court are of opinion that this is one of those cases where the new trial should be confined to the point, whether the bond was duly executed, and that the issue to the jury on the new trial should be on that fact only."

[b] Single Plea.—Stroud v. Stroud, Executor, 7 M. & G. 417, 49 E. C. L. 416, 135 Eng. Reprint 174, was an action for debt. The defendant pleaded, first, that the testatrix was never indebted; secondly, payment; thirdly, plene administravit. The plaintiff had a verdict. A new trial was granted on the last issue, because the verdict was against the evidence; but the verdict on the first and second issue was not disturbed. Tindal, Ch. J., said.

"With respect to the first part of the case I entertain no doubt but that it ought to rest where it is on the finding of the jury. . . . With regard to the question arising on the plea of plene administravit, which I think has not been properly sifted, it seems to me that the case ought to go down to a new trial." Creswell, C. J.: "The proper course will be to enter a verdict for the plaintiff on the first issue with 11 pounds, 2s damages, and for the plaintiff on the second issue; and that, on payment of cost, there be a new trial on the last issue, the plaintiff admitting that the 20 pounds were paid in a due course of administration." [a] Damages Only.—(1) In Boyd v. Brown, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 453, 461, the of referees, there may be a new trial on matters collateral to the main issue.¹⁸ Although it is held that a new trial should not be granted upon issues raised by a cross-complaint without also granting a new trial as to the issues raised by the original complaint,¹⁹ yet where the issues on the cross-complaint are distinct from those on the complaint, a new trial may, in some jurisdictions, be granted on the cross-complaint.²⁰ Also, where distinct counts and causes of action and cross-complaints and counterclaims are all tried in the same case, a new trial may be granted as to part only, and denied as to others.²¹ court found that the damages were excessive and said: "But this we do not consider a sufficient reason for setting aside the verdict and granting a new trial so as to open the whole merits of the case to future litigation, which have been once fairly tried, especially as the verdict may be set aside in part, and a new trial granted with respect to the assessment of damages only, as was done in the case of Winn v. Columbian Ins. Co., 12 Pick. 288; and thus the only error existing may be corrected without the expense of a new trial on the merits." (2) In Ryder v. Hathaway, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 298, 306, the court said: "The verdict must therefore be set aside, and a new trial granted. But as the question of title has been fully and fairly tried and settled, there can be no reason for retrying that, and the new trial must be confined entirely to the question of damages."

[b] In an action to recover the value of a quantity of wool, a new trial was granted by the superior court on the issue of the value of the wool alone. Pratt v. Boston Heel & Leather Co., 134 Mass. 300, 302. See also Clark v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 33 R. I. 83, 80 Atl. 406, Ann. Cas. 1913B, 356.

[c] Contrary View.—The damages in an action for negligence are entire and indivisible, and cannot be split up as to form a basis for several trials. Indeed, the splitting of entire demands so that a man may institute several actions where one would suffice is forbidden, whether these demands arise on contract or grow out of tort. This is too elementary to require citation of authority to support it. It may well be doubted whether, even if authorized by statute, it would be due process of law to permit the plaintiff in an action for unliquidated damages to retain the advantage gained by the verdict, and at the same time have one or more trials for the purpose of increasing or adding to the damages first awarded. This might deprive the defendant in such new trial of the benefit of many items of evidence proper to be considered by the jury in mitigation of unliquidated damages. It would also impair or destroy the finality of verdicts and of judgments founded thereon. Banaszek v. F. Mayer Boot & Shoe Co., 161 Wis. 404, 154 N. W. 637.

[a] "The term 'new trial' had always been regarded by the profession as meaning a complete re-trial of a cause, except in certain instances. . . . These instances are where the trial of fact in which the error intervened has been a trial not involving the main issue of fact in the case; as where a remonstrance to the acceptance of a report of a committee or auditors sets up certain facts, and the court on the trial of an issue on those facts makes erroneous rulings, that render the trial of the issue a mis-trial. There a new trial of only that part of the case involved in that issue is asked for in the motion, and of course only the new trial asked for is granted. The new trial is here, as everywhere, a new trial of the facts, and is in no sense a new trial of the law." Zaleski v. Clark, 45 Conn. 397, 403.

If, however, several causes of action are merged, and there is a general verdict on them all, the court cannot separate them for the purpose of granting a new trial,²² although the contrary would be true if special verdicts were returned.²³

When a new trial is granted as to only one of several issues, it opens for examination only that issue.²⁴

d. Whether for Part of the Parties. — (I.) Civil Cases. — It was formerly the rule in civil cases that a new trial could not be granted at the instance of one of several defendants.²⁵ If granted, the new trial had to be brought against all of them.²⁶ This rule has been greatly relaxed, however, in modern times, particularly in cases of tort.²⁷ Thus, in an action for personal injuries against two defendants, the court may give judgment against one and grant a new trial to the other.²⁸ Moreover, in contract, when, in distinction from a joint judgment, a plaintiff may obtain separate judgments against two or more

[a] Equitable Rule Applied.—“The rule that judgments at law are entireties in the sense that they are void or reversible as a whole and as to all the defendants, if they are void or reversible as to one or more defendants, has been disavowed by the supreme court in a number of recent decisions. State ex rel. Ozark County v. Tate, 109 Mo. 265; Breman Bank v. Umrath, 55 Mo. App. 43. The rule as now established is that a judgment against several defendants, invalid as to one or more, may be annulled as to the improper parties, and affirmed as to the others, it being the purpose of our code of procedure to apply the rules applicable to decrees in equity in this respect, as far as they are applicable to judgments at law.” *Holborn v. parties defendant,²⁹ or when separate verdicts are returned against coparties,³⁰ or the property rights of co-defendants are distinct,³¹ a trial court may grant a new trial to one, and refuse it to another. When, however, the liability of one of several defendants cannot exist without that of the others, it is error, after a verdict in favor of all, to grant a motion for a new trial against one alone.³²

(II.) Criminal Cases.—In case of joint trials of parties accused of crime, where some are acquitted and some convicted, it was at one time doubted whether the verdict could be set aside and a new trial granted as to a convicted defendant without, also, setting aside the same verdict of acquittal as to the acquitted defendant.³³ It is, however, established that in such cases a new trial may be granted to a convicted party without affecting the verdict of acquittal as to another party.³⁴ No new trial can, however, be granted against a defendant who has been acquitted.³⁵ In case two or more co-defendants are all convicted, it is, moreover, within the discretion of the court to grant a new trial to one and to refuse it to another.³⁶

b. Order of Motions.—(I.) Arrest of Judgment.—By the general rule, a party cannot move for a new trial after he has moved in arrest of judgment,³⁸ and it is sometimes so provided by statute.³⁹ The rule, however, extends only to cases where the party has knowledge of the facts at the time of moving in arrest of judgment.⁴⁰ Some cases hold, nevertheless, that a motion to arrest judgment does not bar a motion for a new trial.⁴¹

(II.) Judgment Non Obstante Veredicto.—A motion for a new trial logically precedes a motion for judgment non obstante veredicto, but a number of cases hold that a motion for a new trial may follow such a motion,⁴² and by the practice in some jurisdictions a motion for a judgment non obstante veredicto may be joined with a motion for a new trial.⁴³

jurisdictions such motion may be filed even after judgment has been entered,⁴⁷ this procedure being authorized in some states by the terms or express provisions of the statutes.⁴⁸

d. Effect of Appeal.—The remedy of appeal lies, as a general rule, only after a final decision, or a judgment,⁴⁹ and it is, therefore, logical to hold that after a judgment and the bringing of appellate proceedings, a lower court has no power to entertain a motion for a new trial.⁵⁰ At common law, the taking of a bill of exceptions, pendente lite, will preclude a motion for a new trial unless the bill of exceptions is waived,⁵¹ and the taking of an appeal before the motion for a new trial is acted upon has likewise been held to be a waiver of the motion.⁵² The practice, however, in this regard is so purely local that the particular jurisdiction must be consulted, for some states, either by force of statute, or on the theory that the power to grant a new trial within the legal time is absolute, permit new trials regardless of the pendency of appellate proceedings.⁵³ It has, moreover, been

8. Statutory Second Trial as of Right.—a. In General.—In some states, it is provided by statute that in certain actions, particularly actions of ejectment or those involving the recovery of the possession of real property, the party against whom the judgment is rendered may, as a matter of right, and regardless of any cause, demand another trial.⁵⁵ Such provisions have really no connection with

[a] Case Pending in United States Supreme Court.—Under a statute authorizing the trial court to grant a new trial upon grounds discovered after the expiration of the term, the right to apply for such a new trial is a matter of right and may be exercised although the case is pending on appeal, in the supreme court of the United States. *Fuller v. [a] Judgment by Default.—(1) Where, however, judgment in the first trial was rendered against defendant by default, and no issue raised as to right of plaintiff's possession of the land, such judgment was held conclusive, and no second trial allowed. Hall v. Sanders, 25 Kan. 558; Province v. Lovi, 4 Okla. 672, 47 Pac. 476. (2) The Illinois statute, however, provides that the second trial may be allowed after a default. See Setzke v. Setzke, 121 Ill. 30, 11 N. E. 915.

[b] Statutes Repealed.—In recent years, several states have repealed their statutes that gave a second trial as a matter of right in actions of ejectment. Kansas repealed its statute in 1905 (Laws of 1905, ch. 333); Oklahoma, in 1909 (Laws of 1909, ch. 29); New York, in 1911 (Laws of 1911, ch. 509). See also Nesbit v. English, 58 Ind. App. 10, 107 N. E. 552, as to part repeal of the Indiana statute. Under the previous Michigan statute (C. L., 1897, §10,981), the trial judge had the authority to grant a new trial in ejectment, and it would seem from Clairview Park Imp. Co. v. Wayne Circ. Judge, 172 Mich. 172, 137 N. W. 531, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 734, that the new trial, upon payment of costs, was a matter of right, apparently overruling Stahl v. Dayton, 126 Mich. 70, 85 N. W. 249. The present Michigan statute (Comp. Laws, 1915, §13,197) provides that new trials may be granted in ejectment cases for the same reasons, and in the same manner as in personal actions; but no trial shall be granted as a matter of course.

the doctrines of new trials proper. They are anomalous, and are not found in common law practice.⁵⁶ They arose, however, as a substitute for the successive actions that might, at common law, be brought by the same party in an ejectment suit,⁵⁷ and are based upon the theory of greater probability in the attainment of justice, and in the greater security of title.⁵⁸ When the second trial is demanded in a proper case, the statute, as a rule, is mandatory, and the court has no discretion but must grant it.⁵⁹

Such statutes are not retrospective,⁶⁰ and do not apply to pending actions.⁶¹ The repeal of such a statute before the demand for the second trial is made, takes away the right.⁶²

b. Actions for Which Second Trial Given.—As a rule, the actions specified by statute for which second trials as of right are granted are "actions for the recovery of real property."⁶³ Such statutes generally apply both to the action of ejectment,⁶⁴ or its statutory sub-which remained in force for more than two hundred years, being finally abolished by Pub. Laws, p. 103, ch. 674, April 12, 1878, and Pub. Laws, 1879, p. 113, ch. 743, March 10, 1879. Gunn v. Union R. Co., 23 R. I. 289, 62 Atl. 118.

[a] By the common law the action of ejectment was purely one of possession, and as it proceeded on a fictitious demise between fictitious parties, its determination decided nothing beyond the right of the plaintiff at the date of the alleged demise. A new action upon the allegation of a different demise might immediately be instituted. It was only after repeated verdicts in such cases in favor of the plaintiff that the real claimant could apply to a court of equity to quiet the possession and put an end to the fruitless litigation respecting the property. A judgment in ejectment in one action was consequently not a bar to a second action for the same premises. Smale v. Mitchell, 143 U. S. 99, 12 Sup. Ct. 353, 36 L. ed. 90.

stitutes,⁶⁵ and to proceedings in the nature of ejectment, whether under the form of forcible entry and detainer,⁶⁶ or trespass to try title.⁶⁷ They do not, however, embrace actions for the mere determining of title to real property,⁶⁸ especially where the title is merely incidentally involved.⁶⁹ The statutes are usually confined to possessory actions, that is, to actions where one of the parties is in possession of the property, and dispossession is sought by the other party.⁷⁰ Moreover,

[a] Scope of Statute.—The act in question is a remedial statute and should be liberally construed. To come within it the action must be in the nature of an action of ejectment for the recovery of real property. It does not include all actions in which the title to real estate may come in question and be determined. As stated by Chief Justice Gilfillan in Godfrey v. Valentine, 50 Minn. 284, 52 N. W. 643, had the statute intended to give the right to a second trial in all actions where the title to real estate is involved and determined, it would have used different language. To determine the right to a new trial in a given action the court will look to the substance of the action, and not to the mere form thereof. Pleadings will be taken together, without special reference to their formal averments, and if it appears therefrom, in connection with the findings and decision of the court, that the result was to determine the ownership and right to possession of real property, the right to a second trial must be conceded. Where the ownership and right of possession concur, it has been the purpose of this court to disregard the mere technical effect of the pleading in substantial rights of the parties. Phillips v. Mo, 96 Minn. 42, 104 N. W. 681, citing the Minnesota cases.

[b] Does Not Include All Title Actions.—There are other forms of action by which the title of real property may be brought in issue and determined, as for instance, an action for damages for trespass in the nature of the common law action of trespass quare clausum fregit, an action for rents and profits, and actions for foreclosure of mortgage or partition in which the defendant sets up an independent legal title in himself, but none of these are actions for the recovery of real property, and therefore they do not fall within the provisions of the statute. Foster v. Foster, 81 S. C. 307, 62 S. E. 320; Elmore v. Davis, 49 S. C. 1, 26 S. E. 898; Tompkins v. Augusta & K. R. Co., 30 S. C. 479, 9 S. E. 521.

[a] Only Possessory Actions.—(1) In Tierney v. Gondreau, 99 Minn. 421, 109 N. W. 821, the statute was held not to apply to an action to determine a boundary line between adjoining property, although the right of possession was indirectly involved. (2) Of course the ultimate right of possession is involved in all actions involving the title of real property, but the statute granting a second trial must under the decisions be limited to actions where judgment of ouster is sought against the party in possession. Buffalo Land in determining the right to a second trial, the court will look to the substance of the cause of action determined, and not merely to the form or manner in which it is presented.⁷¹

c. Limited to Specified Actions.—The statutory right to a second trial is limited to the causes or action specified by the act and is not to be extended to other actions not included therein,⁷² and under a statute authorizing a second trial in actions to quiet title, it has been held that when the title is only incidentally involved in an action, the right will not be extended to the other issues.⁷³ Moreover, a statute giving a second trial in actions to recover realty and quiet title, does not apply to actions to enforce or cancel⁷⁴ a lien, incumbrance, or con-

[d] Action To Quiet Title.—A statute authorizing a second trial for the recovery of land does not apply to an action to quiet title against an adverse claimant by one in possession. Ia.—Russell v. Nelson, 32 Iowa 215. Kan.—Moorehead v. Robinson, 68 Kan. 634, 75 Pac. 503. Neb.—Mollie v. Peters, 28 Neb. 670, 44 N. W. 872. N. Y.—Malin v. Rose, 12 Wend. 258.

[e] Partition Suits.—(1) A statute giving a second trial as of right to actions for the recovery of possession of land, does not apply to partition suits where no judgment of possession is sought and where no issue of title is involved. Hawkins v. Heinzman, 126 Ind. 551, 25 N. E. 708; Gullett v. Miller, 106 Ind. 75, 5 N. E. 741; Pipes v. Hobbs, 83 Ind. 43; Swartzel v. Rogers, 3 Kan. 374. (2) It is otherwise, however, where title is contested, and the possession of land is sought in connection with such suits. Powers v. Nesbitt, 127 Ind. 497, 27 N. E. 501; Kreitline v. Franz, 106 Ind. 359, 6 N. E. 912.

[f] Obstruction of Easement.—(1) The right does not extend to an action for interruption of the use and enjoyment of an easement, although in such action the title or right to the possession of real estate may be finally determined. Maurer v. Stiner, 82 Wis. 99, 51 N. W. 1101. See also Midland Ry. Co. v. Galey, 141 Ind. 483, 39 N. E. 940, 40 N. E. 801; Davis v. Cleveland, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 140 Ind. 468, 39 N. E. 495; Hall v. Hedrick, 125 Ind. 326, 25 N. E. 350. (2) Where, however, the gist of the action is the recovery of real property, any incidental relief asked in connection with the obstruction of an easement will not defeat the right to a second trial. Kremer v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 54 Minn. 157, 55 N. W. 928; St. Paul v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 49 Minn. 88, 51 N. W. 662.

d. Joinder of Actions.—Under some statutes it is held that where the complaint states two substantive causes of action, in one of which a second trial is demandable as of right, and the other in which it is not, a second trial as of right will be refused.⁸² But under other statutes, if the title and right to the possession of land be involved in the action, either party is entitled to a second trial, even though other

e. Resort to Statute Permitting New Trial for Cause, and Waiver. In addition to the statutory right of a second trial, a new trial may be obtained, as in any other case, for sufficient grounds shown.⁸⁴ It has been held that one who has requested a second trial as of right, waives his right by the filing of a motion for a new trial for cause before the court has ruled upon his prior request.⁸⁵ But the mere fact that a motion for a new trial for cause has been previously filed but denied, does not waive the right to the statutory second trial.⁸⁶ And a party will not be deprived of his right by moving in arrest of judgment,⁸⁷ or, by taking an appeal,⁸⁸ nor by accepting the benefit of a judgment giving him only part of the relief sought.⁸⁹ The right to the second trial can be waived, however, by express agreement,⁹⁰

[a] "It is not important that issues other than the title and right to the possession of the land are involved in the action, for upon all issues not affecting such title or right to possession the former judgment is final and conclusive. In the case of Schmitt v. Schmitt, 32 Minn. 130, 19 N. W. 649, which was an action for divorce, the court held that, as the title and right to the possession of certain land was also involved in the litigation, a second trial of the action was proper upon those questions, notwithstanding the fact that the action was in form one for divorce." *Gray Cloud Land Co. v. [a] Procedure.—In case of a new trial for cause, the motion is governed by the same rules that govern motions for new trials in all other actions. Therefore, while the application for the second trial as of right may, under the statute, be made orally, yet a motion for a new trial for cause must be in writing if the statute regulating new trials in general so provides. f. Procedure To Obtain.—(I.) Parties.—Some of the statutes provide that "the party against whom the judgment is rendered," that is, either the plaintiff or the defendant in the first trial, may demand the second trial,⁹² and this right extends to the heirs, personal representatives, and assignees of the unsuccessful party,⁹³ including purchasers,⁹⁴ or mortgagees of the land.⁹⁵ Under some of the statutes, devisees are also included.⁹⁶

(V.) Notice to Opposite Party. — Notice of the demand for the second trial must be given to the opposite party according to the procedure pointed out by the statute.² In some states, however, no notice may be required.³

(VI.) Conditions Imposed. — The statutes generally require the payment of costs, as a prerequisite to the second trial,⁴ and also the damages awarded in the first trial.⁵ A bond, or undertaking, with sufficient sureties may, also, be required to the effect that the party demanding the second trial will pay all costs and damages which may finally be awarded the other party.⁶ The court, however, may extend the time for the filing of the undertaking and payment of the costs.⁷ When the unsuccessful party in the first trial obtains judgment in the second, the statute sometimes provides for the restitution of the costs and damages.⁸

(VII.) Order Granting Second Trial. — (A.) GENERALLY. — The order granting the second trial should vacate the former judgment,⁹ although

[a] The proper mode of computing the time is to exclude the day named and include the day on which the act is to be done. a failure to do so has been held merely an irregularity which the parties waived by proceeding, without objection, with the second trial.¹⁰ It should provide for the payment to the successful party, of the costs awarded in the action, where that is a condition precedent.¹¹ Unless required by statute, notice of the order is unnecessary.¹²

(B.) VACATING ORDER. — Where the order is not in proper form,¹³ or was not warranted by the facts of the case,¹⁴ the order may be vacated. Motions to vacate the order should, however, be promptly presented, otherwise they will be deemed waived.¹⁵

g. Status of Second Trial. — On the second trial the action stands for trial as if it had never been tried,¹⁶ and, as far as the second trial is concerned, there has never been a previous trial or judgment. The case is fully open to be tried de novo.¹⁷ The former pleadings may be amended,¹⁸ if the cause of action be not so changed as to defeat the right to a second trial.¹⁹ The second trial extends to all issues presented by the pleadings which are pertinent to the title, right of possession, and damages for withholding the property.²⁰ The statutes usually provide that there shall be restitution when the party obtain-

[a] It is better practice to follow the statute strictly in entering an order for a new trial, that is, not only to require previous performance of the conditions mentioned in the statute, so far as they apply, but to frame the order that it will show the facts in that regard and will in terms vacate the judgment and grant a new trial. Rupiper v. Calloway, 105 Wis. 4, 80 N. W. 916.

9. Motion for New Trial as Prerequisite to Appellate Review.

a. In General.—In most jurisdictions, subject to the limitations hereinafter set forth, alleged errors occurring at the trial will not be considered on appeal unless an opportunity to review them has been first presented to the trial court by means of a motion for a new trial.²² This requirement, however, results from local statutes, rules of court, or the established practice of the jurisdiction. It is not a common law requirement, and in some jurisdictions a motion for a new trial is not prerequi-

[a] Rulings After Trial and Judgment.—(1) In order to review a ruling on a motion to set aside a judicial sale, no motion for a new trial is necessary. Dreese v. Myers, 52 Kan. 126, 34 Pac. 349, 39 Am. St. Rep. 336. (2) Such a motion is made, in fact, after final judgment, and a rule requiring a motion for a new trial as a prerequisite to the review of rulings site to a review of all such alleged errors.²³ Moreover, in connection with certain classes of errors there is some conflict of opinion as to the necessity of a motion for a new trial prior to appeal,²⁴ and even in the same jurisdiction, the decisions are not always harmonious, because of changes in the statutes and rules of court. It is important, therefore, in the several states, to consult the latest regulations of the local practice. Where a motion for a new trial is prerequisite to appellate review, any errors that would be ground for a new trial not included in such a motion will not be considered by the appellate court.²⁵

Issues and Conclusions of Law.—Since a new trial is a re-examination of an issue of fact, a motion for a new trial is not required to review decisions on issues of law.²⁷ This rule applies, also, to errors in conclusions of law.²⁸

b. Trial by Court.—In many jurisdictions in which the general rule obtains, a motion for a new trial is required to review the alleged errors when the cause is tried by the court, the same as when tried by a jury.²⁹ In other jurisdictions, however, while the rule applies Judgment.—No such motion is necessary to enable the reviewing court to determine whether special findings by the court support the judgment. Horn v. Newton City Bank, 32 Kan. 518, 523, 4 Pac. 1022.

[b] Texas.—Fundamental Errors. By construction of a statute regulating the contents of the record on appeal, it is held that "one appealing from a judgment rendered by the court without a jury need not file a motion for new trial. . . . (Frenzell v. Lexington, L. A. & I. Co., 126 S. W. 907; Luther v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 25 Tex. Civ. App. 31, 60 S. W. 1029; Griffin v. McKinney, 25 Tex. Civ. App. 432, 62 S. Dec. 268); but, when no such motion is filed, the party appealing must except to the judgment and have the trial judge file findings of fact and conclusions of law (Pollard v. Allen & Sims, 171 S. W. 302, and authorities cited), or bring up a statement of facts in the record (Cornelius v. Harris, 163 S. W. 346; Greer v. Featherston, 95 Tex. 654, 69 S. W. 69). Failing in this, none but fundamental errors can be considered." Commonwealth B. & C. Ins. Co. v. Cator (Tex. Civ. App.), 175 S. W. 1074; Campbell Banking Co. v. Hamilton (Tex. Civ. App.), 173 S. [c] A judgment rendered after the court's refusal to admit any evidence requires no motion for a new trial in order that the decision may be reviewed. Werley v. Huntington Waterworks Co., 138 Ind. 148, 37 N. E. 582, the court saying, "It is only when there has been a trial that a motion for a new trial is required as a condition precedent to a review of errors."

to jury trials, it is held not to apply when the case is heard by the court.³⁰

c. Report of Referee.—It is also the general rule that a report of a referee will not be reviewed without a motion for a new trial.³¹

d. Criminal Cases.—The general rule is the same in criminal cases as in civil cases. The appellate court cannot consider errors of law occurring at the trial unless they are assigned as error on a motion for a new trial.³²

e. In Equity.—As a general rule, no motion for a new trial is necessary for the foundation of an appeal in equity.³³ will not be considered on appeal without a motion for a new trial.⁵³

p. Jury Trial and Jurors.—In some jurisdictions it is held that the refusal of the court to allow a jury trial will not be reviewed on appeal unless a motion for a new trial is made.⁵⁴ Elsewhere, it is held, however, that when such refusal appears as a matter of record no motion for a new trial is required.⁵⁵ The question of the incompetency of jurors requires a motion for a new trial in order to obtain appellate review,⁵⁶ and, the same is true of other alleged irregularities connected with the jury.⁵⁷

q. Witnesses and Evidence.—(I.) Witnesses.—In connection with witnesses, such alleged errors as rejecting a witness,⁵⁸ limiting the number of witnesses to be heard,⁵⁹ separating the witnesses at the trial,⁶⁰ and permitting the asking of leading questions,⁶¹ require motions for new trials in order to be considered on appeal.

(II.) Admission and Exclusion of Evidence.—Errors based on the admission or exclusion of evidence must in most jurisdictions be raised by a motion for a new trial before they will be heard on appeal.⁶²

II. GROUNDS FOR NEW TRIAL. — A. IN GENERAL. — 1. At Common Law. — The reasons or causes for which new trials are granted, aside from statutory provisions, is a question to be answered purely by the usage of the courts of common law.⁷⁷ The practice of granting new trials grew up by very slow degrees,⁷⁸ and at first, they were granted with much reluctance and great strictness. A broader and more just view came in time, however, and, in Lord Mansfield's day, that great jurist said new trials should be granted according to the exigency of each particular case, upon principles of substantial justice.⁷⁹ Moreover, at first, whatever was alleged for cause of new trial, must have appeared of record.⁸⁰ Gradually, however, the courts relaxed this ancient rule and exercised a discretion to set aside verdicts in the interest of justice, although the cause did not appear of record.⁸¹ In other words, the first, broad, fundamental ground to be established as the cause for granting a new trial was injustice.⁸² stance and effect a motion for a new trial, it should be regarded and treated as such on appeal. Jones v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 7 Mackey (D. C.) 426; Goode v. Lewis, 118 Mo. 357, 24 S. W. 61, where, in a partition suit, exceptions to a sheriff's report of sale were so considered.

[b] Motion To Set Aside Verdict or Judgment.—(1) In Hartley v. Chidester, 36 Kan. 363, 13 Pac. 578, a motion to set aside and vacate the verdict was treated as a motion for a new trial. (2) In Childs v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 117 Mo. 414, 23 S. W. 373, a motion to set aside the judgment for alleged error, such motion not being filed within the time required for a motion for a new trial, was not, however, regarded as such a motion.

This being the purpose of new trials, the courts, from time to time, extended their rules in order to meet with and remedy conditions as they arose.⁸³ It is difficult except in very broad terms, to designate all the specific causes for which new trials are granted at common law.⁸⁴ Some of the classifications which have been made will be found in the notes.⁸⁵

Reprint 187, Lord Mansfield said, that a new trial ought to be granted to attain real justice, but not to gratify litigious passions on every point of summum jus. So in the following cases, although the verdicts were against evidence or the strict rule of law, yet the court would not give a second chance to a hard action, or an unconscionable defense. *Macrow v. [a] "The courts of the common law have usually granted new trials when the verdict is against the weight of the evidence, or contrary to law, or when excessive or manifestly insufficient damages have been awarded; for the admission of illegal evidence, or the rejection of competent evidence; or when a party has been deprived of evidence by accident and without fault on his part, or is taken by surprise in a matter that he could not reasonably anticipate; for misdirection of the court upon material questions of law, or for serious irregularity in the trial; or misconduct of the jury; or unfair conduct of the prevailing party; or manifest injustice has been done. Courts of law have also granted new trials when the losing party has discovered material evidence since the trial, and satisfied the court that he had used due diligence in preparing his case for trial; that the newly-discovered evidence will tend to prove a material fact which was not directly in issue on the trial, or was not then known and investigated by proof, and will probably produce a different result." *Chandler v. [a] An English writer of a hundred years ago (1817), John Peter Grant, barrister of London, published a little book, "On the Law Relating to New Trials," in which he reviewed all the then reported English cases upon new trial. He classified the grounds upon which they had been granted as follows: (1) Defects or irregularities affecting the judge or jury; (2) uncertainty or insufficiency in the verdict itself; (3) the offer of new evidence; (4) the plea of surprise; (5) misdirection of the judge; (6) the rejection of competent or the admission of incompetent evidence; (7) the departure of the judge from due and accustomed mode of proceeding at the trial; (8) the jury returning a general verdict when the judge had directed a special; (9) the verdict against the law; (10) the verdict against the evidence; (11) excessive damages.

2. Statutory Grounds.—a. In General.—In many jurisdictions, the grounds for which new trials may be granted are expressly enumerated by statute.⁸⁷ In some states, the grounds for a new trial are held to be limited to the statutory enumeration,⁸⁸ and accordingly in such jurisdictions, an aggrieved party must bring himself within the causes therein prescribed.⁸⁹ In other states, however, the statutory enumeration is not exclusive, but in the interests of justice, the court may, by virtue of its inherent common law right, grant new trials for other good and sufficient reasons.⁹⁰

Some statutes prescribe no specific grounds for new trial, but merely confer statutory authority in a general way, as, for example, that new trials may be granted "for reasons for which new trials have been [a] "Notwithstanding the statute quoted, the court has inherent power to order a new trial for any palpable error committed by it, or by the jury, even in the absence of a motion for a new trial. The judge is something more than a mere moderator. He has certain duties to perform, and when convinced that errors have been committed which resulted in a palpable miscarriage of his justice, it is his province, as well as his duty, to interfere and to grant a new trial." Thomas v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 169 Iowa 337, 151 N. W. 387, 389.

usually granted at common law,"⁹¹ or "where justice requires,"⁹² or "for any cause for which a new trial may by law be granted,"⁹³ or "upon good cause shown,"⁹⁴ or after certain enumerated grounds, "for other reasonable causes,"⁹⁵ "according to the provisions of the common law and practice of the courts."⁹⁶

b. Specific Enumeration.—An examination of the statutes of the various states that expressly set forth the grounds for which new trial may be granted, shows, as would be expected, great similarity in the enumerated causes, both in civil and criminal cases. There are differences in some details, from time to time, and the grounds in criminal cases often slightly vary, in the same jurisdiction from the grounds specified in civil cases. The general scope, however, of the different statutes is practically the same. Prefaced, usually, by the statement that "new trials may be granted for any of the following causes materially affecting the substantial rights of the aggrieved party," a number of statutes specify the grounds as follows: (1) Irregularity in the proceedings of the court, jury or adverse party, or any order of the court, or abuse of discretion by which such party was prevented from having a fair trial;⁹⁷ (2) misconduct of jury or prevailing party;⁹⁸ (3) accident or surprise which ordinary prudence could not have guarded against;⁹⁹ (4) newly discovered evidence material for the party making the application which he could not with reasonable diligence have discovered and produced at the trial;¹ (5) excessive damages, appearing to have been given under the influence of passion or prejudice;² (6) insufficiency of the evidence to justify the verdict, or other decision, or that it is against law;³ (7) error in law occurring at the trial and excepted to by the party making the application.⁴ In addition to the preceding general grounds, various special grounds may be found in some of the statutes, although such special grounds are usually only a phase of some general grounds.⁵

c. Criminal Cases.—As in civil cases, the statutes sometimes set forth the grounds for which new trials may be granted in criminal cases. The designation may be very general,⁶ or the statute may declare that new trials in criminal cases may be granted for like causes as in civil actions.⁷ Other statutes specifically enumerate the grounds, as for example: (1) irregularity in the proceedings;⁸ (2) jury received evidence out of court other than view of premises;⁹ (3) jury separated without leave of court after retiring to deliberate, or has been guilty of misconduct;¹⁰ (4) verdict decided by lot or any other unfair means;¹¹ (5) when the court has misdirected the jury in a material matter of law;¹² (6) verdict contrary to law or evidence;¹³ (7) newly discovered evidence;¹⁴ (8) accident or surprise.¹⁵

Insanity.—That the defendant was insane at the time he committed the crime is not of itself ground for a new trial,¹⁶ particularly where insanity was not pleaded.¹⁷

3. United States Courts.—The federal statutes specify no express grounds for new trials, but provide that the district courts may, after trial by jury, grant new trials “for reasons for which new trials have usually been granted in the courts of law.”¹⁸ Moreover, a state statute restricting the grounds for which new trials might be granted is unconstitutional as applied to a federal court, since in the language of the seventh amendment to the constitution of the United States, “no fact tried by a jury shall be otherwise re-examined in any court of the United States than according to the rules of the common law.”¹⁹

4. Summary.—As a general summary of the preceding matters, it may be said, first, that courts of common law, without limiting the grounds for a new trial to any fixed enumeration of causes, will grant a new trial whenever justice requires it, but never where its ends have been attained;²⁰ second, that a survey of the recognized grounds for a new trial, both at common law and under the statutes, would seem to justify their broad classification under seven general heads, namely; (1) irregularities; (2) misconduct; (3) errors of law; (4) accident or surprise; (5) verdict contrary to law; (6) verdict contrary to evidence; (7) newly discovered evidence. This classification will consequently be followed and discussed in the succeeding pages.

B. IRREGULARITIES. — 1. In General. — A new trial may be grantable at common law, for defects or irregularities in the proceedings,²¹ or according to many of the statutes, for "irregularities in the proceedings of the court, jury, referee, or prevailing party."²²

2. Meaning of Irregularity. — In many of the statutes irregularities and misconduct are made separate and distinct grounds for a new trial,²³ and the terms may be distinguished in that an irregularity is a failure to observe that particular course of proceeding which according to practice should have been observed;²⁴ or, as also defined, it is a want of adherence to a prescribed rule, and may consist of an omission, or the doing of something at the improper time or in an improper manner.²⁵ Misconduct, on the other hand, is wrong conduct, bad behavior.²⁶ It implies a wrongful intention.²⁷ Consequently, under the statutes, allowing new trials for irregularities in the proceedings of the jury, and also for misconduct on the part of the jury, the grounds are obviously not intended to be identical.²⁸ Irregularities, properly speaking, embrace only such prejudicial occurrences, out of the usual procedure, that do not amount to rulings on matters of law.²⁹

Affidavits.—The statutes distinguish the grounds by usually requiring affidavits in support of motions on the ground of misconduct, while in case of irregularities no such requirement applies. See infra, III, F, 9, g.

[a] However, the terms, in practice, are sometimes used interchangeably, and it has been held that personal misconduct on the part of a judge, having under advisement a case tried in his court, may be an "irregularity," that is, "an irregularity in the proceedings of the court." Gay v. Torrence, 145 Cal. 144, 78 Pac. 540, 542.

29. Valerius v. Richard, 57 Minn. 443, 59 N. W. 534.

[a] The term "irregularity" is not properly applied to a ruling made upon a question of law regularly presented for decision, as, for example, the court's refusal to allow a peremptory challenge to a juror. Such a ruling is

3. Must Be Pointed Out.—Irregularities are not presumed, but must be alleged and shown to exist,³⁰ and in a motion for a new trial the particular irregularity must be pointed out. It is not sufficient to allege irregularity in general.³¹

4. Must Work Injury.—The irregularity must be such as to prevent the aggrieved party from having a fair trial.³² It cannot be made the basis of a new trial if it would not affect the verdict or prejudice the complaining parties.³³ A mere informality, for example, in drawing a jury, or an irregularity in the jurors themselves, will not be sufficient ground for setting aside a verdict, either in a civil or criminal case, unless some injury is shown;³⁴ and where the court is satisfied that the complaining party has not been injured, a new trial will not be granted.³⁵

5. Particular Matters.—a. Jurisdiction.—A motion for a new trial is not the proper remedy to raise the question of jurisdiction, because want of jurisdiction is not a ground for a new trial.³⁵

b. Theory and Form of Action.—A new trial will not be granted in order that plaintiff may bring his action upon a different theory,³⁷ or on account of objections to the form of action.³⁸ Where, however, a case is tried on an erroneous theory of the law, and a verdict is returned on such a theory, a new trial ought to be granted,³⁹ and a misunderstanding of the issues involved may be sufficient ground for a new trial.⁴⁰

c. Arraignment of Accused.—In some jurisdictions it is held that the failure to arraign and enter the plea of a defendant in a criminal case is an irregularity sufficient to set aside a verdict of guilty and to order a new trial.⁴¹

d. Premature Trial.—Proceedings may also be irregular and warrant a new trial where a defendant over his objection is required to defend a cause upon its merits at a term when it was not triable, and before the issues were framed.⁴²

e. Motions.—(I.) In General.—As a general rule, rulings on motions, either before or after the trial, are not irregularities that can be made ground for new trials.⁴³

(II.) Abuse of Discretion.—Some of the statutes expressly specify "abuse of discretion by the court" as a ground for a new trial.⁴⁴ "Abuse of discretion" as used in such statute, means abuse of discretion during the trial, and does not cover matters preceding the trial.⁴⁵

(III.) Dismissals.—The overruling of a motion to dismiss the action is not generally recognized as a ground for a new trial.⁴⁶

St., §1025) providing that "no indictment found shall be deemed insufficient, nor shall the trial, judgment, or other proceeding thereon be affected, by reason of any defect or imperfection in matter of form only, which shall not tend to the prejudice of the defendant," it is held that the irregularity in the failure of a formal arraignment is remedied where the defendant was present in court throughout the trial, took the stand as a witness, and as a witness denied the charge. Moreover, a federal criminal court sitting in Missouri is not controlled by the Missouri practice. United States v. Molloy, 31 Fed. 19.

(IV.) Continuances. — The abuse of discretion in granting or refusing a continuance is a sufficient irregularity for the granting of a new trial,⁴⁷ and the trial court should of its own motion grant a new trial where it appears that the refusal of a continuance resulted in an injustice.⁴⁸

(V.) Change of Venue. — The granting, or the refusing to grant, a change of venue may be an irregularity warranting a new trial.⁴⁹

(VI.) Right to Jury Trial. — The failure or refusal of the court to call a jury when rightfully demanded is ground for a new trial.⁵⁰

remedy in such cases.⁵² Defects either in the substance,⁵³ or form,⁵⁴ of pleadings, or alleged errors in refusing to make a complaint more specific,⁵⁵ or in striking out pleadings,⁵⁶ or in refusing leave to file pleadings out of time,⁵⁷ are not subject to motions for new trials, such rulings, even if erroneous, are not errors affecting the trial of an issue formed, but errors preventing the forming of an issue to try.⁵⁸

(II.) Sufficiency. — The question of the sufficiency of the declaration or petition cannot, as a rule, be raised by a motion for a new trial.⁵⁹

[a] Pleadings Confused. — Issues Uncertain.—Where several demurrers to pleas and replications were undisposed of, no issue joined, and the pleadings generally were in such a defective condition as to make it manifest that the jury could not have had an intelligent apprehension of the issues, the judgment will be reversed, and a new trial granted on appeal. *Pearce & Son v. [d] Verdict Unsupported by Evidence.—A plaintiff can prove only what is alleged. Consequently, special

Moreover, such a motion is not requisite even for appellate review in such a case, since the question of the sufficiency of pleadings can, on appeal, be determined by the record itself.⁶⁰

(III.) Demurrers. — By great weight of authority, decisions sustaining or overruling demurrers do not constitute a ground for a new trial, and have no place in a motion therefor.⁶¹ Errors in such matters are, moreover, not “errors of law occurring at the trial,” under such a statutory designation of cause for new trial, but are rulings of the court on questions preliminary to the trial.⁶²

(IV.) Parties. — Technical defects in the misjoinder,⁶³ or non-joinder of parties, where no injustice has been done, will not warrant a new trial.⁶⁴

damages found by a verdict must be supported not only by the evidence but also by the allegations of the complaint. If the allegations are insufficient, necessarily the proof is also, and a judgment for special damages cannot be sustained in the absence of sufficient allegations in the complaint. h. The Jury. — (I.) In General. — Matters connected with the drawing, summoning, returning, selection and empaneling of the jury, together with the effect of errors and irregularities in these matters, have been treated elsewhere in this work, and the same is true of irregularities in the custody, conduct and deliberations of the jury.⁷¹

(II.) Must Prevent Fair Trial. — To warrant a new trial, however, in such cases, the substantial rights of a complaining party must have been affected, and a fair trial prevented.⁷² Where no injury has resulted, a new trial will not be granted merely because the jury has been irregularly selected, when the alleged irregularity applies merely to the formalities of their selection,⁷³ and the same principle has been applied where a juror disqualified merely propter defectum has been retained.⁷⁴ And where the challenge for cause of a competent juror was sustained by the court, but another competent juror took his place, it was held that no injury was caused, and a new trial not warranted.⁷⁵ It has been held, however, that regardless of the question of injury, it is good ground for a new trial, in a criminal case, that one of the jurors was incompetent,⁷⁶ and where good cause for challenge on the voir dire existed but was erroneously refused, prejudice will be presumed.⁷⁷

[a] Propter Defectum.—As said by the supreme court of Tennessee: "Motions for a new trial in Tennessee, even in criminal cases, have been always regarded with disfavor by courts when the motions are grounded on such disqualifications of a juror as a challenge propter defectum upon the trial would disclose. The want of these purely statutory qualifications, such as citizenship, age, property, sex, etc., which do not go to make up the really (not purely legal) necessary and essential qualities to enable the juror to do his duty intelligently and impartially in the case, have never in this state, or elsewhere, been treated with the same strictness as objections to the juror for bias, partiality, criminality and the like causes reached by challenge propter affectum and propter delictum as designated in the common law. Indeed, the courts are swift to lay hold of an argument or fact in the record on which to ground a denial of these motions when based upon the propter defectum class of juror disqualifications, especially where they can see that no injury has thereby resulted to the party objecting to the verdict." *Brewer v. (III.) Waiver of Irregularities. — Irregularities in connection with the jury may be waived by the complaining party.⁷⁸

(IV.) Necessity of Objection. — Objections to the irregular selection and impaneling of the jury, should be made in season, usually by challenge to the array, before the jury is sworn. They cannot be raised for the first time, after verdict, by motion for a new trial.⁷⁹ Moreover, in general, objections to the qualifications of jurors should be taken advantage of by challenge, otherwise such irregularities will be waived,⁸⁰ unless, possibly, in certain exceptional cases affecting the authorities are that you cannot challenge the juror after he has been sworn unless it be for cause arising afterwards. . . . It would be most dangerous to pursue a different practice." Brewer v. Jacobs, 22 Fed. 217, 235.

(V.) Drawing, Summoning, Returning, Selection and Impaneling — Irregularities in the writ of venire, or in the drawing, summoning, or returning jurors, providing such irregularities affect the substantial rights of an aggrieved party, may be good ground for a new trial,⁸⁵ unless the statute is such as to forbid it.⁸⁶ New trials have been granted for such irregularities as excluding from the jury-wheel, solely on account of race, all persons of the African race,⁸⁷ that the jury was summoned

The new trial was refused on this ground, because "the juror being legally qualified when put into the box, his subsequent disqualification by divesting himself of his freehold, and thus not being a freeholder when drawn, summoned, and sworn, should have been taken advantage of in challenge, and cannot prevail after verdict.

a juror may be ground for a new trial, as, for example that the juror was not a freeholder.⁹⁸

(C.) AGE. — That a juror was exempt by reason of advanced age is not ground for a new trial,⁹⁹ but it is if he is disqualified by reason of insufficient age.¹

(D.) CITIZENSHIP. — In some jurisdictions the fact that a juryman was an alien justifies a new trial,² as, also, that one of the jurors had not taken the oath of allegiance.³ Other cases hold, however, that the fact of alienage does not, in itself, amount to a sufficient ground.⁴

(H.) INSANITY.—A new trial was refused on the ground of the insanity of a juror who showed no evidence of mental unsoundness at the time of the trial, although he was admittedly insane soon after.¹¹

(I.) IMMORALITY.—It is within the discretion of the court to allow a new trial where a juror who was disqualified on the ground of immorality sat in the case.¹²

(J.) BIAS, PREJUDICE.—Where a fair trial has been prevented by the bias or prejudice of a juror, such disqualification being unknown when the juror was accepted, a new trial may be granted,¹³ especially in cases where, on his examination, the juror had denied or concealed this disqualification.¹⁴ This ground may arise where a juror has formed and expressed an opinion upon the merits of the case,¹⁵ by reason of the relationship of a juror to one of the parties,¹⁶ or to counsel in

[a] Juror Ignorant of Relationship. Persons related within the prohibited degree to parties to an action are incompetent to serve as jurors, notwithstanding ignorance on the part of the disqualified jurors of the fact of their kinship. It is contrary to public policy to allow a juror, after participating in the making of a verdict, to assert ignorance of any fact which rendered him incompetent to serve. Bank of University v. Tuck, 107 Ga. 211, 33 S. E. 70.

[b] Son of Stockholder.—Where in a suit against a corporation, the son of a stockholder was a juror in the case, a new trial was granted. Georgia R. Co. v. Hart, 60 Ga. 550.

[c] Brother-in-Law.—A new trial was, however, refused where the only ground was that one of the jurors was the case,¹⁷ or to some other interested person,¹⁸ provided that the aggrieved party was ignorant of the relationship when the juror was accepted.¹⁹ That a juror was pecuniarily interested in a case may be a ground for a new trial,²⁰ but, as in other cases, a new trial will not be granted in such a case unless such interest produced prejudicial bias.²¹

(K.) TRYING CASE WITH ELEVEN JURORS. — Trying a case with eleven jurors is an irregularity for which a new trial should be granted unless the defect was waived.²²

i. During the Trial. — (I.) In General. — Prejudicial departure from established procedure, during the trial, may be good cause for granting a new one. Irregularities of this sort may be committed by the court, a referee, court officials, the prevailing party or witnesses or they may occur in other miscellaneous ways.²³

(II.) On the Part of the Court. — (A.) IN GENERAL. — Irregularities in the proceedings of the court, materially affecting the substantial rights of an aggrieved party, or which prevent either of the parties from having a fair trial, constitute a generally recognized ground for new trial.²⁴ It has been said that it is impossible to answer with precision the question, "What is an irregularity of the court?" since no ac-

[a] From a very early date, the departure of the judge from a due and accustomed mode of proceeding at the trial has, where injustice results, warranted the setting aside of the verdict. Grant, New Trial (London, 1817).

[b] Must Work Injury.—However irregular or indiscreet the alleged conduct of the judge may be, yet if such irregularity was unknown to the jury, and had no effect or influence upon the verdict, it will not entitle the complaining party to a new trial. Sheehan v. Hammond, 2 Cal. App. 371, 84 Pac. 340.

[c] Irregularity in Matter of a Brief.—At the close of his argument, counsel handed to the court, without notice to the other party, a brief upon a matter material to the case. This brief was read by the court before its decision was rendered. It was held that this was such a departure from the usual and regular method of procedure that a new trial was warranted. The statement of the trial judge that he was not influenced by the contents of the brief cannot be accepted as conclusive. To permit counsel upon one side to present such arguments without giving his opponent an opportunity to reply amounts to a denial of the right to be heard in court. Spiro v. Nitkin, 72 Conn. 202, 44 Atl. 13.

curate classification of things which are irregular is possible.²⁵ In many of the statutes, "irregularities in the proceedings of the court" are distinguished from "errors of law occurring at the trial," the former meaning, it has been said, prejudicial proceedings or rulings before or after the trial, and the latter, erroneous rulings during the trial proper.²⁶ However, there may be irregularities in the proceedings of the court during the trial. Irregularity here does not include "error," since "error" occurs only when a ruling is made upon a question of law. Irregularities during the trial embrace prejudicial occurrences not amounting to rulings on matters of law.²⁷

(B.) DISQUALIFICATION. — ABSENCE FROM COURT ROOM. — A party may be prevented from having a fair trial for the reason that the judge was disqualified, as, for example, that he had an interest in the case,²⁸ or because the judge was temporarily absent from the court room during the trial,²⁹ although it has been held that in such a case injury will not be presumed.³⁰

(C.) CONDUCT OF TRIAL. — The supervision and conduct of the trial are in many respects largely within the discretion of the court, and the exercise of this discretion is not ordinarily subject to a motion for Irregularities, Misconduct, Errors. New trials may be granted for irregularities, misconduct, or errors on the part of the court, and not a little confusion has been occasioned, at times, by the interchange of these terms. In a broad sense, every irregularity is an error, and often error sufficient to warrant a new trial, but, properly speaking, the two terms are quite distinct. The border line between irregularity and misconduct on the part of the court is, however, at times, more difficult to trace. In fact, some of the matters herein cited as irregularities could properly be classed with misconduct. See infra, this section, and II, C and D.

[a] Judge Absent. — Where the judge during the trial was so far absent and for such length of time as to prevent his control of the conduct of the jury, and during such time the prosecuting attorney made statements prejudicial to the accused, a new trial was granted. Miller v. State, 73 Ohio St. 195, 76 N. E. 823.

[b] Absence During Taking of Testimony. — Where the trial was without a jury, the absence of the judge while a part of the testimony was being taken, is not sufficient cause for a new trial when the judge was present a large part of the time and when the testimony not heard by him was substantially conceded in the argument addressed to the court on both sides at the close of the trial. Crook v. Hamlin, 71 Hun 136, 24 N. Y. Supp. 543, 54 N. Y. St. 77, affirmed, 140 N. Y. 297, 35 N. E. 499. Earl and Gray, JJ., dissenting.

a new trial.³¹ A failure to swear a witness in the case will not justify a new trial where no harm by such omission was caused,³² or where it does not appear that the complaining party was ignorant of the fact at the time,³³ or, if he knew of it, nevertheless did not object.³⁴ However, the court's inattention to the evidence may amount to such an irregularity as may warrant a new trial.³⁵ To refuse the right to open and close an argument may also justify a new trial,³⁶ as may the improper withdrawal of the case from the jury,³⁷ or the giving of judgment upon the opening statement,³⁸ or improperly submitting or not submitting certain questions to the jury.³⁹

(D.) EXPRESSION OF OPINION. — In some states, where by expressed opinion upon the facts of the case, the court interferes with the lawful province of the jury to the prejudice of the party complaining, a new trial will be granted.⁴⁰

[a] Plea in Abatement; How To Be Tried.—It is not ground for a new trial that the court submitted to the jury a plea in abatement, with the proof bearing upon it, jointly with the case upon its merits. Whether the plea in abatement should be first submitted is a matter vested in the discretion of the court, and where no injury is shown to have resulted no cause for a new trial arises. Tynberg v. Cohen, 67 Tex. 220, 2 S. W. 734.

(III.) Officers of the Court. — Irregularities with respect to referees, or other officers of the court, may also give rise to new trials. Where, for example, a referee has a personal interest in the case,⁴¹ or compels a party to call a hostile witness,⁴² new trials may be proper. Harmless irregularities, however, on the part of referees,⁴³ or a failure of a referee to file his report, will not entitle one to a new trial.⁴⁴ Nor is it a ground for a new trial that the official stenographer failed to file his transcribed notes within the time specified by statute.⁴⁵ Irregularities of officers in connection with the custody and deliberations of the jury may or may not justify a new trial, and are fully treated elsewhere in this work.⁴⁶

(V.) Prevailing Party. — The distinction between irregularity and misconduct on the part of the prevailing party,⁴⁸ is not easily drawn, and, in practice, new trials are, as a rule, based rather upon the misconduct of a party than upon irregularity. Such irregularity, however, is sometimes urged as ground for new trial.⁴⁹ Prejudicial irregularities on the part of an agent, employee, relative, or interested friend of the prevailing party will be imputed to the latter.⁵⁰

44. McQuillan v. Donahue, 49 Cal. 157; Emerson v. Bigler, 21 Mont. 200, 53 Pac. 621.

[a] The fact that a referee absconded without obeying an order to file with the court a transcript of the evidence, though it resulted in inconvenience, or even injustice, to the defendant, was no ground for a new trial where new trials are limited to specific statutory grounds, such a cause not being specified. Ogle v. Potter, 24 Mont. 501, 62 Pac. 920.

45. Hawaii v. Maga, 19 Hawaii 157.

[a] That the court stenographer was unable to transcribe his notes and could not, therefore, furnish a transcript for appeal, does not warrant a new trial where the court granted the appellant ample time to prepare the evidence in the old way. Crouch v. O'Banion, 163 Ky. 581, 174 S. W. 3.

46. See the title "Juries and Jurors."

47. See infra, this note.

[a] Where counsel read in argument to the jury, under permission of the court, certain prejudicial matter not in evidence and commented thereon, a new trial was granted for the irregularity. Union Central Life Ins. Co. v. Cheever, 36 Ohio St. 201, 38 Am. Rep. 573.

49. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Turney, 183 Ala. 398, 62 So. 885, new trial granted where party boarded and slept with a juror.

[a] The prevailing party's hysteria while on the witness stand is not sufficient ground for new trial. "Of course, if it appeared that the dramatic occurrence that took place in the midst of the trial was intentional, and for an improper motive, it would afford ground for setting aside the verdict. But here the affidavits . . . indicate quite clearly that the plaintiff's condition was not feigned, but was owing to the mental strain of several days of trial acting upon a weak and exhausted physical condition and a shattered nervous system." Chicago & E. R. Co. v. Meech, 163 Ill. 305, 45 N. E. 290.

50. Finlen v. Heinze, 28 Mont. 548, 73 Pac. 123, where a female employee of a prevailing defendant had, during the trial, written letters, with reference to the case, to the judge.

j. Verdict.—(I.) In General.—Although new trials may be awarded upon the ground that the verdict is contrary to law,⁵¹ yet a verdict may be objectionable by reason of irregularity or defect, and still not "contrary to law," as that expression is used in the statute.⁵²

(II.) Objection Necessary.—For defects or irregularities which do not inherently render a verdict invalid, objection must be duly made, otherwise they will be considered waived.⁵³

(III.) Harmless Error.—The doctrine of harmless error likewise applies here as elsewhere, since irregularities and defects which do not affect the result, or work injury to a party, cannot be made the ground for a new trial.⁵⁴

(IV.) Defects or Irregularities.—That a verdict was received on Sunday is not a cause for setting it aside,⁵⁵ but a refusal to allow a poll of the jury has been held such an irregularity as justifies a new trial.⁵⁶ New trials have also been granted where the verdict was altered after it was recorded and the jury dismissed;⁵⁷ where because of clerical errors it failed to embody the true finding of the jury;⁵⁸ also for defects as to parties, as, for example, where a joint verdict was rendered against parties improperly joined.⁵⁹ A new trial will not be granted, however, for a mere clerical error in the form of the verdict.⁶⁰

(V.) Uncertainty, Insufficiency.—A new trial will be granted where the verdict is void on account of its obscurity or uncertainty.⁶¹

k. Judgments and Decrees.—Irregularities in judgments and decrees are not grounds for new trials.⁷⁰ Thus, an irregularity in the entry of the judgment,⁷¹ or the allegation that the judgment is contrary to law, or is not supported by the evidence,⁷² is not cause for a new trial.

[a] Rule Governing Verdicts Not Applicable.—(1) While new trials are regularly granted on the ground that the verdict or findings are not supported by the law and evidence, yet it is no ground for a new trial that the judgment is not so sustained and

1. Taxing Costs or Fees.—An irregularity in taxing costs or fees does not ordinarily constitute ground for a new trial.⁷⁵

C. MISCONDUCT.—1. In General.—Another broad ground for the granting of a new trial may be summed up under the general terms of misconduct, including misconduct of the prevailing party or his counsel, misconduct of witnesses, misconduct of jurors, misconduct of the court, and misconduct of third persons. It is a ground recognized both at common law and under many of the statutes, in both civil and criminal cases,⁷⁴ though under some statutes the term misconduct is not used or is confined to particular persons such as the jury.⁷⁵

Although the terms are sometimes interchanged, yet the technical difference between misconduct and irregularity has been previously pointed out;⁷⁶ but it should be further said that the term "misconduct" used in the statutes relative to new trials does not necessarily imply an evil or corrupt motive.⁷⁷

2. Of Prevailing Party.—Any misconduct of the prevailing party that prevents the losing party from having a fair trial is a general ground for a new trial.⁷⁸ Such misconduct, moreover, is not confined to matters occurring at the trial, but includes acts which although occurring before the trial operate at it.⁷⁹ A party's misa motion for a new trial is not the proper remedy in such cases. Cal. Martin v. Matfield, 49 Cal. 42. Ga. Coleman v. Slade, 75 Ga. 61. Idaho. Curtis v. Walling, 2 Idaho 416, 18 Pac. 54. Ind.—Rosenzweig v. Frazer, 82 Ind. 342. N. Y.—Garbutt v. Garbutt, 43 Hun 635, 4 N. Y. St. 416. (2) A motion for a new trial reaches errors in the verdict or such errors of the court as may lead to the verdict, but it is not the proper method of correcting errors in a decree or judgment. Potts v. Atlanta, 140 Ga. 431, 79 S. E. 110; First State Bank v. Carver, 111 Ga. 876, 36 S. E. 960.

[b] But in a criminal case, the imposing of a sentence not authorized by law is an error for which the reviewing court may order a new trial. Brown v. State, 47 Ala. 47.

[a] Misconduct which may or may not be fraudulent is as well recognized a ground for the granting of new trials as either surprise or newly discovered evidence. Corley v. New York & H. R. Co., 12 App. Div. 409, 42 N. Y. Supp. 941.

[b] If the successful party or any officer of the court or the jury have been guilty of gross misconduct, a new trial should be granted. Meyer v. Fiegel, 38 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 424.

conduct that warrants a new trial may be, for example, illegal means, on his part, to gain an advantage in selecting a jury;⁸⁰ tampering with witnesses;⁸¹ perjury;⁸² attempting to influence unlawfully the jury;⁸³ or any undue intimacy on his part with jurors.⁸⁴ Indeed, it has been said that for any, even the least, intermeddling on the part of the prevailing party with a juror, the verdict will be set aside.⁸⁵ Consequently, the treating of a juror by the prevailing party has been repeatedly held a cause for a new trial,⁸⁶ unless it is clearly⁸⁷

Crow*, 9 Wash. 374, 37 Pac. 474, the plaintiff and one of the jurors were playing cards and drinking together in a saloon, and out walking together and talking, though not about the case, during the time of the trial and the verdict for the plaintiff was set aside. (2) In Wright v. Eastlick, 125 Cal. 517, 58 Pac. 87, one of the jurors attended a dance with a party in the action. The two drank together, and appeared intimate. A verdict for the offending party was set aside.

3. Of Counsel.—Misconduct of counsel is imputable to the party whom he represents,⁸⁸ and counsel's misconduct sufficient to give rise to a new trial may consist of abusive or improper remarks in the presence of the jury during the trial of the case,⁸⁹ made, for example, in connection with the examination of witnesses,⁹⁰ or in his argument to the jury.⁹¹ Persistent attempts to introduce prejudicial evidence which is entirely inadmissible, after the court has repeatedly denied the right to do so, is, also, misconduct, and may be ground for a new trial.⁹² Social intercourse between counsel and jurors during trial, if not merely conventional or a matter of common civility, may be misconduct sufficient to require a new trial.⁹³ Thus it is misconduct for counsel to treat the jurors in the case,⁹⁴ or to otherwise

[b] Cigars as if From Bailiff.—That the prevailing party gave cigars to the bailiff to be given to the jurors, not as from the party but as from the bailiff, is not grounds for new trial. Wichita & W. R. Co. v. Feehheimer, 49 Kan. 643, 31 Pac. 127. But see 17 STANDARD PROC. 504, notes 57-59.

[a] Waiver.—In the case of Patton v. Hughesdale Mfg. Co., 11 R. I. 188, the court said: "The entertainment of the jury by the plaintiff and his sons ought not to have been permitted by the officer in charge of them; it was highly improper since its natural tendency was to predispose and bias the jury in favor of the plaintiff. It does not appear, however, that the plaintiff or improperly attempt to influence their verdict.⁹⁵ However, although the conduct of counsel may violate professional ethics, yet it may not be sufficient ground for a new trial.⁹⁶ While a new trial will not generally be granted for improper remarks of counsel which have been provoked by the counter misconduct of opposing counsel,⁹⁷ yet the fact that counsel of both parties participate in harmful misconduct, may be only an added reason for a new trial.⁹⁸

4. Of Witnesses.—Where it is apparent that the misconduct of a witness affects the verdict, a new trial may be granted.⁹⁹ The misconduct of a witness may consist in perjury,¹ although it is sometimes held that a conviction of perjury must first be obtained before a new trial will be granted by reason of it,² and that a new trial is not justified merely because the judge from his observations of the demeanor of witnesses thinks them unworthy of belief.³ Yet a trial his sons had any such intention, or that they took advantage of the opportunity to influence any of the jury against the defendant or in favor of the plaintiff. . . . The defendant having proceeded without objection to what had occurred, and thereby subjected the plaintiff to the expense of a trial occupying several days which might have been avoided if the objection had been seasonably made, ought not to be permitted, after the jury have rendered a verdict adverse to it, to urge that objection as a reason for setting aside that verdict."

court may, according to some authorities, grant a new trial for insufficiency of the evidence where it disbelieves some of the witnesses.⁴

The perjury of witnesses is a matter that is also included in the ground of surprise,⁵ and, moreover, in case of perjury subsequently established or admitted, a new trial might be appropriately granted on the ground of newly discovered evidence.⁶

Plaintiff's hysteria on the witness stand is not ground for a new trial,⁷ though his malingering may be.⁸ Improper communications by a witness with the jury may be ground for new trial.⁹

5. Of Jury.—The principles that should control the conduct of the jury and the effect of their misconduct on their verdict have been set forth elsewhere in this work.¹⁰ But a juror may be guilty of harmful misconduct before the trial begins.¹¹ Thus, he may, on his preliminary examination, conceal his bias and prejudice, and by misrepresentation be accepted as a juror, thereby warranting a new 98, 84 Atl. 329, 41 L. R. A. (N. S.) 855. It appeared in this case that the reason why the trial judge set aside the verdict was that from "his observation of the demeanor of the witness (the plaintiff) on the stand," he "judged that he was neither frank nor honest in his statements," and that the jury should not have believed him." The supreme court of errors in reversing the judgment, held that the trial court erred in setting aside the verdict upon this ground, unless the evidence shows that the jury could not fairly and reasonably have credited the plaintiff's testimony. See further, Lewis v. Healy, 73 Conn. 136, 46 Atl. 869.

But see infra, II, G, 5, a, (IV), as to the right of the court to pass on the credibility of the witnesses, on motion for new trial.

[a] New Trial Upheld.—In the case of Mullen v. Butte, 37 Mont. 183, 95 Pac. 597, a new trial was granted, and the order upheld on appeal, where the trial judge set aside the verdict because he considered the testimony of the one witness, upon whose sole testimony the plaintiff's case rested, unworthy of belief. The reviewing court held that it did not appear that the discretion of the lower court had been abused.

5. See infra, II, E, 2, k, (VI), (B). [a] Effect of Statute.—Although the perjury of a witness is usually classed under the doctrine of "surprise," yet under a statute expressly allowing a new trial for the perjury of a witness, it is not essential that an aggrieved party should be "surprised" by the perjury. trial.¹² Such misrepresentations must be of a certain and definite character, however, and not mere conclusions of the aggrieved party.¹³

6. Of the Court and Its Officers.—There may also be misconduct on the part of the court that will justify a new trial,¹⁴ although in most cases such judicial faults may perhaps be more properly referred to as irregularities.¹⁵ Abusive, offensive, or improper remarks made by the court in the presence of the jury, such language having a tendency to influence the verdict, is ground for a new trial.¹⁶ It is also misconduct for the court to prejudice a case by asking objectionable questions of witnesses.¹⁷ Moreover, pending the trial, the personal conduct of the judge with the successful party, his agents, or representatives, may be such as to raise the questions of his impartiality and a fair trial.¹⁸ Likewise, misconduct on the part of officers of the court whereby an aggrieved party was not given a fair trial is ground for new trial.¹⁹

7. Of Third Persons.—Improper conduct tending to influence a jury on the part of relatives, friends, or agent of a party, may be sufficient ground for a new trial.²⁰ Improper remarks by bystanders

[a] Illustrations.—(1) In Palmer v. Utah & N. R. Co., 2 Idaho 315, 13 Pac. 425, the father of one of the plaintiffs and the grandfather of another, during the time the cause was being tried, visited and patronized a saloon owned by one of the jurors, and, though in his affidavit he said that he had been patronizing the same saloon for six years, a verdict for the plaintiffs was set aside. (2) In Bradbury v. Cony, 62 Me. 223, 16 Am. Rep. 449, it was charged that the son of the defendant had taken some of the jurors and showed them the property in con-in the presence of the jury,²¹ or the fact that bystanders applauded remarks of the prosecuting attorney,²² especially where the judge immediately rebuked such misconduct,²³ may not be sufficiently prejudicial to require a new trial. Yet prejudicial statements in a juror's presence, or attacks, out of court, in presence of a juror, upon the credibility of witnesses, may justify a new trial.²⁴

8. Must Be Objected to.—As in other matters, misconduct should, as a rule, be objected to at the time of its occurrence if it is to be made available for a new trial.²⁵ An exception arises, however, in controversy. A verdict for the defendant was set aside therefor. (3) In Knigh v. Freeport, 13 Mass. 218, a son-in-law of one of the parties talked to a juror, and told him that the case was one of great consequence to him, and the verdict was set aside. (4) In McDaniels v. McDaniels, 40 Vt. 363, 94 Am. Dec. 408, a friend of the prevailing party had talked to a juror about the case, and the verdict was set aside.

[c] Misconduct of Judge.—(1) The court may upon its own motion set those cases in which the misconduct was not known at the time,²⁶ but in such cases the party moving for the new trial must show the fact of his previous lack of knowledge.²⁷ If this is not done, the complaining party will be deemed to have waived his rights.²⁸

9. Must Prevent Fair Trial.—In order to warrant a new trial, the misconduct complained of must prejudice the aggrieved party's substantial rights, that is, must have prevented him from having a fair trial,²⁹ and, as in other cases, new trials will not be granted unless injury has been done,³⁰ and this provision is sometimes found ex-

aside a verdict and award a new trial if it is of the opinion that its remarks were prejudicial, although they were not excepted to at the time they were made. Richter v. United Rys. Co. of St. Louis, 145 Mo. App. 1, 129 S. W. 1055. See also Neill v. Rogers Bros. Produce Co., 38 W. Va. 228, 18 S. E. 563. However, (2) in Taylor v. Baltimore, etc. R. Co., 3 Del. Co. (Pa.) 545, it is held that the remarks of the judge must be duly excepted to if they are to be made the basis of a motion for a new trial. (3) Moreover, in Richter v. United Rys. Co., supra, the court said: "The point is made by plaintiff . . . that defendant did not at the time take any exception to these remarks of the court, and, therefore, that question is eliminated. This would be true if the court had overruled the motion for new trial and defendant were here trying to reverse that action of the court by reason of these remarks, but that is not the condition of this case. In this case, the court sustained the motion for new trial, and, in doing this, if his action was erroneous and prejudicial to either party in the case, the court had the right to set the verdict aside as of its own motion, and having set it aside, the party who seeks to justify the court's action in sustaining the motion is not required to show that an error, which the court himself recognized and acted upon, was excepted to by the party at the time the error was committed."

pressed in the statutes.³¹ Misconduct, however, by way of improper communication with the jury, on the part of the prevailing party will, usually, of itself raise a presumption of injury.³² Motions for new trials founded upon the misconduct of counsel, during the trial, in the presence of the jury are addressed largely to the judicial discretion of the trial court.³³ and it is for the trial judge who saw or heard the misconduct to determine whether justice has suffered from the wrong.³⁴ Where it appears that counsel's misconduct did not prejudice the jury,³⁵ or where such conduct was stopped or reprovod by the court,³⁶ or where retraction was made,³⁷ the misconduct will, as a rule, be held harmless, and insufficient to warrant a new trial.

Where misconduct on the part of the jury is alleged it must appear that such alleged misconduct resulted in probable injury before a new trial will be granted,³⁸ because misconduct or mere irregularities in the conduct of the jury not shown to have prejudiced the substantial

[a] Reproof Insufficient When.—"In the portions of the argument and remarks of counsel, to the jury which have just been quoted, it is seen that statements and allusions to various facts, to prove which there was no evidence adduced, were made, which it seems to us, were calculated to do much harm. The admonition of the court to counsel to keep within the record was not sufficient to repair the damage which probably resulted. When the mind of the jury is being swayed by the use of perverted and conjectured facts and the influence of zealous and impassioned advocacy, the conditions may require the application of a far more radical and drastic remedy than that administered by the court. If the warning of the court is disregarded it may, in its discretion, then suspend the argument and discharge the jury, or omitting to do that, it may later on set aside the verdict on its own motion." rights of the defendant will not vitiate the verdict.³⁹ The same rule applies to misconduct on the part of an officer of the court. It must appear that such misconduct prejudiced the right to a fair trial, otherwise a new trial will not be granted.⁴⁰

D ERRORS OF LAW.—1. In General.—Another broad ground for granting new trials is prejudicial errors of the court in matters of law,⁴¹ or, as less broadly expressed in many of the statutes, “errors of law occurring at the trial.”⁴² Under such statutory provisions, errors of law occurring “at the trial” do not embrace errors made prior or subsequent thereto,⁴³ but are largely confined to erroneous rulings upon the admission or exclusion of evidence, and to prejudicial errors in the giving, or refusing to give, instructions.⁴⁴ On the other hand, it has been said that the phrase, “errors of law occurring at the trial,” is a sweeping clause, intending to embrace all errors not included in any other specified cause.⁴⁵ In a few states, however, this ground for a new trial is not recognized at all.⁴⁶

Pleadings.—An order denying a motion for judgment upon the pleadings is an order made before the trial and cannot be assigned as an error “occurring during the trial.” Bank v. Harding, 65 Kan. 655, 70 Pac. 655; Powder River Cattle Co. v. Custer Co., 9 Mont. 145, 22 Pac. 383.

[b] An error in the conclusions of law (1) stated upon a special finding of facts is not an error of law occurring at the trial. Nelson v. Cottingham, 152 Ind. 135, 52 N. E. 702; Clayton v. Blough, 93 Ind. 85; McKenzie v. Bismarck Water Co., 6 N. D. 361, 71 N. W. 608. (2) The reason assigned is that a new trial is a re-examination of the facts, and an error in conclusions of law upon special findings of fact may be corrected without a further examination of the facts. Rooker v. Ludowici v. Celadon Co., 53 Ind. App. 275, 100 N. E. 469.

[c] “Errors in law,” within the meaning of the statute (subd. 7, §5472, Rev. Codes) are such errors in rulings and in instructions and the like as may occur during the progress of the trial, and before the rendition of the verdict or decision.” McKenzie v. Bismarck Water Co., 6 N. D. 361, 71 N. W. 608.

2. Meaning of "Error." — As previously pointed out in connection with irregularities,⁴⁷ errors in law are properly confined to errors in connection with rulings upon questions of law duly raised by objection, and preserved by exception, and by some courts this technicality is observed. In a broad sense, however, irregularities and misconduct on the part of the court are often called "errors," and there is, consequently, some overlapping of these terms in the cases. For this reason, the broader meaning is employed, at times, in the following statements.⁴⁸

3. Abuse of Discretion. — The abuse of judicial discretion in connection with the mode and conduct of the trial in general, is often designated as error. Reference to this ground for a new trial has already been made.⁴⁹

4. Denying Right to Counsel. — Denying a party the right to be heard through counsel is "error," and ground for a new trial.⁵⁰

5. Refusing Right to Jury Trial. — It has also been held "error of law," warranting a new trial, to refuse to call a jury when properly demanded.⁵¹

6. Continuances. — Improperly refusing a continuance is said to be error for which a new trial may be granted.⁵² This matter has, however, already been considered.⁵³

7. Order of Proof. — The order of proof is largely a matter of discretion on the part of the court, and a new trial will not, as a rule, be granted because evidence was admitted out of its usual order.⁵⁴

8. Restricting Examination of Witnesses. — Improperly restricting the examination or cross-examination of witnesses may justify a new trial.⁵⁵

9. Failure To Check Misconduct. — It is the duty of the trial court to rebuke misconduct on the part of counsel or of parties and to do all in its power to remedy it. To permit such misconduct,⁵⁶ against objection, is error, unless it appears that the prejudicial tendency of such conduct has been averted.⁵⁷

10. Withdrawing Testimony.—Withdrawing testimony once legally before the jury may be error, and a new trial granted for the same.⁵⁸

11. Denial of Right To Argue.—Denying a party the right to argue the evidence before the jury has been held a cause for a new trial,⁵⁹ as, also, improperly denying the right to open and close the argument.⁶⁰

12. Failure To Admonish Jury.—A failure to admonish the jury before it separates may also amount to error for which a new trial should be granted.⁶¹

13. Admission of Illegal Evidence.—The admission of irrelevant, immaterial, incompetent, or otherwise inadmissible evidence, when duly objected to, is error for which a new trial will be granted where such evidence has a tendency to affect the verdict.⁶² But the admission of incompetent evidence will afford no ground for a new trial unless it appears that it probably influenced the verdict.⁶³ In case of immaterial evidence its admission is, by weight of authority, no ground at all for a new trial, since it cannot be presumed to have affected the result.⁶⁴ The admission of irrelevant evidence should, on principle, be also regarded as harmless, yet it has been held that the admission of such evidence justifies a new trial since it is impossible to know to what extent the jury may have been influenced by it.⁶⁵ In criminal cases, the improper reception of immaterial statements as confessions,⁶⁶ or of opinion testimony,⁶⁷ may be prejudicial error. slight importance, if the party might have suffered prejudice by such admission.⁶⁸ Where, however, by a change in the law, inadmissible testimony has been subsequently made admissible by statute, no new trial will be granted for the improper admission.⁶⁹ The fact that testimony was given in answer to leading questions is not sufficient in itself, to warrant a new trial,⁷⁰ but unfair hypothetical questions, which assume controverted facts, may be a just ground.⁷¹

There may be error sufficient to require a new trial in the improper admission of secondary evidence without first having sufficiently established a reason for the nonproduction of the original,⁷² as also in the admission of documentary evidence in absence of proof of its authenticity or authority,⁷³ or under a mistake as to its identity.⁷⁴

14. Improper Rejection of Evidence.—Where, to the prejudice of the aggrieved party, material and admissible evidence has been erroneously rejected, a new trial will be granted.⁷⁵ But the exclusion of the cause, neither party or counsel being present, is also error.⁷⁹

b. Form and Character.—Where the statute requires the instructions to be in writing, error may be committed by charging orally.⁸⁰ Instructions may also be erroneous and warrant a new trial in that they are meaningless in a material matter,⁸¹ or because they are contradictory to other instructions in the same charge;⁸² or where they are erroneous as to the degree of proof necessary;⁸³ or where the burden of proof is charged upon the wrong party;⁸⁴ or where they are absurd and impossible, or evasive;⁸⁵ or where the instructions show the judge's prejudice and bias.⁸⁶ Moreover, instructions based upon an inaccurate assumption of facts, and expressed inaccurately and ambiguously with reference to the law applicable to the case, require a new trial.⁸⁷

17. Submitting Case to Jury.—Error may also arise, and a new trial rightly given, when the judge improperly submits a case to the jury when there is no support in evidence to support it.⁹⁴ The court may also err in ordering,⁹⁵ or in refusing to order, a nonsuit,⁹⁶ or in improperly directing a verdict.⁹⁷ In some jurisdictions, however, the grant of a nonsuit may not be reviewable by motion for a new trial.⁹⁸ An erroneous ruling sustaining a demurrer to the evidence may be made the basis of a new trial.⁹⁹

18. Objections and Exceptions.—As a general rule of practice, errors of law occurring at the trial must be met at the time with proper objection and exception, otherwise they will be waived. They cannot be raised for the first time on a motion for a new trial.¹ This for such misdirections where the jury were not misled, and the error did not affect the merits of the case.¹⁶ Moreover, instructions even if erroneous as to vital and material questions of law, are not ground for a new trial where the verdict complained of was demanded by the evidence.¹⁷ Likewise, in submitting the case to the jury, no new trial will be given for errors that proved to be harmless upon the result.¹⁸

b. Definitions.— Surprise does not mean that the result of the trial was entirely unexpected,²³ but denotes some condition or situation in which a party is unexpectedly placed to his injury without any default or negligence of his own.²⁴ Surprise is not synonymous with “accident,” yet it has substantially the same meaning. Each term is used to denote some condition or situation in which a party, without fault on his part, is placed unexpectedly, to his injury,²⁵ but, in some inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, refers to cases where parties have been prevented from having a proper hearing, and are in default. Ogle v. Potter, 24 Mont. 501, 62 Pac. 920.

[g] Unavoidable casualty or misfortune preventing the party from appearing or defending. Ky. Civ. Code Prac., §518, subsec. 7. See Ray v. Arnett, 32 Ky. L. Rep. 562, 106 S. W. 828.

[a] “Surprise, in its legal acceptance,” it is said, denotes (1) an unforeseen disappointment in some reasonable expectation against which ordinary prudence would not have afforded protection.” Peers v. Davis’ Admr., 29 Mo. 184. (2) “Surprise calling for favorable action on a motion for a new trial is that situation in which a party is unexpectedly placed, without any default on his part, and which will work injury to his interests. Gidionsen v. Union Depot Ry. Co., 129 Mo. 392, 31 S. W. 800, 802; Zimmerer v. Fremont Nat. Bank, 59 Neb. 661, 81 N. W. 849, 850; Working v. Garn, 148 Ind. 546, 47 N. E. 951, 953.” Henderson v. Hazlett, 75 W. Va. 255, 83 S. E. 907. (3) “Surprise” is the act of taking unawares, sudden confusion or perplexity. Davis v. Steuben School Tp., 19 Ind. App. 694, 50 N. E. 1.

[b] Means a “Reasonable” Surprise.—Skinner v. Terry, 107 N. C. 103, 12 S. E. 118, 119.

25. Zimmerer v. Fremont Nat. Bank, 59 Neb. 661, 81 N. W. 849; Ludwig v. Walker, 59 Misc. 62, 111 N. Y. Supp. 1102.

[a] “Surprise” is used interchangeably with “accident” to designate the emergencies giving rise to accidents; both words signifying a detrimental situation wherein a party is placed unexpectedly, and against which ordinary prudence would not have guarded. State ex rel. Hartley v. Innes, 137 Mo. App. 420, 118 S. W. 1168.

[b] Accident Defined.—Rowell, J., in Kopper v. Dyer, 59 Vt. 477, 9 Atl. 4, 59 Am. Rep. 742, quotes from 2 Pom. Eq., §823, note 1: “‘Accident’ is an unforeseen and unexpected event, occurring external to the party affected by it, and of which his own agency is not the proximate cause, whereby, contrary to his own intention and wish he loses some legal right or becomes subjected to some legal liability, and another person acquires a corresponding right which it would be a violation of good conscience for the latter person, under the circumstances, to retain.”

[c] The supreme court of Vermont, in Massucco v. Tomassi, 78 Vt. 188, 62 Atl. 57, says: “Webster defines accident as an event that takes place without one’s foresight or expectation; an event which proceeds from an unknown cause, and therefore not expected; chance, casualty, contingency. The word has often received judicial construction. In Bostwick v. Stiles, 35 Conn. 198, it is said that it includes not only inevitable casualties, such as are caused by the act of God, but also those that arise from unforeseen occurrences, misfortunes, losses, and acts or omissions of other persons without the fault, neglect or misconduct of the party. Alexander v. Bailey, 2 Lea 639; State v. Lewis, 107 N. C. 978, 12 S. E. 457, 13 S. E. 247, 11 L. R. A. 105. . . . In the same line of reasoning are Webster v. Smith, 72 Vt. 12, 47 Atl. 101; and Bradley Fertilizer Co. v. Fuller, 58 Vt. 315, 2 Atl. 162.”

jurisdictions, it has been said that there is no ground for granting a new trial for mistake or inadvertence as distinguished from accident or surprise.²⁶ What constitutes surprise, or its equivalents, "accident, mistake, or unforeseen cause," is a matter of law, to be determined upon the facts constituting the so called "accident," "mistake," or unforeseen cause.²⁷

c. Criminal Cases.—The doctrine of surprise in connection with new trials applies to criminal as well as to civil cases.²⁸ Moreover, a statute allowing a new trial "in any case" where through accident, mistake, or misfortune justice has not been done, applies not alone to civil causes but also to criminal cases.²⁹

d. Mistakes of Law.—It is a general rule that as a ground for a new trial a party cannot predicate surprise upon matters of law.³⁰ However, where injustice would otherwise be done, or a party prevented from having a fair trial upon the merits, the courts have, in particular cases, relaxed this rule.³¹

[d] Mistake, inadvertence, surprise, and excusable neglect defined. See Davis v. Steuben School Tp., 19 Ind. App. 694, 50 N. E. 1, 5.

[e] The Casualty or Misfortune That Will Authorize the Granting of a New Trial Must Be "Unavoidable." A mere ordinary "casualty or misfortune" is not sufficient. It must be such a casualty or misfortune as could not by the exercise of reasonable skill or diligence have been avoided. Ray v. Arnett, 32 Ky. L. Rep. 562, 106 S. W. 828; *Louisville & N. R. e. Fault of Applicant or Counsel.—The accident or surprise complained of must not be due to the neglect of the applicant,³² and, as a rule, the ignorance, mistake, forgetfulness, inadvertence, or misapprehension of a party, not occasioned by the adverse party, is not, in itself, proper ground for a new trial.³³ This rule includes a party's attorney,³⁴ since the negligence, inattention, or fault of counsel is imputed to the party he represents.³⁵ Thus, errors, mistakes, and oversights in pleadings are not, usually, grounds for new trials,³⁶ and mistakes of counsel in advising a proper line of defense fall under the same rule.³⁷ Likewise neglect and forgetfulness in preparing and presenting evidence,³⁸ or in the examination of witnesses,³⁹ are further illustrations of mistake for which no new trial can be granted.⁴⁰ There may be occasions, however, where the error, mistake or neglect on the part of client or attorney may be excusable, and in such cases relief can properly be given for such fault.⁴¹

[a] Law in Doubt.—In Wellborn v. Younger, 10 N. C. 205, Chief Justice Taylor said: "My opinion consequently is that there ought to be a new trial, . . . on the ground of surprise, which, although it might be in matter of law, is not therefore an insufficient reason; for in enumerating the reasons for a new trial, Mr. Justice Blackstone states as one, 'that either party may be puzzled by a legal doubt which a little recollection would have solved.' [a] Where a party employs counsel of good reputation and large experience, the neglect of such counsel in the ordinary steps of a case prejudicial to the rights of the party is "surprise" that justifies a new trial. Citizens' Nat. Bank of Sisseton v. Branden, 19

f. Diligence in Avoiding Surprise.—Diligence and prudence to avoid the matter complained of must have been exercised,⁴² and to entitle a party to protection against surprise he must have been diligent at every stage of the proceeding,⁴³ unless, in rare cases, to prevent great injustice.⁴⁴

g. Averting Consequences.—In order to obtain a new trial it must appear, in addition to the fact that the accident or surprise complained of was not due to the neglect or fault of the applicant, that the movant used all reasonable means to avert the consequences of the surprise.⁴⁵ It is the duty of a party to prepare for trial, but if one by unexpected happening has a legal excuse for not being ready to proceed, he should apply for a postponement or continuance.⁴⁶ Like-

[a] Surprise at Evidence.—"After he had heard the evidence of the witnesses, it was clearly the duty of plaintiff to have made known to the court the fact of his surprise, and applied to the court for a continuance or have taken a nonsuit. Thereby he would have shown the diligence required, and furnished a basis for favorable action by the court below, and for correction of error therein in this court." Henderson v. Hazlett, 75 W. Va. 255, 83 S. E. 907.

[b] Must Apply for Relief.—"It is well settled that, if a party claiming to be surprised by the introduction of testimony, fails to apply at the time for a continuance of the cause, or to resort to other testimony, or to ask for any relief to which he might be entitled under the circumstances, his failure is attributable to his own fault, and constitutes no ground of surprise upon which a new trial will be granted." Heath v. Scott, 65 Cal. 548, 4 Pac. 557, 560.

enable a party to avert the consequences of accident or surprise, will cause a waiver of rights,⁴⁹ while a wrongful refusal on the part of the court to grant a postponement or continuance is proper ground for new trial.⁵⁰ Moreover, if the time originally granted be not sufficient, further postponement or continuance should be requested.⁵¹ A plaintiff surprised at the character of the evidence may also, if he desires, avert an adverse verdict by taking a nonsuit, without prejudice to a subsequent action;⁵² and a client knowing of the illness of counsel and his inability to appear, should take reasonable measures to procure other counsel.⁵³

h. Must Affect Result.—The surprise complained of must be connected with a matter material to the issue,⁵⁴ and the effect must be to deprive one of a fair trial.⁵⁵ Unless the result was affected, the fact that some misfortune or surprise arose will not warrant a new trial,⁵⁶ since it must appear that a new trial would probably secure a different result.⁵⁷ Consequently, one asking for a new trial on the

i. Discretion of Court.—New trials on the grounds of surprise rest largely in the sound discretion of the court.⁵⁹ There can, necessarily, be no fixed rule laid down as to what will constitute an abuse of discretion of the trial court in refusing a new trial for accident and surprise,⁶⁰ but it is said that a new trial should be granted with great caution.⁶¹

[a] "The general doctrine governing the granting of a new trial on the ground of surprise is well stated by Judge Sanderson in delivering the opinion in Schellhaus v. Ball, 29 Cal. 606. He says: 'Upon this ground, new trials should be granted with great caution; for in many cases it is used as a pretext and a cover for carelessness and inattention, rather than as a meritorious ground for relief. . . . It is the duty of the courts to look upon applications for new trials upon the ground of surprise with suspicion, for the reason that from the nature of the case surprise may be often feigned and pretended, and the opposite party may not be able to show that such is the case. Hence the party alleging surprise should be required to show it conclusively, and by the most satisfactory evidence within his reach.' " Gaines v. White, 1 S. D. 434, 47 N. W. 524, 527.

times expressly designated by statute.⁶³ Changing the time or place of the trial without sufficient notice,⁶⁴ or calling a cause prematurely in the absence of a party,⁶⁵ may, likewise, justify a new trial. If, however, the defendant appears and, without objection, makes a defense, the omission of notice will be waived.⁶⁶ Mere forgetfulness or misapprehension as to the time or place of the trial will not, however, be sufficient,⁶⁷ nor, ordinarily, will the fact that the party was mistaken in the day when the case was set for trial,⁶⁸ or that the attorney failed to notify the client,⁶⁹ or that the clerk failed to docket the cause at the time a party expected.⁷⁰ But where the docket was irregularly called and a party thereby unreasonably forced to trial,⁷¹ or there was an honest misunderstanding between the attorneys as to the day set for trial, a new trial may be granted.⁷²

b. Cause of Action.—A new trial will not be granted because one alleges surprise at the nature of the cause of the action,⁷³ or to permit a plaintiff to bring his action upon a different ground or theory.⁷⁴

c. Matters of Defense.—That counsel mistakenly advised a particular defense,⁷⁵ or that a proper and available defense was over-be called, and was, therefore, not ready when his case was called before the understood time, a new trial should be granted to him. Clark v. Jarrett, 2 Baxt. (Tenn.) 467.

One may have a good defense, however, of which by fraud or accident, unmixed with any negligence on his part, he was prevented from availing himself;⁷⁸ but a new trial will not be granted to admit a defense which could have been presented at the trial.⁷⁹

d. Matters of Pleading.—It is the duty of litigants to prepare for trial, and to file pleadings, and, as a general rule, mistakes or neglect on the part of counsel in matters of pleading do not constitute accident, surprise, or misfortune for which new trials should be granted.⁸⁰ Where, however, there is genuine misapprehension as to the issues presented in the pleadings, a new trial may be granted.⁸¹ The filing of an amended petition is not, in itself, "surprise" warranting even a continuance,⁸² but where an amendment to a complaint surprises the defendant by setting up a new cause of action, the case should be withdrawn from the jury or, if not, a new trial should be granted.⁸³ And a new trial may be proper where plaintiff was taken by surprise at the filing of an amended answer shortly before the trial.⁸⁴

e. Absence of Party.—The absence of a party from the trial does not, in itself, constitute a ground for new trial,⁸⁵ but unavoidable absence arising from accident, misfortune, or other good excuse may be sufficient ground.⁸⁶ Where, for example, a party is unable to appear

[a] Must Affect Result.—In accord with the general rule, the absence of the party, in order to warrant a new trial, must have been prejudicial to a fair trial. His presence must have been a material matter, either for the purpose of testifying, or consulting, or advising with counsel, or directing the case. by reason of his own illness,⁸⁷ or the illness of a member of his family,⁸⁸ or because he was unexpectedly detained as a witness,⁸⁹ or as a juror,⁹⁰ in another court, a new trial is properly granted.

Likewise, a new trial was granted where a party failed to be present in court by delay of trains.⁹¹ It is, also, a sufficient cause for a new trial where, in the absence of a party, or of his counsel, the trial is held at an earlier time than previously announced by the court.⁹² Where, however, a party fails to attend by reason of his own, or counsel's, error, or mistake, or negligence,⁹³ a new trial will not be granted, negligence on the part of his attorney being attributed, in such cases, to the party.⁹⁴ For example, where the defeated party was not present at the trial by reason of his intoxication,⁹⁵ or because he was detained by bad roads, no evidence being offered to show any unexpected condition of the roads,⁹⁶ or by reason of a misunderstanding with his counsel,⁹⁷ no new trial will be allowed.

[a] Justice may require a new trial where a party's rights were prejudiced by the illness of counsel during the trial. Allen v. Los Molinos Land Co., 25 Cal. App. 206, 143 Pac. 253.

[b] Sickness in Counsel's Family. In the case of Cutler v. Rice, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 494, a motion for a new trial was made on the ground of surprise and perturbation on the part of the applicant's counsel, arising from sudden and dangerous sickness in his family, and coming to his knowledge during the trial. Chief Justice Shaw, in delivering the opinion of the court, said the application was a novel one, but the court knew no limit to its power to interpose where the plain and manifest dictates of justice required. The court decided to grant a new trial, or to suspend judgment in order that the parties might effect a compromise.

trial will be granted, however, where counsel's absence is due to his own or his client's negligence,⁴ or to matters within their control.⁵ Thus, the excuse that counsel had other professional engagements is usually insufficient,⁶ or that he had not received his fees,⁷ or that he missed his railroad train.⁸ Moreover, where counsel was absent, but the party voluntarily proceeded without counsel, a new trial was refused.⁹

g. Withdrawal of Counsel.—Likewise, the withdrawal of counsel, or his refusal to proceed, will not, of itself, warrant a new trial,¹⁰ and, a fortiori, no new trial will be granted because counsel withdraws, when the withdrawal was caused by his client's refusal to attend the trial.¹¹ Where, however, the withdrawal of counsel leaves no opportunity to engage other counsel, or the time is too short for new counsel to acquaint himself with the case, sufficient surprise may be occasioned thereby as to warrant a new trial.¹²

h. Incompetency of Counsel.—As a general proposition, the doctrine of surprise does not include ignorance or mistakes of counsel, or the mismanagement of a case through his incompetence or neglect.¹³

The same principle applies to the lack of ability or experience on the part of counsel.¹⁴ Moreover, mere errors of judgment or misapprehension on the part of counsel do not constitute "mistake or misfortune" in connection with grounds for a new trial,¹⁵ and the neglect of counsel to take the necessary steps in a cause does not entitle a party to relief on the ground of "accident, mistake, or unforeseen cause."¹⁶ Yet, in an early English case, where defendant's attorney neglected to deliver his briefs to the barrister, the court granted a new trial,¹⁷ and other cases hold that where the rights of parties have been injuriously affected by the gross neglect or incompetency of counsel, a new trial may, in a clear case, be awarded,¹⁸ especially in criminal cases.¹⁹

as to warrant a new trial, and statutes sometimes so provide.²¹ New trials may be granted, for example, where the prevailing party by procurement or connivance keeps witnesses from being subpoenaed,²² or causes witnesses to be absent,²³ or with intent to injure the unsuccessful party's cause suppresses evidence,²⁴ or gains an unfair advantage by intentionally misleading the unsuccessful party as to a course of action.²⁵

(II.) Violation of Stipulations.—New trials may be granted on the ground of surprise where stipulations,²⁶ or other agreements,²⁷ entered into by the parties have been violated by the prevailing party.

j. Caused by Third Persons.—Surprise, accidents, misfortunes, or mistakes may be caused by third persons, without fault or neglect on the part of litigants, and if injustice is done thereby, a proper ground for new trial exists.²⁸ Thus, new trials have been granted because documents intended for evidence were, by third persons, mislaid or confused too late for correction,²⁹ because material and important pleadings were not filed through the mistake of the clerk of the court,³⁰ and because the files of a case had been lost.³¹

k. Witnesses and Evidence.—(I.) General Rule as to Precaution and Avoidance of Injury.—Surprise, accident, casualty, or misfortune, in connection with witnesses and evidence, must, as in connection with other matters, be prudently guarded against, and, if occurring, must also be avoided, if possible, in every reasonable way, in order to justify a new trial.³²

[a] Diligence in Discovering Facts as to Residence.—Under a statute authorizing depositions in cases where witnesses resided more than forty miles from the place of trial, appellants claimed to have been taken by surprise by the exclusion of depositions presented by them, having procured them in the supposition that the witnesses did in fact reside beyond the forty mile limit. The court said: "Surprise, in its legal acceptation, it is said, denotes an unforeseen disappointment in some reasonable expectation against which ordinary prudence would not have afforded protection." The fact that witnesses, whose depositions are taken, reside within forty miles of the place, is a fact of which the party taking such depositions can inform himself by ordinary diligence; if it be not known, the want of knowledge is to be attributed to his own laches, and surprise thus produced cannot be ground for a new trial. *Peers v. witnesses cannot be present, proper arrangements for depositions, where allowable, should be made.³⁶ Moreover, if at the trial, a needed witness is not present, or the evidence is not ready, one should ask for a postponement or a continuance,³⁷ because the absence of a subpoenaed witness is not in itself sufficient for a new trial where no delay or continuance is asked,³⁸ since by voluntarily taking the hazard of trial in the absence of witnesses or evidence, the question of a new trial, with respect to that particular matter, is waived.³⁹ Moreover,

[a] Unable To Procure Witness. That a party could not procure a particular witness in time for the trial is not ground for a new trial. Atkins v. Field, 89 Me. 281, 36 Atl. 375, 56 Am. St. Rep. 424.

[b] Absence of Expert Witness. Where, in an action against a railway company to recover damages, a physician, who was desired as an expert witness for the defendant and who was expected to testify as to an examination of the plaintiff and the extent of his injuries, agreed with the counsel for the defendant that he would be present at the trial upon notice, but, though notified, was called upon to treat an emergency case, and did not arrive until after the evidence where no effort has been made to ascertain and meet testimony when circumstances would presume the offering of it, surprise cannot be predicated upon it,⁴⁰ unless, possibly, by reason of his illness, one was unable to prepare.⁴¹ Moreover, if counsel is surprised by evidence introduced, he should inform the court, and effort should be made during the trial, if possible, to meet it.⁴²

If the surprise consists in the unexpected testimony of one's own witness, it should, if possible, be avoided by the calling of other witnesses,⁴³ and if time is needed, either by reason of surprise at the testimony of his own witness, or because surprised by unexpected opposing evidence, a party should ask for a postponement or continuance.⁴⁴ had closed and the argument had begun, and where it does not appear that counsel for the defendant moved the court to grant a continuance or postponement before closing the evidence and proceeding to the argument, the absence of such witness furnished no ground for the grant of a new trial. *Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. Consequently, a party who needed further time for preparation, but who omitted to move for a continuance, cannot later urge that he was pressed to trial by accident or misfortune.⁴⁵ Moreover, if plaintiff does not wish to venture the chance of an adverse verdict or finding, he may have his action dismissed, renewing it later.⁴⁶

(II.) Absence of Witness.—Where there has been no neglect in prior diligence or in subsequent efforts to avoid the consequences, the unavoidable absence of a material witness may be sufficient surprise to entitle a defeated party to a new trial.⁴⁷ This, for example, may happen through the illness,⁴⁸ death,⁴⁹ or misconduct of a witness,⁵⁰ or where, for other causes, witnesses are not present,⁵¹ or where the court refuses to allow reasonable time to secure their presence.⁵² But in any case, unless the result would be affected, the absence of a witness will not warrant a new trial.⁵³

Conduct of witness as surprise, see infra, II, E, 2, k, (V).

51. See infra, this note.

[a] If a material witness starts in due time to attend a trial, and is delayed purely by an accident, and is prevented thereby from reaching the place of trial until the trial has been concluded, and the party for whom the witness expected to testify is unsuccessful, and was not in fault in going to trial without the witness, we think that ordinarily such party is entitled to a new trial. *Smith v. [a] Illness of Unnecessary Witness. The absence by reason of illness of an unnecessary witness is not cause for

be expected.⁵⁴ Moreover, that a party was mistaken as to the competency of a witness offered by him but excluded,⁵⁵ or that he was wholly ignorant of his incompetency, is no ground for a new trial.⁵⁶ But ignorance of the incompetency of a witness for the adverse party, known to the latter, may be ground for new trial.⁵⁷

(IV.) Impeachment of Witness.—That a witness' character is unexpectedly attacked is not, as a rule, sufficient surprise to warrant a new trial,⁵⁸ although special circumstances may give rise to exceptions to the rule.⁵⁹

(V.) Conduct of Witness.—It is seldom that the conduct, or manner, of a witness will amount to such "legal surprise" that a new trial will be awarded. For example, that a witness was forgetful,⁶⁰ or that he inadvertently omitted important matters in his testimony,⁶¹ or that he was unwilling or reluctant to testify,⁶² or that, in a criminal case, a witness for the state refused to testify,⁶³ or that the witness was nervous, confused, or agitated,⁶⁴ or was intoxicated,⁶⁵ or was suddenly taken ill,⁶⁶ do not necessarily justify new trials.

(VI.) Testimony of Witnesses. — (A.) MISTAKE. — That a witness was mistaken in his testimony does not usually constitute a cause for a new trial.⁶⁷ It is only under extraordinary circumstances that a new trial will be granted on such ground,⁶⁸ as where the testimony was very material and probably largely influenced the verdict.⁶⁹

(B.) PERJURY. — Even the perjury of a witness is not, in itself, sufficient surprise to require a new trial, because it may not have affected by the deputy sheriff, a sufficient ground for a new trial exists. Moore's Admr. v. Cross, 86 Vt. 148, 84 Atl. 22. See Austin v. Langlois, 81 Vt. 223, 69 Atl. 739.

[b] But where a party makes no objection to the examination on account of intoxication, but cross-examines the witness and permits the evidence to go to the jury, speculating on the chances that the jury will give little or no weight to the testimony of the drunken witness, he cannot afterward move for a new trial. *Dickinson v. the result.⁷⁰ Where, however, a party has been surprised by perjury of such a nature that it had a material influence upon the verdict, a new trial should be awarded,⁷¹ and a statute may authorize a new trial upon the ground of perjury regardless of the question of surprise.⁷² In criminal cases, where after conviction it has been ascertained that the conviction was secured by means of perjured testimony, a new trial will be ordered.⁷³ According to the common law rule, the fact of the perjury must first have been established by the

[a] Where the trial judge believes that some of the witnesses have committed perjury, and that the false testimony in all probability lessened the chances of recovery by the defeated party, and likewise misled him, it is not only his right, but his duty, to grant a new trial. Schlag v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 152 Wis. 165, 139 N. W. 756.

[b] False Testimony.—Where, at the trial, an issue is raised by false testimony (whether wilfully or mistakenly), and the opposite party is taken by surprise thereby, and has no opportunity to move for delay because of his necessary absence from court without fault on his part, a new trial will be granted when it appears that the verdict was influenced by such false testimony. *Ricker v. conviction of the perjured witness,⁷⁴ or by his confession,⁷⁵ before a new trial will be ordered.

A new trial will not usually be granted, however, on the mere affidavit of one party contradicting the witnesses on the other side,⁷⁶ or in a case, it is said, where the conviction was procured mainly on the testimony of the applicant for the new trial,⁷⁷ or upon the testimony of those interested in the case.⁷⁸ Moreover, the fact that a witness has been indicted for perjury is no ground for a new trial,⁷⁹ and a new trial ought not to be granted, on the ground of surprise, to enable a party against whom the verdict is rendered to impeach the credit of a witness examined at the trial, on the claim that he swore falsely.⁸⁰

(VII.) Unexpected Testimony.—(A.) PARTY'S OWN WITNESS.—It was at one time doubted whether a new trial on the ground of surprise would be given, at all, unless in case of trickery or fraud, when a party's own witness had given different testimony from that expected,⁸¹ and, as a general rule, the mere fact that a party is sur-

[b] Conviction of Perjury Sufficient. In the case of Great Falls Mfg. Co. v. Mathes, 5 N. H. 574, a new trial was granted for the reason that one of the witnesses of the party in whose favor the verdict had been rendered had been convicted of perjury in the case. The court said: "We think the conviction of one of the defendant's witnesses, of perjury, in this cause, furnishes a good reason why the verdict should not be permitted to stand." See, however, Baker v. Wadsworth, 67 L. J. Q. B. (Eng.) 301, holding that conviction of perjury does not, in itself, warrant a new trial.

prised by the testimony of one or of all his witnesses is not a ground for new trial.⁸² There are, however, recognized exceptions to this general rule.⁸³ When, for instance, fraud has been practiced, or where witnesses have been tampered with by the other party;⁸⁴ or where a party misled by his witness as to the facts within his knowledge has, thereby, been induced to go to trial without other evidence, and has been surprised by the unexpected testimony given;⁸⁵ or where a material witness whom a party was obliged to call did not testify as expected,⁸⁶ or where it was discovered, after the trial, that a witness who changed his testimony became suddenly insane before the trial,⁸⁷ new trials have been granted.

(B.) ADVERSARY'S WITNESS. — In the absence of any misleading statements as to what the testimony would be, surprise as a ground for a new trial cannot usually be predicated upon the testimony of an adverse party or any of his witnesses.⁸⁸ Likewise, a party cannot claim

[a] Misled by Witness. — "What difference is there in principle, whether the party has lost a verdict by a mistake of his witness in a material matter, or by being misled by his witness as to the facts within his knowledge, and thereby induced to go to trial in the absence of other witnesses by whom the facts could have been established? In the one case, the witness knows the facts and fails to testify to them, and in the other he induces the party to rely on his knowledge of them, and then fails him on the trial. The effect upon the interests of the party is the same." Todd v. State, 25 Ind. 212, 221.

[b] Must Affect Result.—Although the defeated party was misled by what the witness said he would testify to, yet if the unexpected evidence as given by such witness had the same legal effect as the anticipated testimony, no new trial is justified. Wolf v. Brass, 72 Tex. 133, 12 S. W. 159.

surprise because the adverse party failed to produce a certain witness,⁸⁹ or to make use of any other expected evidence.⁹⁰ Where, however, a party has been misled by the other side so that he has excusably failed to prepare counter evidence, he may justifiably plead surprise at the presentation of the unanticipated evidence.⁹¹

[a] Testimony Not Anticipated. That the opposite side produces evidence not anticipated is no such surprise as is contemplated by the statute. Working v. Garn, 148 Ind. 546, 47 N. E. 951.

[b] New Issue Introduced.—Where, however, on rebuttal, testimony is introduced which brings an entirely new issue into the case which the opposite side, under the circumstances, was not prepared to meet, such testimony being an important factor in the result, a new trial must be ordered. Rafferty v. Public Service Ry. Co., 78 N. J. L. 203, 73 Atl. 41.

[c] If a party has been taken by surprise by evidence introduced, and shows upon the motion for a new trial that he was not negligent in being so taken by surprise, and, likewise, shows prima facie ability to meet and refute the evidence which so took him by surprise, a new trial should be awarded—the evidence in question being vital to the issues. *Mitchell v. [a] Misled by Assurances.—Where a party tells his adversary that certain matters in issue by the pleadings will not be controverted, the former has a right to rely upon such assurance, and if, contrary to such understanding, testimony is prejudicially introduced, a new trial may be properly awarded. *Haynes v. aver surprise, since if an unfair trial is caused thereby the verdict should be set aside.

(B.) WITHIN THE ISSUES.—A party generally has no right to claim surprise at evidence clearly within the issues,⁹⁹ even though such testimony be false.¹ Litigants are presumed to know what evidence may be given under the issues, and should be prepared to meet it,² and where the pleading discloses the facts which the evidence tends to prove, one cannot claim surprise at evidence within such lines.³ In a criminal case, defendant cannot be said to be surprised at any proper evidence introduced by the state in support of the specific charge against him.⁴

petent or irrelevant evidence, but surprise may result when testimony admitted in a former trial, is rejected.⁷

(D.) EVIDENCE NOT INTRODUCED.—Where a party, or his counsel, refrains from introducing evidence, he is not usually entitled to a new trial for the purpose of presenting it.⁸ Thus where evidence was not introduced because the complainant relied upon another theory of the case,⁹ or because counsel thought it unnecessary,¹⁰ is no excuse.

Moreover, failure to cross-examine a witness when there was opportunity to do so, is not ground for a new trial.¹¹ Where, however, material evidence was not introduced because the party was misled by the stipulations or agreements,¹² or conduct¹³ of the adverse party, or where by mistake, or error, of the court it was ruled unnecessary,¹⁴ a new trial should be granted.

[a] Reliance Upon Supreme Court Ruling.—(1) A party who submits his case without introducing certain evidence, relying upon a decision of the supreme court that the evidence was unnecessary, and where, after submission, the supreme court changes its de-

A mere expression of opinion on the part of the judge that evidence is not necessary, is not, however, sufficient ground.¹⁵ Surprise, as a ground for a new trial, cannot be predicated upon the failure of the opposite party to offer certain evidence,¹⁶ and it is not legal surprise that on a second trial evidence was introduced that was not presented on a former trial, especially where such evidence was merely corroborative.¹⁷

(E.) INSUFFICIENT EVIDENCE. — That the evidence presented was held insufficient does not warrant a new trial on the ground of surprise.¹⁸ Where, however, through accident or misfortune, a party having a meritorious cause of action or defense has failed in his proof, a new trial may be granted.¹⁹

1. Rulings. — It is the general rule that a party cannot plead surprise upon a correct ruling on a matter of law,²⁰ including instructions,²¹ because, as previously stated, surprise cannot, as a rule, be cision which vitally affects the case and requires the evidence previously held unnecessary, which evidence the complaining party possessed, a new trial will be granted. Allen v. Chambers, 18 Wash. 341, 51 Pac. 478. (2) Reliance of counsel upon a dictum of the supreme court of the United States, whereby counsel did not submit certain evidence because therein said to be unnecessary, is, likewise, held sufficient cause for a new trial. Bowden v. Morris, 1 Hughes 378, 3 Fed. Cas. No. 1,715.

[a] Mere Suggestions of the Court. The fact that a judge presiding at a trial gives out some expression of opinion for the guidance of counsel during the progress of the case, and suggests the shortening or condensing of the testimony to be given does not constitute a denial of any right to offer evidence, and is not error. *Hageman v. [a] Misled by Court.—Where, before argument, counsel for plaintiff was told by the court that the instructions upon the measure of damages would be to a certain effect, and counsel, relying thereon, argued his case upon the assumption that the instructions predicated upon matters of law.²² Circumstances may, however, be such that the surprise occasioned by the court's ruling will justify granting a new trial.²³

m. Verdict.—It is seldom that surprise at the verdict can be considered as a cause for a new trial,²⁴ although it has been said that if, through misapprehension, a verdict be found either against the law of the case or the weight of testimony, the injury can be remedied by a new trial.²⁵

n. Matters Occurring After Trial.—(I.) Generally.—It has been said that surprise arising after the verdict is not ground for a new trial.²⁶ However, it is recognized, in some cases, that there may be accidents or misfortunes in connection with the preparation of a case for review that may justify a new trial.²⁷ New trials have been would be given as indicated, but the court failed so to charge, but charged differently, and correctly, yet by reason of the circumstances the plaintiff by the surprise was prevented from having a fair trial, a new trial was granted. Nelson v. Gjestrum, 118 Minn. 284, 136 N. W. 858.

22. See supra, II, E, 1, d.

[a] Surprise that follows a ruling on a motion for a nonsuit is not legal "surprise" that warrants a new trial, or even a continuance. Vulcan Iron Works v. Burrell Const. Co., 39 Wash. 319, 81 Pac. 836. Compare Pope v. Mooney, 40 Mo. App. 104; People v. Barnes, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 492.

23. See supra, II, E, 2, k, (VIII), (A) and (C).

[a] Mistaken Construction of Statute and Decisions.—Though plaintiff was properly nonsuited, yet the court may grant a new trial where it appears that counsel had excusably given a mistaken construction to a statute governing the case and the decisions of the court thereupon. See Pope v. Mooney, 40 Mo. 104; People v. Barnes, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 492.

[b] Where counsel mistook the effect of a ruling, understanding that it disposed of his case and said so, and the complaint was in consequence dismissed, a new trial was granted upon the ground of surprise. Breakstone v. Buffalo Foundry & Mach. Co., 79 Misc. 496, 141 N. Y. Supp. 159.

[a] Surprise at Result.—Mere surprise at the result of a trial cannot entitle the party so surprised to a new trial. Lane v. Brown, 22 Ind. 239.

[b] Agreed Verdict Not Expressing Real Agreement.—Where the parties agreed to a verdict but the legal effect of the verdict as taken failed, by mistake, to carry out their intention, the verdict will be set aside. Moreover, a motion to set aside a verdict and reinstate the case, is equivalent to a motion for a new trial, and is a proper remedy for a mistake in the verdict. Lucas v. Lucas, 30 Ga. 191, 76 Am. Dec. 642.

(II.) Loss of Records, Files, or Stenographer's Notes.—The mere loss of a material part of the records or files in the case, or the court stenographer's notes of the evidence and proceedings, does not require a new trial, at least where no effort has been made to make a substitution or otherwise supply the deficiency in the manner provided by law.³¹ Where, however, without fault of the moving party, such files, records, or notes have been lost, to prevent injustice resulting from inability to prepare and present the case for review, a new trial may be granted.³²

F. VERDICT OR FINDING CONTRARY TO LAW. — 1. In General. — Both at common law and under the statutes, another of the causes for a new trial is that the verdict is contrary to law,³³ and, it has been held, notwithstanding that the jury may be judges both of the law and of the facts,³⁴ or that there have been successive and concurrent verdicts.³⁵ By the phrase, "contrary to law," it is not meant that a

[a] Judgment Distinguished From Verdict.—That a judgment is against the law is not ground for a motion for a new trial. The verdict or other decision of fact may be set aside, and a new trial granted, if such verdict or decision of fact be against the law; that is, if an error of law be committed resulting in an erroneous decision of fact. Martin v. Matfield, 49 Cal. 42, 44.

[a] Under the California statute, (1) it is held that the specified ground for a new trial that the decision is "against law" refers to a situation furnishing a reason for a re-examination of an issue of fact. In re Keating's Estate, 162 Cal. 406, 122 Pac. 1079; Kaiser v. Dalto, 140 Cal. 167, 73 Pac. 828. (2) Where all the issues of fact raised by the pleadings, are found upon by the court, and the findings are correct, an erroneous judgment drawn from those facts cannot be corrected by means of a motion for a new trial. Swift v. Occidental Mining & Petroleum Co., 141 Cal. 161, 70 Pac. 470; Thompson v. Los Angeles, 125 Cal. 270, 57 Pac. 1015; Brison v. Brison, 90 Cal. 323, 27 Pac. 186; Martin v. Matfield, 49 Cal. 42, 45. (3) "It was held in Knight v. Roche, 56 Cal. 17, that, where the court below fails to find upon a material issue raised by the pleadings, that the decision is 'against law,' and may be reviewed upon a motion for a new trial, for the alleged reason that the question raised involves a re-examination of an issue of fact. Whether the reasoning of that case would commend itself to us, were the question an open one, need not now be considered. It is sufficient to say that the question is one of practice, and has been so long followed and acquiesced in that we must regard it as settled. (Brown v. Burbank, 59 Cal. 535; Soto v. The Occidental Mining, etc. Co., supra, to the effect that the failure to find upon an issue made by the pleadings cannot be considered on an appeal from the judgment, was obiter dicta, was inadvertently made, and is not the law. Kaiser v. Dalto, 140 Cal. 167, 73 Pac. 828.

[b] Does Not Include Other Distinct Grounds.—"The statute in authorizing a new trial on the ground that the verdict 'is against law,' evidently does not intend to include in that phrase all or any of the other distinct and separate grounds of the motion, which are specified in the Act." *Brumagin v. based on insufficient evidence to sustain it;⁴⁴ or where the verdict has been reached by improper means,⁴⁵ the verdict is manifestly against the law of the case. Moreover, where a special verdict fails to find facts which ought to have been found,⁴⁶ or where the plaintiff recovers on a different cause of action from that set out in the declaration,⁴⁷ the verdict is contrary to law.

It is also said that a verdict is contrary to law where the verdict is prejudicially affected by an error occurring at the trial,⁴⁸ or where it has been influenced by a misdirection of the court.⁴⁹ The phrase clearly does not include misconduct on the part of the district attorney.⁵⁰ in this connection means the "law" as actually declared or given by the court, and and not necessarily the law as it really is and which should have been given.⁵² In other words, even though the instructions be wrong, and such as may be held error by a reviewing court, nevertheless the jury is bound to follow them for the purposes of its verdict.⁵³ Consequently, in accord with this view, the order of the trial court granting a new trial will be affirmed without considering the correctness of the instructions.⁵⁴ It is frequently held, however, that if the instructions are erroneous, and the verdict is correct as to the law and evidence, a new trial need not be granted.⁵⁵

[a] Reason for the Rule.—The reasons for this holding are well stated in Dent v. Bryce, 16 S. C. 1, 14. The court said: "It needs no authority, then, to say that the jury is bound to take the law from the court. This principle applies in every class of cases except one not necessary now to be considered. And when the law is announced by the court, it is the law of the case until overruled by a higher authority. It follows, then, that a verdict in direct conflict with the law of the court is a verdict against the law, and will in all cases be vacated in the first instance, either sua sponte by the judge or on motion of the aggrieved party. Any other doctrine would lead to the utmost confusion. If the jury could question the charge of the judge, the result would be that in every case the whole case, both law and facts, would go to the jury under the hope that, whatever might be the charge of the judge at the time, he could be satisfied afterward that he was in error."

That the jury misapprehended, or misunderstood, the instructions is usually held no ground for a new trial.⁵⁶

3. Exceptions.—Where a verdict or a decision is alleged to be contrary to law on the ground that error was committed during the trial, it must appear that due exception was taken to the alleged error, else a new trial will be refused.⁵⁷ In case, however, it is alleged that the verdict is contrary to law as being against the evidence, a new trial may be granted although no exceptions were taken at the trial,⁵⁸ and, according to some decisions, although no motion for a nonsuit or for a directed verdict was made.⁵⁹

G. VERDICT OR FINDING CONTRARY TO EVIDENCE.—1. In General.

a. Includes What.—The phrase “verdict contrary to evidence” is a broad one, including, for the purposes of new trial, such other phrases as “verdict contrary to weight of evidence,” verdict rendered upon “insufficient evidence,” and verdicts for “excessive” or “inadequate” damages clearly showing “mistake, passion, or prejudice” on the part of the jury.⁶⁰ Verdicts contrary to evidence, or facts, are technically, readily distinguishable from verdicts contrary to law,⁶¹ although, in connection with “insufficient evidence” there may be an insufficiency in point of law as well as insufficiency in point of fact.⁶²

The general rule under such circumstances is, that the verdict, once found, shall stand; the setting it aside is the exception and ought to be an exception of rare and almost singular recurrence." [a] Duty of the Court.—The matter of setting aside a verdict on the ground that it was against the evidence was considered by the court in Wendell v. Safford, 12 N. H. 171, a leading case upon this subject, where it was said: "Where the verdict is decidedly against the weight of evidence, so that it is apparent that the jury must have misunderstood or totally disregarded the instructions of the court thereon, or must have neglected to consider the facts and overlooked prominent and essential points in the evidence, where it is such a verdict that twelve honest and intelligent men would not have returned it, it is the duty of the court to set it aside."

2. Special Verdict.—In case of a special verdict, the findings must be supported by evidence, or else they will be set aside and a new trial ordered.⁶⁹ Likewise, when a special verdict is insufficient or palpably contradictory to the evidence, it must be set aside.⁷⁰ Also, where some of the findings are without evidence, or are insufficiently supported by the evidence,⁷¹ or the special findings are inconsistent,⁷² or are in conflict with the general verdict,⁷³ or where a special finding on a material issue is in direct opposition to the evidence,⁷⁴ a new trial will be granted.

Likewise, where the findings of a referee are contrary to the evidence,⁷⁷ or, as said in some of the cases, "clearly against the evidence,"⁷⁸ or against the weight of the evidence,⁷⁹ a new trial is the proper remedy.

The same rule applies where the findings do not embrace all the issues,⁸⁰ or are indefinite.⁸¹ If, however, the findings of a referee can be supported upon any reasonable view of the evidence, they should stand.⁸²

be the result of passion or prejudice, it is its duty to grant a new trial.⁸⁵

5. Limitations of the Rule.—a. Weight of Evidence.—(I.) In General—A new trial should not be granted for a mere preponderance of evidence against the verdict, especially where there is a conflict in the evidence,⁸⁶ or where the evidence is such as to render the issue doubtful, even though the verdict is against the apparent weight of

[a] In the discharge of this duty, it is the province of the court, either before or after the verdict, to decide whether the plaintiff has given enough evidence to support or justify the verdict. Not whether on all the evidence the preponderating weight is in his favor. That is the business of the jury. But conceding to all the evidence offered the greatest probative force which, according to the law of evidence, it is fairly entitled to, is it sufficient to justify a verdict? If it does not, then it is the duty of the court, after a verdict, to set it aside and grant a new trial." Pleasants v. Fant, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 121, 22 L. ed. 780, quoted in *Pringle v. [b] Law Requires It.—"Although by the theory of our system the jury are the proper and exclusive triers of the facts, yet the law requires the circuit judge, who is presumed to have more practice and skill in the investigation of truth, to set aside their verdicts whenever, in his opinion, they have disregarded or misconceived the force of the proof, that a new trial may be had." *Tate v. the evidence.⁸⁷ Verdicts are not to be set aside merely because the court differs in opinion with the jury as to the merits of the case, and would, as a juror, have reached a different conclusion upon the facts,⁸⁸ since if the evidence be such as would justify the jury, acting as reasonable men, in returning the verdict in question, the verdict ought to be sustained.⁸⁹ In a criminal case, however, where all the evidence is such as to suspend the judicial mind in serious doubt as to the guilt of the accused, a new trial should be granted.⁹⁰

[a] The Proper Inquiry.—The inquiry in such cases is not whether the judge acting as a juror would or would not have come to the conclusion returned by the jury in their verdict, but whether a reasonable man charged with finding facts from the evidence, under the court's instruction as to the law applicable to the case, could come to that result. *Lucier v. [b] Directing a Verdict.—(1) It has been said that although the court might have directed a contrary verdict, yet such fact does not entitle the defeated party to a new trial. Schlesinger v. Malloy, 1 City Ct. R. (N. Y.) 458. (2) It has also been held that if there is sufficient evidence to require the submission of a case to the jury, it is error to set aside the verdict. See Hensley v. Davidson Bros. Co., 135 Iowa 106, 112 N. W. 227. (3) The weight of authority, however, holds that although the trial court would not have been justified in directing a verdict, since there was some evidence to support it, yet the preponderance of the evidence against a verdict may be so great that a new trial should be granted. The direction of a verdict is conclusive. It prevents a trial of any issue of fact to a jury. The granting of a new trial leaves the case still open. U. S.—Felton v. Spiro, 78 Fed. 576, 24 C. (II.) Conflicting Evidence. — As a general rule, a new trial will not be granted on the ground of the insufficiency of the evidence, when the evidence is conflicting,⁹¹ or where the evidence tends to support the views of each party.⁹² The jury is presumed to consider and settle the conflict of testimony;⁹³ but if it is manifest that the jury have abused their trust,⁹⁴ or that the verdict is so unreasonable as to show mistake, prejudice, or passion,⁹⁵ a new trial should be awarded.

Moreover, the fact that the evidence is conflicting will not prevent a new trial where injustice would otherwise be done,⁹⁶ and even where the evidence is conflicting, the parties, upon motion for a new trial, are entitled to the independent judgment of the court upon the question

(2) This rule applied, however, only when the evidence was conflicting and so contradictory that one might well doubt. See Baker v. Briggs, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 122, 19 Am. Dec. 311. (3) It never applied to a case where the weight of testimony on one side was entirely disregarded, and counterbalanced by the most feeble evidence, or no evidence in effect, on the other. Johnson v. of sufficient evidence.⁹⁷ Further, despite its conflict, if, upon weighing the evidence, the court finds the verdict against its weight, it is the court's duty to grant a new trial,⁹⁸ and a verdict is clearly or manifestly against the evidence, or the weight of the evidence, when the verdict is such as upon the whole of the evidence the jury could not reasonably find.⁹⁹ The weight of evidence is, however, not to be determined by the number of witnesses on each side. Witnesses are to be weighed not counted. Numerical superiority is not the test.¹

(III.) Circumstantial Evidence.—The fact that the evidence was circumstantial is not a ground for setting aside a verdict.² In criminal cases, where the evidence though circumstantial tends strongly to establish the guilt of the defendant, a new trial will not be granted;³

Soule, 145 Cal. 96, 78 Pac. 337; Byxbee v. Dewey, 128 Cal. 322, 60 Pac. 847; Jones v. Campbell, 11 Idaho 752, 84 Pac. 510.

[a] Where, however, the evidence is (1) circumstantial and does not exclude every other reasonable hypothesis save that of the guilt of the ac-

and the mere fact that the court might have reached a different conclusion upon the evidence, is no ground for a new trial.⁴

(IV.) Credibility of Witnesses.—A new trial should not be granted merely for the reason that the court does not agree with the jury as to the credibility of witnesses.⁵ It is the peculiar province of the jury to pass upon the credibility of witnesses,⁶ and a new trial should not be awarded on such an issue unless it appears that the jury have acted arbitrarily.⁷

cused, a new trial will be granted on the ground that the verdict is contrary to the evidence. Watson v. State, 118 Ga. 66, 44 S. E. 803. (2) Moreover, circumstantial evidence which is consistent with the guilt of the accused, but not inconsistent with a reasonable hypothesis of his innocence, and insufficient to establish beyond a reasonable doubt, in a case of larceny, an intent to steal, furnishes ground for which a new trial should be granted. *Wilson v. [a] But where positive and direct testimony is undisputed and uncontradicted, and there is no improbability or inconsistency apparent in it, the jury should believe it, for the purpose of the suit, and it is the duty of a court to set aside a verdict founded upon a disbelief of such clear and uncontradicted evidence. *Helena Consol. [a] De Minimis.—Where the amount in litigation is trivial, the rule de minimis non curat lex is applied, and a new trial will be refused. The maxim seems to be confined, however, to cases in which the motion is made on the ground that the verdict is against the evidence, because where the verdict is the result of an erroneous ruling or direction of the judge, a new trial will be granted however small the amount in question. *United States v. brought to try a question of permanent right, the fact that the plaintiff is entitled also to nominal damages will not affect the right to a new trial.¹¹

(VI.) Different Issues or Parties. — A general verdict covering two or more issues, some of which are sufficiently supported by the evidence, but others not, should be set aside.¹² The same rule applies to a general verdict against two or more parties, where the verdict as to some of the parties is against the evidence.¹³ Where, however, there are several counts in an action,¹⁴ or several defenses,¹⁵ if the evidence is sufficient to maintain any one of them, the verdict should stand.

(VII.) Must Work Injury. — It does not necessarily follow that a new trial must always be granted even if the verdict be contrary to evidence, since it is possible that the verdict may still be on the side of the real justice and equity of the case.¹⁶ Moreover, courts are reluctant to grant a new trial merely on the ground that the verdict is contrary to evidence, and it must appear that injustice has been done, and that there is a probability it will be remedied upon a second trial.¹⁷

b. Insufficient Evidence. — (I.) No Evidence. — When there is no evidence to support a verdict, a new trial will be granted,¹⁸ as often

izes the verdict, a motion for a new trial on the ground of the insufficiency of the evidence is properly denied,²⁵ though on the other hand, the evidence may be insufficient although there was some evidence to support the verdict.²⁶

(III.) Insufficient in Law or Fact.—There has been some confusion in the phrase "insufficient evidence" as applied to new trials, some cases holding that the term applied only to evidence insufficient in law, since as to evidence sufficient in fact the jury was the exclusive judge.²⁷ On the other hand, it is held, by weight of authority, that

[b] Insufficient evidence means a verdict for a party upon evidence insufficient to establish his right to recover, and which therefore ought not to stand. A party cannot move to set aside a verdict in his own favor, on the ground that the evidence is insufficient to sustain it. Moore v. Wood, 19 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 405.

[d] "Insufficient evidence" as used in the statute, means testimony which does not support and clearly warrant a verdict in the case. Where plaintiff, if entitled to recover at all, was clearly entitled to a larger amount than allowed by the jury, a verdict may be set aside for insufficient evidence. Emmons v. Sheldon, 26 Wis. 648, 649.

[a] Insufficiency in Law and in Fact.—In Stewart v. Elliott, 2 Mackey (D. C.) 307, 315, the court said: "By a loose use of language it may be said that a verdict 'contrary to the evidence' or 'against the weight of evidence' was rendered upon 'insufficient evidence'; and, on the other hand, that a verdict upon insufficient evidence is one contrary to or against the weight of evidence. But we are dealing with legal expressions in their technical meaning; and it is familiar to all lawyers that evidence offered to a jury in a cause has a twofold sufficiency, i. e., the term applies equally to insufficiency in point of law and to insufficiency in point of fact.²⁸

c. Excessive or Inadequate Verdicts.—(I.) In General.—That the jury returned a verdict for either an excessive or an inadequate amount, may, as a general proposition, where there is a legal measure of damages, be urged as a ground for a new trial.²⁹ Whether a new trial upon this ground should be granted or refused, rests in the sound judicial discretion of the court.³⁰ That the court, as a juror, would have given more or less is not, however, the criterion;³¹ neither is the sufficiency in law and sufficiency in fact; that of its sufficiency in law the court is the exclusive judge; its sufficiency in fact is a question exclusively for the jury."

28. Inland & Seaboard Coasting Co. v. Hall, 124 U. S. 121, 8 Sup. Ct. 397, 31 L. ed. 369; Metropolitan R. Co. v. Moore, 121 U. S. 558, 7 Sup. Ct. 1334, 30 L. ed. 1022; Gunn v. Union R. Co., 27 R. I. 320, 62 Atl. 118, 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 362.

[a] Insufficient in Law.—Strictly speaking, evidence is said to be insufficient in law only in those cases where there is a total absence of such proof, either as to its quantity or kind, as, in the particular case, some rule of law requires as essential. "Such, for instance would be the case where a fact was attested by only one witness, when the law required two; or when the alleged agreement was proved to be verbal, when the law required it to be in writing. In such cases a verdict might be said to be against the law, because founded on insufficient evidence." Metropolitan R. Co. v. Moore, 121 U. S. 558, 7 Sup. Ct. 1334, 30 L. ed. 1022.

[b] Insufficiency in Point of Fact. Insufficiency in point of fact is evidence so slight, though competent in law, that a verdict may be plainly unjust. In this sense insufficiency of evidence would be equivalent to contrary to evidence, or against the weight of evidence. "Insufficiency in point of fact may exist in cases where there is no insufficiency in point of law; that is, there may be some evidence to sustain every element of the case, competent both in quantity and quality in law to sustain it, and yet it may be met by countervailing proof so potent as to leave no reasonable doubt of the opposing conclusion. . . . So, upon the whole evidence in the case the testimony in support of the cause of action, or of the defense, may be so slight, although competent in law, or the preponderance against it may be so convincing, that a verdict may be seen to be plainly unreasonable and unjust." Metropolitan R. Co. v. Moore, 121 U. S. 558, 7 Sup. Ct. 1334, 30 L. ed. 1022.

fact that by a slight preponderance of the evidence the verdict appears to be a little too high or too low;³² but the verdict must be unreasonable or unjust, or fail to do substantial justice.³³ In the absence of a legal measure of damages, or where the damages are unliquidated, the verdict will seldom be disturbed,³⁴ since in such cases a new trial is not ordinarily grantable merely for excessive or inadequate damages, but only where it appears probable that the verdict was the result of mistake, passion, or prejudice on the part of the jury.³⁵

It is not ground for a new trial that the jury failed to assess merely nominal damages where the right of recovery was purely technical,³⁶ and a failure on the jury's part to allow interest may not be sufficient ground.³⁷ The assessing of damages, however, not warranted

(II.) Error in Assessment. — In some states, the statutes provide that a new trial may be granted for "Error in the assessment of the amount of recovery, whether too large or too small, where the action is upon a contract, or for the injury or detention of property."³⁹ It is obvious that a provision of this sort applies only to cases where there are definite rules of law governing the measure of damages. Personal injury cases are not included. Where a legal measure of damages applies, errors in verdicts, whether too large or too small, would fall under this statutory ground.⁴⁰

(III.) Excessive Damages. — (A.) IN GENERAL. — Where damages are manifestly excessive or unreasonable, a new trial will be awarded,⁴¹

sary since the error could be corrected by the court. Reynolds v. Powers (Ky.), 29 S. W. 299; Cooke v. Clark's Committee, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 316, 51 S. W. 316; Dayton v. Gardner, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 302, 40 S. W. 779.

[a] Indiana Statute.—Under the Indiana statute providing for new trials on various grounds, one being "error in the assessment of the amount of recovery," and another being "that the damages are excessive," it is held that the former ground, namely, "error in assessment," applies to actions in contract, while the latter ground, namely, that excessive damages were awarded, is not applicable in any action, save for tort. *Western Assur. [a] Excessive Damages Through Misapprehension of Permanency of Injuries.—In an action for personal damages for personal injuries growing out of a trolley accident, the defendant sought a new trial on the ground of excessive damages. If the disability resulting from the damages was liable to be permanent the damages would not be regarded as so excessive as to warrant an interference with the verdict. But it appearing that the trial was brought on so soon after a surgical operation on the patient that a sufficient time had not elapsed to enable the physicians to determine whether the operation would result in her complete or partial recovery—a result which they regarded however, as highly probable—it was held that, in the exercise of its sound discretion it became the duty of the reviewing court to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial, since it was a case where by reason of mistake or surprise at the trial justice had not been done by the verdict. Searles v. Elizabeth, P. & C. J. Ry. Co., 70 N. J. L. 388, 57 Atl. 134.

dicts against the evidence.⁴⁴ Moreover, in a number of states, it is expressly provided by statute that a new trial will be granted "for excessive damages appearing to have been given under the influence of passion or prejudice."⁴⁵ That the verdict is greater than the court, if acting as a juror, would have given is not sufficient ground for setting it aside,⁴⁶ and to warrant a conclusion that the damages are the fruit of passion and prejudice, the award must be, according to various judicial expressions, shocking to the sense of justice,⁴⁷

[a] The terms of the statute are controlling, and a verdict will not be set aside merely because it is, perhaps, excessive, in the absence of a showing that it is so grossly excessive as to indicate that it was given under the influence of passion or prejudice. Louisville & I. R. Co. v. Speckman, 169 Ky. 385, 183 S. W. 915. See also Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Heckman, 45 Colo. 470, 101 Pac. 976, 21 Am. Neg. Rep. 481; *Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. [b] In Minnesota, it is only cases in which the damages cannot be computed by mathematical computation, are not susceptible to proof by opinion evidence, and are within the discretion of the jury, that come within such a provision. Other cases, whether sounding in tort or contract come under the section of the statute providing for new trial where the verdict is not justified by the evidence or is contrary to law. Mohr v. Williams, 95 Minn. 261, 104 N. W. 12, 111 Am. St. Rep. 462, 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 439, 5 Am. & Eng. Ann. Cas. 303.

(B.) PUNITIVE DAMAGES. — Where exemplary, or punitive, damages are properly claimed, a motion for a new trial on account of an excessive verdict is not often available,⁵¹ but a verdict for excessive punitive damages may be set aside where such verdict is manifestly against the weight of the evidence,⁵² or where the court is satisfied the jury abused its discretion,⁵³ or when influenced by passion or prejudice.⁵⁴

(C.) ACTIONS ON CONTRACT. — In contract actions there are fixed standards of damages, and an excessive verdict in such actions may be made the ground for a new trial where it clearly appears that the verdict is greater than the evidence warrants.⁵⁵

[a] No Nice Balancing.—Damages in such cases ought not to be weighed in a nice balance, but must be such as appear at first blush to be outrageous and indicate passion or partiality in the jury. Tidd's Pr., vol. II, p. 909.

[b] Flagrantly Outrageous.—Excessive damages, sufficient to authorize a new trial, are those which "are so enormous as to show that the jury were under some improper influence, or were led astray by the violence or prejudice of passion. It is not enough that the judge may think he would not have given so much if he had been one of the jury. He ought to see clearly that the damages are flagrantly outrageous and that the verdict cannot be just, before he will, on that ground, grant a new trial; otherwise, the verdict of the jury must, in all cases, depend on the opinion of the judge and the constitutional trial by jury will be prostrated." (D.) ACTIONS IN TORT.—(1.) In General.—Although there is no fixed standard for determining damages in many tort actions, the courts will grant new trials in such actions where it appears that the amount of the verdict is so unreasonable that it could have been rendered only through prejudice or corruption.⁵⁶

(2.) Personal Injuries.—In personal injury cases, the amount of damages does not depend upon computation, and, as a rule, the amount to be recovered in such cases rests largely in the discretion of the jury.⁵⁷ Yet, if in such actions it appears that verdicts are rendered
